LOCAL HREVITIES.

A MEETING of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce was called for yesterday at 4:30 p. m., but a quorum not being present no business was transacted.

THE funeral services over the remains of Sister Dayer, who died on the 26th inst., were held in the Eighteenth Ward Chapel yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. Quite a number of intimate friends of the deceased were present. Consoling remarks were made by Bishop Whitney, Bishop Sperry, Bishop Seddon, Brothers Leadbeater and Patrick.

THE Burlington, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific has discontinued its car service between San Francisco and Chicago. The Union Pacific, however, runs passenger cars between these points in connection with the Southern Pacific, and there is some talk of putting on an additional through car on account of the increase in business.

On Account of Sickness.

Elder John Jones, of West Jordan, returned home from Indiana today on account of sickness. He went to that State on a mission on the 6th of February of the present year, but was stricken down with malarial fever and has suffered from that disease most of the time.

F. R. Keuner Dying.

Attorney S. A. Keuner, of this city, received a private telegram this morning announcing that his father, F. R. Keuner, an old and respected resident of Manti, Sanpete County, was dying, and requesting him to start for that point immediately. As the message was not delivered until an hour after the train had left, Mr. Keuner will be unable to leave until tomorrow morning.

Mr. A. S. Funk, merchant of Grinnold, Iowa, writes as follows:

"I have an uncle living in Utah. I do not know his location, but he is an old resident and a Mormon. I know but little about him, but as I am going to pass through, if I can hear from him I might call. His name is Daniel Funk. If you happen to know his address please send it to me."

Mr. Funk, or any relatives or friends of his who can do so, ought to send the gentleman the information he seeks.

The general office shall be in Salt Lake City. The capital stock shall be $10,000, divided into 10,000 shares of one dollar each.

The officers of the company consist of a board of five directors, as follows: C. R. Durst, J. F. Grant, Grant Hampton, Walter P. Jennings and A. S. Jones. C. R. Durst is president, J. F. Grant, vice-president, and Grant Hampton, secretary and treasurer.

IN FINE STYLE.

How the Straight Republicans Will Go to Minneapolis.

The Republicans have made final arrangements with the Union Pacific for their trip from Salt Lake to Minneapolis. They will leave here on train No. 2 at 5:00 a. m., on the morning of June 1st, in one of Pullman's finest twelve section buffet cars and will arrive at Minneapolis about 8 o'clock on the morning of June 3rd, making the trip in about forty-eight hours. The car will be located in a convenient place in Minneapolis and will be occupied for sleeping purposes until the close of the Republican convention. Mr. Arthur Pratt has the matter in charge, and any person desiring to accompany this party should make application to Mr. Pratt for reservation in Pullman car.

THERE are many people now living who will have only one birthday to celebrate for nearly twelve years to come. This strange circumstance is due to the fact that they were born on February 29, and to the further fact that the year 1900 will not be a leap year.

THE CORONER'S INQUEST

Being Held Over the Remains of the Barber who was Shot at Sandy Yesterday.

Coroner Harris was at 8 o'clock this afternoon holding an inquest over the remains of J. A. Gier (not John Sperry, as heretofore reported) the unfortunate barber, who was shot and killed at Sandy yesterday morning by Ex-Constable Lewis, as published in last evening's News.

Lewis is now in the county jail awaiting arraignment. At the coroner's request he was represented by Powers & Hiles, while Assistant County Attorney Elliott appeared for the people.

The jurors were George W. Williams, Benjamin Nute and W. H. Booth.

The testimony showed that three bullets entered the body of the dead man between the abdomen and breast.

Lewis defends his action by saying that Gier had threatened his life on several occasions and that, as he passed his shop yesterday morning, he threw his hand towards his hip pocket as though he was about to draw his gun. This move Lewis considered dangerous and drew his own revolver and fired five shots, three of which took effect.

The result of the inquest had not been announced when the NEWS went to press.

Attacked the Wrong Dog.

There was a tremendous romping and excitement in a prominent drug store on Chestnut street, near Twelfth, the other day. A fair maid, strolling down the street with a large mastiff, stopped in the store for soda. The place was crowded, and among the crowd were two other ladies with two other dogs.

The other dogs were somewhat smaller than the mastiff, but by a lightning calculation they decided that by combining forces they might take a fall out of him. Instantly acting, the romping began.

In one-fifth the space of time it takes to write it the air was filled with snarls, yelps, barks, growls, dog hair, female shrieks, children's howls and screams, soda water, mush, small packages and male profanity. Women and children clambered upon the counters or fled into the street, the clerks and soda water boys grabbed the fighting dogs, and the big mastiff was dragged out upon the pavement, where a crowd had already gathered.

Seeing his mistress on the outskirts of the crowd the mastiff gave a bound toward her and buried an old gentleman and a small girl flat on their backs. The crowd scattered in all directions as one was thrown against a barn door, the big dog barked loudly and the old gentleman grew red in the face in his efforts to do verbal justice to his feelings. The excitement lasted until a reserve policeman came up and asked what the matter was and was told nine different stories, all of which were wrong.

Inside the damage was computed at six broken tumblers, five dry six dresses ruined by soda water stains and a huge bowl of fresh eggs scattered promiscuously by being sat in by a fat baby, which was placed there by its mother during the first outbreak of the excitement. One of the small dogs had about a half pound of meat taken out of him by the big one.—Philadelphia Record.

Easter Lilies.

The attention the florist pays nowadays to the Easter lilies is a marked one; for not so many years ago the demand for the beautifully simple white flower was exceedingly small.

They found the readiest sale with churches then, and it was rare indeed to find a private house decorated with these flowers. Even the churches did not require so many as to make the production of the Easter lily more than a mere incident in the work of a florist's gardener. Now it is a feature of his labors in the fall to rear thousands of bulbs.

