Ella Fowler vs. Leonard W. Fowler, divorce; set for Feb. 6th.

An abstract of judgment from Commissioner Greenwood's court, for Ben Rich vs. Fred Dalton and others, in the case of Geo. A. Lowe vs. N. H. Greenleek. The judgment calls for $104.70.

Notes and Personals.

J. C. Graham goes to Lehi this evening to deliver a lecture before the Ladies' Republican club of that city.

Edwin Seymour B. Young and Edward Stevens of the Freshman class of the Seminary will attend the farmers' meeting in the B. Y. Academy next Thursday.

John Megrem of, Springville, who has been employed at Hiawatha by the Eureka Hill Mining company, was taken to the hospital in Salt Lake City, this morning, on the D. & R. G. train. He sustained a cold some time ago and is now so seriously ill that it is not believed he will recover. Mr. Megrem is an enumerated man, about 28 years of age.

Samuel T. Cattle came over from Salem this morning. He reports that a mine, located some time ago by Spanish Fork men, about four miles east of Salem, is showing very satisfactory indications of some paying gold in sufficient quantities to pay for working and shipping. The owners have been at work on the claim for several years.

The brothers of Marcus Kofford, who, with James Michel, is wanted for the killing of Sheriff Dunn, say that when the grand jury meets the fugitives will come in and surrender themselves. The officers, however, are complete in regard to the intentions of Kofford and Michel to do that. The grand jury is called for the 18th of this month.

Last Saturday Deputy Marshal Barry left for the purpose of arresting Black Hawk, who is indicted for killing his squaw last spring in the Uintah Indian agency. He is known to have been in Indianola, Thistle Valley, since his indictment and the officer went there to arrest him but found he had gone. On Saturday, however, an Indian came down and pleaded to settle the officers to where Black Hawk is in hiding.

George Austin and C. A. Granger, representing the Lehi Sugar company, are in the city, contracting with the farmers in the vicinity for this year's crop of sugar beets. They report that a larger acreage of beets will be cultivated this year than ever before in spite of the reduction of $1 per ton which the factory has had to make. The farmers realize it is the most profitable crop they can raise, when it is considered that a cash market is assured for the crop whenever it is mature. The consideration that it leaves the land in an improved condition is also having great weight, and as the farmers become better acquainted with the successful cultivation of the crop their good opinion of beets as a farm product is increased.

HE HAD A NEW THING.

And Gentles, as It Always Has Been, Got the Worst.

Two men were seated at a small table near the front door waiting for their sandwiches and coffee when they were approached by a shabby stranger, who touched his hat and said:

"Gentlemen, may I ask a favor of each of you?"

They were silent. It was he now or partners in three.

"What I wished to ask was, gentlemen," continued the stranger, "how to spell the word balloon."

They looked at one another in evident surprise and one said, "The word 'balloon,' you say?"

"Yes, gentlemen. I got into a discussion with a friend, who says there is but one 'L.' I believe there are two."

"Your friend's right," said one of the men at the table.

"So, he says," turned the other. "You're right. Two 'L's.'"

"Let me see, now," said the first. "Bal-loo-n-no, I think it is. I think you're wrong, sir, and that the man's friend wins the bet."

"It's no bet," said the shabby stranger. "Worthington put bets at stake. You can't expect people to have money for an argument. If I had a pocket dictionary, I could sell it a minute. Gentlemen, would one of you loan me a dime with which to purchase one?"

They looked at the oddity for a moment and then each gallant cut a dime and gave it to him.

"You're a good thing," said the first one.

"Yes, you've got something new," added the other.

But the shabby stranger did not smile. He slowly pocketed them, and said he would buy one for his friend also.—Chicago Record.

Orchids For Cut Flowers.

So many beautiful flowers drop their petals soon after cutting that they are out of favor with gardeners. The orchids of Indian are generally in the direction of introducing such flowers as will hold their own for some time after cutting. With possibly one of the leading attributes of the orchid, that it lasts so long on the parlor table, and this is found to be true with many species of orchids which are coming into favor for cutting purposes, quite as much on account of this persistence as on account of its novelty and exactness. In the closely related family the cypripedium is found particularly valuable. There are certainly peculiarities, exactness and curious features in the forms and colors of the flowers, but they also have the long stems which enable the American florist to use them without the necessity of laboriously stemming them.

How Much Is a Barrel of Flour.

How many bushels of wheat is a barrel of flour? The tariffmen of leading flour manufacturers is at variance on this question. The largest manufacturing concern in the world, located at Minneapolis, reports that while certainly 4½ to 4¾ bushels of wheat are used to make a barrel of flour the product for prices of wheat and wheat offal works from forty the cheapest animal feeds in the country, that is worth more than the cost of the wheat. Many millers are using more than five bushels of wheat to a barrel of flour. It really makes no difference how much wheat they use, as the offal is worth practically as much as the wheat cost, over the Orange Judd Farmer which adds, if 10 to 20 per cent more wheat is used in the manufacture of flour, it should be taken figures in two ways—primarily in the more rapid reduction of tendonous wheat stocks, which have been the highest for two years, and, further, in the possibility of a shortage of relatively low prices needed supplies of mill feed.

Handling Fodder.

It is told in Iowa Homestead how to handle corn fodder with a double harpoon fork. A correspondent says: I use a truck wagon with a large barrack on it, and have several tops with which to do the fodder in bundles. I put from two to four stacks of corn in one bundle and draw this quite tight with the tops. The wagon will hold eight or ten rick bundles. In getting it in the barn I use the harpoon the same as hay and can say that it is by far the easiest way to unload fodder, as it is one as fast work as lifting up hay and can be unloaded as fast as a man in the mow can handle the tops.
