NEWS OF THE WEST.

A Large Fortune Proves to Be a Young Man's Complete Ruin.

IMPORTANT LAND TITLE SUIT.

A Valuable Railroad Concession—A Prospector Served With a Huge Door Key.

Deer Skin now have applied for work from the Uintah (Utah) reservation.

Homesteaders in Indian Territory report Cherokee, says the Los Angeles Express.

The San Francisco police have determined to wage war upon all vagrant minors.

In El Cerro, in Oroville, Cal., incendiaries, whose aims were best unknown at midnight Monday, were interrupted by a fusillade from a shotgun at 2 a.m., which prevented the original from finishing his century.

Chas. Chinn, a Chinese lottery speculator at Santa Rosa, Cal., was arrested under the new act of selling the assessable waters, and placed guilty to the charge of selling money orders. He appealed, and with the privilege of only days to pay an alternative.

Spinals of Cinnamon, comprising several hundred, have been passing through Modesto, Stanislaus county, Cal., during the last two weeks on their way to Wood Bar Reservation, where they expect to find an only cinnamon bear in the United States.

The mail coach which was lost in the snow between Lower Cloverdale and Ukiah, Cal., has been found. The driver and passengers footed it to Ukiah, which accounted for the Ukiah man bringing with them the silver and mail pouch. The stage was left in the snow several miles back.

The stockmen have no particular complaint to make of the hard winter and the prime we have been get it through reports the Grant Love Stock Journal. They have been able to get nearly enough to supply their necessities daily, and in that particular they were more fortunate than the average run of people.

A heavy fall of snow in the mountains at Cloverdale and Ukiah, Cal., threatens with the loss of the entire of the fruit and the loss of prune being on the ways. The snow melted as it fell, going to the ground, leaving the stocking enhancing the supply of coal, one in the very show and was pulled out by a locomotive from the Ukiah.

A young lady who lives on Fourteenth near Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal., was awoken the other night by a rich man crawled half in and over her parlor. Instead of screaming for the police she drew from her pocket a huge door key, which, to the intruder, looked like a revolver, and promptly turned over the footpad. He fell to move on or take the consequences. He chose the latter and made a vigorous exit the full without his coat.

It is told of the mothers of Kid, the bandit, says the Tucson, Ariz., Citizen, that when any signs of him are noted it was individuals in the neighborhood. Where danger is near the mothers of Kid's gang are sent for, and they are sent to the place where the danger is. Where danger is not so great no carefully conceals all indications of his presence. When ready to make to leave intimate some vacancy. When sign of trouble issues it, therefore, indicates that he is in the way, instead of near, so he would be willing to take chances of his being far away under such circumstances, however.

Bob Wilson, a boy of 13 or 14, was shot and seriously, if not mortally, wounded by Ben Cornwell at Harvey's farm, seven miles north of Ashland, Oregon, on Monday evening. Cornwell has been arrested. Both parties work at Harvey's ranch, as also does Cornwell's wife. The report is that Wilson either insulted or quarreled with Mrs. Cornwell and Cornwell shot him for it, when the boy drew a revolver and shot through Cornwell's hat. The latter fired one of five shots in succession of the shots taking effect in Wilson's abdomen.

Taylor Brannan, driver of the Riverside stage, brought in news of the chase on a mule by a coyote. An old man called "Doc" had camped on the divide just beyond Donnelly's, leaving night. Wednesday morning, just break of day, while he was wide awake and just on the point of rising, a coyote sprang upon and bit him several times in the face, severely. He shook him off and got up, when the animal attacked him a second time, so he finally lost him off. It is very unusual for a coyote to attack a human being, and this animal must have been driven to mad.—Florence (Ariz.) Tribune.

Claude Lee, of San Francisco, is not having a happy time with her illegitimate son, Henry McDonald, the result of twenty years. Mrs. A. Lee, who was ordered by Judge Wells Kelly to take the son and heir of Captain McDonald, who died intestate a number of years ago, having a very rich estate. Some time ago young McDonald, who suddenly rose from poverty to wealth, came into possession of a portion of the money. The girl proved to be his sister, so now Miss Angelina is to compel her mother entirely, and instead of endeavoring to the steady and rather course be followed when poor, he refuses to drink to excess.

Gilbert Gates, George Kellner and Guy Richardson, three youthful hoboes, were seeking their way South along the railroad, took shelter Monday night in a water tank at Solano, camped beneath the rails of the track at Dunlap, Cal. They drank all to sleep with fatal results. The unfortunate trio, from the water tank, overlooking the body of Gates, in 1893 and reaching the body of Kellner at point below the tank. Kellner was removed to the county hospital, where the necessary amputations were made, and he will probably recover. Richardson, for possession of the tank, which fatally in time to escape the fate of his companions. Gates was 19 years old and was a native of Indiana.

H. Herbert Dobbins is suing the Electric Transit company for $10,000 damages. He was on a Twenty-second street car on the 19th of August last and in the fall he was severely contused as a result of the criminal negligence of the company's employes. The carrier claimed he had been late in taking a seat on the car, and in the process of the conductor and brought the accident accordingly. Dobbins was carried in an unconscious condition to his home, where he was thrown off his feet. He was brought from Oakland. The case brought from Oakland was a complete surprise, and he was greatly surprised when he learned that he had been sued. The "Sick" turned out to be a well man, and