New Testament Theology, At the Brigham Young Academy Provo—University and Other Notes.

This is a branch of the general theology which is devoted specially to the study of the New Testament under the following sections:—

I. The history of the text and respective books of the New Testament.

II. The distinctive doctrines of New Testament teaching.

III. Exegesis, exposition and interpretation of the New Testament.

IV. Modern criticism and the so-called criticisms of modern schools on the genuineness and authenticity of the New Testament.

There are sixty five students in the class. The class meets twice a week—Monday and Wednesday.

We approach our study of the New Testament as an integral fourth of the Bible, which we as Latter-day Saints, believe to be "The Word of God, as far as it is correctly translated;" and we are devoutly thankful to live in the light and freedom of this conviction. It is because the spirit of revelation has been restored and the keys of Divine truth have been given once more into the hands of living teachers, prophets and apostles, that we can enter the temple of inspiration without "let" or hindrance from the errors and traditions of tradition. Under the guidance of the sure word of living prophecy, we investigate the matchless treasures of the New Testament record.

We first of all endeavor to make ourselves acquainted with the history of the places and persons mentioned in the New Testament, availing ourselves of the accumulative evidence of modern researches and explorations and which are daily strengthening the proof of the Divinity of the New Testament Scriptures.

In illustration—we read the words of Christ—"The city of the Great King," and we linger to take a view of Jerusalem. One of the students will take this city as his theme—Jerusalem—the [illegible] city of all history, yea, the very back-bone of chronology—a city continuously inhabited for a period of three thousand years. So that if our young men and maidens of this generation join not in the song of Hosanna to the Son of David and they historically enter Jerusalem, the very stones of its streets and the ruins of its Temple would burst forth in a song of irresistible testimony to the truth of the Gospel.

The literature of Greece, which gave up like incense from that land of temples and heroic deeds has not a tithe of the influence of the New Testament; and for the reason that here alone stands the unique personality Jesus Christ, whose divinity and whose spotless humanity illumine every page. To study His life, His work and His distinctive teaching, we hold to be a study all supreme—the one basic study—on which alone can rise a perfect type of highest culture.

In the work of Exegesis and general exposition, our aim is to help the students to an accurate understanding of the text of the New Testament both by references to the original Greek and by the results of the most ripened scholarship as applied to Biblical criticism.

As with the Old, so with the New Testament, "We believe it to be the word of God as far as it is correctly translated." Accordingly we are not slaves to the so-called "Plenary inspiration" of either the "revised" or authorized version. We thank our young prophet Joseph for his courage in making the statement, "As far as it is correctly translated." It is highly gratifying to a Latter-day Saint to know that the best scholarship of the old and the new world as exercised in the Anglican and American revision committees, has abundantly proved the truth of what the Prophet Joseph said years before it was possible to get the sanction of Christendom for the appointment of a revision committee. Now there is not a scholar in either Europe or America, but what acknowledges that King James's edition was not "correctly translated." But beyond this we endeavor to lead the students to the light and warmth that [illegible] upon the altar of the text. The spirit of the New Testament is the life-giving spirit of the Gospel and we fully recognize the truth that it is an absolute necessity that for the right interpretation of the language, there must be a measure of the same inspiration as in the first days of Gospel experience.

In the ministry of Christ and His apostles the letter and the spirit were one; the broad result of the apostasy was to separate the two, so that there might be a form of Godliness after the power thereof had been taken away.

The keys of Divine knowledge are restored, and, as taught to Peter, revelation is the solid rock on which the Church of Jesus Christ is built. With this and in this light we approach the Temple of Holy Scripture and though we welcome every aid of scholarship, ancient and modern—we do not rest upon this as the interpretive means to get at the life of gladdening joy of the Gospel. We know too well that in the sphere of scholarship there endlessly conflicting opinions concerning the text of the New Testament, as well also in respect to the theological and ethical bearings of its teachings.

Those who have grown with growing years of rich experience in the live power of the Gospel are safe from the attacks of adverse criticism; but it is wise to fortify our youth, to encourage their study of the Divine Word that they may the better be able to give a rational account of the hope that is in them as heirs of the promises of God.

Utah University Notes.

The Delta Phi society announces a ball for the evening preceding Thanksgiving day.

