NOTICE TO STAKE AND WARD OFFICERS OF Y. M. M. I. A.

At the officers' meeting of the General Conference of Young Men's Mutual Improvement Associations, held May 30, 1896, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"That the fourth week in November be adopted and known as 'Collection Week' in the Young Men's Mutual Improvement associations throughout all the Stakes in Zion; that during that week each association appoint one or more collectors to see, and personally solicit from, each member of the association the annual fee agreed upon—fifty cents—to meet the local and general expenses of mutual improvement work; that after deducting ten per cent of the collections, to meet the expenses of the local association, the president shall see to it that the treasurer shall forward the remainder to the Stake treasurer, who, after deducting fifteen per cent of the total collections, shall immediately report the balance of the receipts from the Stake, to the general treasurer."

We urge upon the officers that they give this matter earnest and immediate attention, and see to it that the collectors contemplated in the resolution are appointed at once, and the amounts collected forwarded to the general treasurer as early as possible.

Earnestly praying for the success of Mutual Improvement, we are your brethren,

WILFORD WOODRUFF,
JOS. F. SMITH,
HEBER J. GRANT,
General Superintendency.

COAL COMBINE CONVICTION.

As a political slogan, warfare on trusts, pools, combinations, etc., to obstruct trade to the benefit of those in the combine, has performed a very important part in campaigns of late years. The trust or monopoly has been denounced in unmeasured terms, as a menace to the very existence of popular government and a device for the enslavement of the masses of the people. Hence there has been worked up a popular sentiment against trusts and monopolies of all kinds, probably to an extreme when applied to some cases but generally in a manner that aims to correct a great evil. Some parts of Utah have had experience with combinations of the class referred to, and it is safe to say there is not much sympathy for them.

One of the pools here to which much obloquy has been raised has been what is known as "the coal combine." Year after year the deleterious effects of this power have been felt, its operations coming first in one shape and then in another. Sometimes public feeling has been worked up to a high pitch on the subject, but the public has been powerless to help itself, at least till quite recently. One development of this state of affairs was the indictment, some months ago, of a number of coal dealers in this city who were alleged to be in the "combine," whose procedure was a restraint of trade or commerce, in violation of the United States law; and by the verdict of the jury, rendered in the United States district court Wednesday afternoon, this indictment is declared to be well founded, and a verdict of guilty of a conspiracy to restrict trade has been found against thirteen coal dealers in this city.

So far as unlawful actions are concerned, the law knows no distinction between the man of wealth and the man without property, or between the business man who has stood in high repute and the man who is unknown to the public generally. It—or if in the conditions made all of the parties are equally culpable, and to them belongs the full odium and responsibility for the disregard of the statute which is judicially decreed to have occurred, therefore be shown legitimately neither special leniency in all nor special severity in any. But if, as circumstances seem to indicate very strongly, some individuals are much more to blame than others, and in fact some were forced into an unfortunate position because of business necessity and without any criminal knowledge or intent while the really culpable parties have not been reached at all, that puts a different face on the matter. Public welfare and popular sentiment against pools and combinations do not demand severe punishment of the victims where the source of connection with the combination are a mitigating circumstance, but they do demand a sufficiently heavy punishment to prevent persons, for business or other purposes, becoming willing victims in a conspiracy which aims to injure the public. Judge Hagarty has a delicate duty resting on him in the coal combine case, but with his high reputation for doing the right thing, even to fines of greatest severity, there is little question but that his conclusion will receive general public approval, when all the phases of the case are considered.

THE TROUBLE WITH SPAIN.

The story that the Spanish government again is endeavoring to enlist the sympathy of the powers in its behalf and against the United States is denied in Madrid. It is taken to be a revival of a report last August to the effect that the Spanish minister of foreign affairs proposed a memorandum to the European governments, which, however, was withdrawn then, it appears, on the suggestion of United States Minister Taylor that it might embrace affairs the relations between the United States and Spain. Notwithstanding the official denial, it is not unlikely that Spain at this time, when a change in our foreign policy appears probable—at least from a Spanish point of view—should be anxious to ascertain whether she has any friends among the European powers. It is not believed, however, that such an appeal would give much satisfaction in the Madrid government.

Spain stands virtually alone. French capitalists have large interests in Spanish railroads and other enterprises, and the sympathy of the Paris press is therefore naturally with the neighboring country, for the obvious reason that the loss of the colonies would most likely mean a revolution in Spain, by which the royal house would be swept away and with it many of the obligations incurred to maintain that house in luxury. France will therefore naturally protest against any interference that might lead to a depreciation of French investments, but her sympathy would not go to the extent of moving a single ship against the United States, for that would involve much more than is at stake on Spanish soil.