Besides the usual amount of care exercised by a good gardener in raising flowers of any kind, these lilies require special attention. Before or after the Easter season there is very little demand for the flower, and he must see to it that the buds appear just as Lent is ushered in. To have the plants flower several weeks before or not until the season is closing means a big financial loss. Placing the plants in a dark room delays the building until the time arrives for them to be salable, and then the forcing begins.—Boston Transcript.

A Great Juke on Boomers.

Many thousands of settlers camped on the southern line of the soon-to-be-opened Cheyenne and Arapahoe lands received word that the president had issued a proclamation opening the lands. Instantly they by hundreds and thousands invaded and took claims. The military at once proceeded, however, to eject them. Then they learned that some one had played a practical joke on them, and they were 100 miles from a telegraph office.

This has greatly complicated matters, as under a strict interpretation of the law they became "sooners," and cannot hereafter acquire titles to public lands.—Cor. St. Louis Republic.

Big Steel Trusses.

The steel trusses which are to support the roof of the Manufactures building in the World's fair grounds will be the largest in the world. There will be twenty-two trusses, and they will be erected in pairs. Each truss will cover a span of 206 feet, and from the center of the roof inside to the ground there will be a distance of 206 feet. Each truss weighs 300 tons, and 6,000 tons of steel will be used in the roof of the building. Above the trusses supporting the roof will be erected other trusses to support the lantern roof. These trusses will be thirty-six feet in height and each will span a distance of 150 feet.—Exchange.

THE PRAIRIE ROSE.

Worthy the Attention of Those Who Want Something Pretty.

How settlers, the climbing prairie rose, is indigenous to the central states, and is found growing wild to the south and west. Its western limit runs through the southeastern part of Kansas, where it is often found in old pastures and along the edges of timber belts. The plant has a long running, rank and withal a graceful habit of growth. In early July it buds itself with bunches of pretty pink single flowers, and is then quite as attractive as many of the more popular varieties of the species.

Over twenty varieties, including such common ones as Baltimore Bells and Prairie Queen, have been derived from this species and are in some or less general cultivation. In American Gardening attention is especially attracted to the original species as it is found growing wild. In this form it is one of the most interesting of all those hedgerow plants which are being used more and more by gardeners who appreciate the effects rather than the more elegant artificial constructions such as necessarily involve the highly improved cultivated varieties. Rosa setigera is admirable in some of the days when the man who wants something pretty rather than something rare. Its graceful, free growing and peculiarly wild appearance, provided its use on a somewhat shaven lawn, along a straight front walk, against the front verandah or in any other formal surroundings, but the same habits will equally recommend it to places where propriety in the selection of varieties planted is quite as desirable. Over old fences, in some cases, along winding drives and against outbuildings which it is desirable partly to hide, the Rosa setigera is one of the prettiest plants imaginable. The original species as it grows wild in the pastures is kept by the best nurserymen.

Mediterranean Fennel.

It is surprising that so noble a flower, almost stealing the rose in brilliancy of color and perfection of bloom and the fragrance in stately grandeur, should be so neglected. Amateurs seem to have lost sight of the many improved varieties introduced within the last few years, and our finest gardens, perfect in other respects, are singularly deficient in specimens of the tuberous rooted. The first point in their favor is hardiness. It may be truly said of them that they are "hardy as an oak." In the severest climates the plants require no other protection than that they are left where they have grown. Their vigorous habit and healthy growth, freedom from all diseases and insects are important arguments in favor of their cultivation. Growers of roses know well that their flowers are exhausted by great vigitness and care. Not so with the peony, which when once planted all is done. Each succeeding year adds to their size and beauty. The foliage is rich and glossy and of a beautiful green color, and has been during the places very ornamental even when out of flower. The newer varieties produce very large, handsome, regularly formed cupped blooms resembling large roses. No other flower is so well adapted for large, showy bouquets. The peony may be planted either singly on the lawn or in borders. Where the lawn is extensive a large bed makes a grand show, surpassing a bed of rhododendrons. It is really a flower for the million. Hillwanger and Barry place them in three divisions. First, the officinalis and its hybrids; second, paradoxa. These are European and bloom from the middle to the end of May. The third is Chinese, and blooms through June and July. A selection from the three divisions will give a fine display of flowers during three months.

The Kansas Raspberry.

The Kansas raspberry has depicted in a new blackcap from the state for which it is named, and Orchard and Garden considers that it is worthy of a place among the most promising of the berries recently produced.

A NEW BLACKCAP RASPBERRY.

The Kansas is stout second early in its season of ripening. It ripens its crop soon after Souhegan and that class, but much earlier than Gregg. The Kansas, in fruiting, has the habit of producing a vigorous growth throughout the season; its canes and branches are covered with a thick blue bloom. The berries are quite as large as Gregg, but clear jet black and without the silver or bloom that is peculiar to the latter berry. In productiveness it is superior to Gregg. The present indications are that this new berry will prove of value.

Plant some grapevines this season under the cornices or eaves of the houses, barns or other outbuildings. Under such shelter there will, in all probability, be no mildew, and such varieties as cannot be well grown in open exposure will bear fruit successfully, according to Orchard and Garden.

An Alley Statesman.

The reporter was trying to get an opinion from a very diplomatic congressman who was on the fence as to currency.

"Are you in favor of a silver or a paper currency?" inquired the quill.

"I did not say I was, did I?" was the evasive answer.

"Are you in favor of gold then?"

"Did I say so?" and the congressman winked.

"Well, what the dickens are you?" asked the reporter bluntly.

"Suppose," responded the statesman carefully that I set me down for the present as an alloy."—Detroit Free Press.