The department of biology has acquired possession of a collection of large living rattle-snakes, eight in all.

The University Faculty has under consideration the establishment of an extended course of popular lectures to commence in the near future.

The grounds of the University athletic association are in an excellent condition, and the opportunities for physical training so afforded are greatly appreciated by the students.

Mr. R. V. Smith a senior student of the University is cloud observer. This gentleman holds credentials of efficiency through examinations passed under the direction of the National Weather Bureau.

The attendance at the University is constantly increasing, [illegible] at the advanced stage of the term have to pass examinations on all that [illegible] requirements that the efficiency of the candidates to enter upon the present work may be determined.

A well equipped meteorological station has been established in connection with the department of physical science. An observation plant has been set up on the roof of the laboratory of Deseret Museum building, and a number of the most improved self-registering and recording instruments are in operation. Maximum and minimum thermometers, thermographs, barometers, barographs, rain gauges, hygrometers, anemometers, etc., are in active service. The voluntary observers [illegible] of the United States weather bureau in this city and all necessary [illegible] are [illegible]. The observations taken at the University station are to be regularly forwarded to Washington.

The laboratory classes in botany have been investigating of late a couple of vegetable curiosities of rather monstrous form, procured in or near Salt Lake City. A [illegible] blossom was found, with nearly all the ray flowers modified so as to form [illegible] of the [illegible]. The disk flowers were [illegible], and with a single exception [illegible] of stamens and pistils. Of the ray flowers that were developed into stems each bearing a perfect flower half as large as the normal blossom. The second monster growth referred to consists of an abnormal ear of corn, looking indeed like a collection of ears, twelve in all. These grew at the top of the corn stalk where the tassels usually appears.

During the regularly appointed laboratory hours, the University buildings are veritable work shops, in which hand and muscle as well as brain are called into service. The chemical and physical laboratories, the mineralogical room, the museum of geology, the laboratory of zoology are all alive with earnest workers, numbering in some branches a hundred in a single course. Most of the practical work is appointed for the afternoon, at which time also the Training School of Teachers, and the workshops of the school for the deaf are all in active service. The last named school has an admirably equipped manual training department in which thorough and systematic instruction is given in carpentry, cabinet-making, type setting, book [illegible] and [illegible] printing and shoemaking.

A City High School.

Just now the question of erecting a city high school building is being discussed with a good deal of earnestness by the members of the board of education. That such a structure will have to be provided soon is certain. The Clayton building now in use for that purpose is wholly inadequate. In order to accommodate the pupils who graduated from the city schools last year it has been found necessary to rent a couple of store rooms on Richards street and fit them up for temporary work. Next year there will be another large exodus of students from the grades who will graduate to the high school. Something of course will be done for them but what that something will be is entirely problematical at this time. That a high school building is one of the imperative needs of the city is apparent to every one familiar with educational work. That such a building should be modern and complete in all of its appointments is also true. It will cost a considerable sum of money. Informal estimates have been made ranging from [illegible] to [illegible]. This is exclusive of a site.

Miscellaneous.

Mrs. Hubbard delivered an interesting and instructive address before the Woman's club yesterday on "Early American Artists."

Laurence Gronlund, the collectivist will address the members of the University club again this evening. Last night he participated in a joint debate with N. B. Dresser, the Populist, at the Board of Labor Hall.

Mrs. Dr. Mary J. Safford, of Sioux City, Iowa, delivered a lecture to a [illegible] at Unity Hall last night. The lady's subject was, "The Man Who Thinks." She will speak in the same hall again [illegible].

Croup.

Croup is a terror to young mothers. To post them concerning the first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The first indication of croup is hoarseness. In a child who is subject to croup it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the rough cough has appeared it will prevent the attack. It has never been known to fail.

Geo. W. Jenkins, editor of the Santa Maria Times, Cal., in speaking of the various remedies of children said: "When my children have croup there is only one remedy me thinks that I ever use, and that is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It possesses some medical properties that relieve the little sufferers immediately. It is, in my opinion, the best cough medicine in the market." If this remedy is freely given as soon as the croupy cough appears it will prevent the attack. It is an ideal remedy for whooping cough. There is no danger in giving it to children, as it contains nothing injurious.