In Vienna the queen regent has the most sincere sympathy, being a relative of the reigning house of Austria, and undoubtedly the Austrian authorities will espouse Spain's cause at the foreign courts, but while monarchs may feel in duty bound to show some sympathy to friends and relatives in distress, they cannot move armies and navies to gratify personal desires. The time for that is past. There can, therefore, be no cause for apprehension of trouble with Spain, unless indeed the reigning queen—like Napoleon III—should prefer political death to the ruins of her kingdom to ignominious defeat and deposition by rebels, and to accomplish that take measures to commit political suicide.

ABIDE THE VERDICT.

Sometimes the obstructive tactics of a minority in legislative affairs is a means of producing good results in the way of securing a modification of measures which, when applied in the radical form proposed by rank partisans, would prove a serious evil in the country. This obstructiveness, when carried out in firmness and moderation, often is commendable; but when it resolves itself down to a state of mind stubbornness it deserves from that plane on which it was made worthy of approval. Rather than have this latter condition, it is well even to aid a small majority in carrying out its policy to a reasonable extent, that that policy may be fully and fairly tested to the nation's experience, and disposed of one way or the other.

It is evident that Congressman F. G. Newlands of Nevada, who was the temporary chairman of the national convention of the Silver party at St. Louis, takes a similar view of matters; therefore he points out now the course of the country at the presidential election should be accepted by the silver forces. He says the Republican party claimed protection, and the Democratic party silver, to be the paramount issue; that the people have declared in favor of protection, and have given the Republican party a majority of a quorum for the restoration of prosperity. On this he believes that party should be allowed to carry out any reasonable tariff policy without obstruction, and if it brings prosperity all will be content; if it does not, the people will know that some other remedy is required, and by the process of elimination will come down to the real restoration of silver as a money metal as the only radical cure. Upon this statement he argues that tariff legislation should be enacted, believing that it will not give relief to the extent anticipated.

While parties may not be expected to depart from their established principles, yet in the case of those who believe in both a protective tariff and free silver, the suggestion of Mr. Newlands has a claim to the window of consideration and of conformity to the prevailing order in this country, that of majority rule. It is reasonably certain that during the next four years no relief may be looked for from a free coinage measure; if there is any improvement in the tariff policy the American voters have chosen by a comparatively short majority to follow, no good reason can be why that improvement should not be accepted. A clamor on a technicality for the full relief at once would be a parallel instance with that which refuses a half loaf when a whole one is not available. It is the duty of representatives of the people to bow to the latter's will; but such submission does not involve a full acquiescence of the conscience or of any ground gained therein is a struggle for a higher and better civilization.

MISSTATEMENTS REGARDING THE MORMONS.

In a letter in this morning's Tribune, signed "Only a management wife," there is a criticism of an alleged interview of a San Francisco newspaper writer with Mrs. Martha H. Cannon, secret envoy from Salt Lake to the coming Legislature. He (or as concerns any issues between the writer of the letter and Mrs. Cannon, who already has joined out the general inaccuracy of the interview on the main points objected to, the News does not care to interfere. But with regard to the assertion which the writer of the letter correctly makes on the system of religion known as Mormonism we have to state that the author of such letter is welcome to any supposed honor to be achieved in the bigotry, unfairness and misrepresentation of its assertions. One of these is as follows:

Added to this the Mormon tenet that woman is herself only very little figure in the plan of salvation—that she is to answer to her husband and that he holds her destiny in his hands.

This idea that woman herself cuts very little figure in the plan of salvation is not and never was inculcated as a Mormon tenet—it is diametrically opposed to Mormon teachings on the subject; and this is well known to every person who has a modicum of knowledge concerning the religious belief of the Mormons. The only mitigation for any individual acquainted with Mormonism to make such a statement as the one quoted is a desire to misrepresent facts. In Mormonism, each person holds his or her destiny in his or her own hands, woman as independently as man; and both set an equally important figure, since both are the subjects of salvation. It has been the policy of one class of unreliable anti-Mormons to cry out that woman is given too little consideration by the Latter-day Saints, while the slogan of another class has been that she is made too highly important, a special object of assault in the latter line being the line in the Mormon hymn, O My Father, given in these words:

In the heavens we parents single!
No; the thought makes reason stand
Truth is reason; truth eternal
Tells me I've a mother there.
When I leave this frail existence,
When I lay this mortal by,
Father, mother, may I meet you
In your royal court on high?
Then, at length, when I've completed
All you sent me forth to do,
With your mutual approbation
Let me come and dwell with you.

Thus the Mormons do not seem to exhibit every conceivable error; nor do they desire to do so, their aim merely being to be right. But when an individual takes the opportunity of disagreement with views of a citizen in political position as a means for misrepresenting and assailing a community's religious belief, the action is not a display of either personal love of fairness and goodwill or of Christian love and truth.

NOW THAT the Illinois system of land transfers has been decided by the Illinois supreme court to be unconstitutional for a reason that would make it unconstitutional in Utah, the members of the last Legislature may find satisfaction in the fact that they did not adopt the measure when it was crowded upon them. At the same time the Illinois decision will lighten the labors of the committee provided by law to investigate and report on the system.
