THE "STRATHMORE."

Letter from Mrs. Wordsworth, the Lady who Survived the Wreck, to her Daughter.

The Childers, Feb. 18, 1876.

Dearest F——, I daresay you never expected to see my handwriting again, but I suppose I must be the veritable bad halfpenny, and of course have turned up once more. We are now on board the ship Childers of Liverpool, on our way to Rangoon.

I will begin my story from the poor ship Strathmore. We had rather a tedious voyage. I was sick the whole way and if the sickness stopped I had nausea. I could not eat—I loathed everything and when we got to the line "low fever" set in. In short, I thought I should never reach New Zealand, though Captain McDonald showed great skill in medicine, and was exceedingly kind and attentive. On one occasion, curiously enough, he jokingly threatened that if I did not get better soon he would land me on the Twelve Apostles—little thinking then, poor man, how soon his words were to come true.

Miss Henderson, the lady who occupied the other berth in my cabin, and who, with her brother, was going to New Zealand to join their father, always tended me with the greatest kindness and gentle care during my long illness. On the 30th of June, the very night before we struck, I felt rather better, and got up to join the other passengers in a game at cards in the saloon. I had generally slept badly hitherto, the fever always returning in the night; but on this occasion, being more fatigued than usual, I slept soundly till bump, bump, bump, I was knocked violently backwards and forwards in my berth. I thought, "Surely that is a curious motion," but determined not to be easily alarmed, I endeavored to compose myself. To my horror there then followed a crunching and grating sound which could not be mistaken. I said to Miss Henderson, "Oh! surely there is something wrong."

We got out of bed, and had just lit our lamps, when Charlie and Mr. Henderson came to our cabin. Mr. Henderson never spoke, but Charlie said in very quiet tones, "Mother, the ship has struck, and is quickly settling down. You have not time to dress—only a moment to put on what you can." They left us: we never spoke. I helped the poor child to dress; she was pale and trembling, but quiet and collected. I did not take time to dress myself fully, merely putting on my dressing gown and the tweed tunic you bought me. My sealskin jacket was unfortunately locked up, so I huddled on my warm shawl, and tied up my head warmly. This took us about three minutes, at the end of which time Charlie and Mr. Henderson again appeared. I took your brother's arm and we went into the saloon, Miss Henderson and her brother following. Charlie, thinking himself of some useful things he had forgotten, left me in the saloon in order to get them from his own cabin. Thinking he remained too long, I followed him, and begged him to come at once, for I had heard the Captain from the poop call aloud in an agonized tone, "Now then, come!" But whilst I had been waiting for him, I had run back to the cabin and got my rosary, which I put round my neck, and seized a pair of blankets. We made our way to the companionhatch, but it was partly fastened up, so I was forced to drop my load of blankets, and creep through the small aperture which was left. Arm in arm, and followed by Miss Henderson and her brother, we walked to where some sailors were endeavoring to launch a boat. Charlie noticed to me that generally in shipwrecks the first boat launched is lost; and though I heard a sailor's voice cry out, "I'll shoot any man who gets in before the woman;" I said to Charlie, "Don't go in that boat! remember wherever we go if there is not room for you there is not room for me." He replied, "No, mother, we will live or die together."

We passed the Joselyn boys. Percy, the eldest—a fine fellow—I heard say to his younger brother, "We will stick together, old boy, whatever happens." I saw poor Captain McDonald at the rigging, and would have spoken to him, but I knew he was a broken-hearted man, and like myself, preparing for eternity. I had not the least hope of being saved. Just then I heard Mrs. Walker, who unfortunately had got separated from her husband and child, ask Charlie to look for him, but he did not hear her; he was considering how I could be got into the port life-boat. "Can you get on the bridge, mother?" he asked. I said, "Yes"—though it was a place I dared not have attempted in daylight on a calm day. I got into it I knew not how. Charlie and a sailor named Jack Wilson pulled me up into the boat by their hands. The moment I was lifted from the quarterdeck a sea swept over it, some of the water splashing on my face. That sea washed Miss Henderson from her brother's arms down to the main deck, and so the poor child was lost. Her brother told me afterwards that all she said to him was, "Oh, Tom, we did not think it would end this way."

In the meantime the sailors were doing everthing to have the boat ready on the very slight hope of her floating clear of the ship, which we thought then was rapidly settling down. We sat awaiting our fate. A few farewells were exchanged. I said good-bye to my dear boy, and a pang of anguish went through me for his young life so soon to be taken. It passed in a moment, and we were preparing ourselves as well as we could to meet our God when, wonderful to relate, a heavy sea came sweeping along over the poop, carrying everything with it to destruction; but instead of dashing our boat to pieces, or tumbling it from the beams on which it stood down to the deck, it caught it up and miraculously floated us between the main and mizzen rigging into the sea. I thought at the time we were going quietly into eternity. I felt Charlie's grasp tighten, and with a prayer on my lips I think I almost was gone. We had hardly breathed when Charlie suddenly almost threw me from him and wrenching an oar out shouted, "Saved, saved, by a miracle. Up, lads, and keep her off the ship." It was pitch dark in the dead of a winter night. We had few clothes, and the boat having been stove in on its passage across the deck, we were sitting almost up to our waists in water. Huge sprays washed over our shoulders, and so surrounded by breakers and sharp rocks, we did not know which way to turn for safety. By dint of hard labor and great caution we managed to keep clear of every obstacle, and the boat was constantly baled to lighten her, but with little success. Indeed had she not been a splendid lifeboat we should very soon have sunk. I sat silent in my corner, trying to comfort and warm poor Spencer Joselyn, who had hurt himself jumping into the boat. Percy, poor fellow, fell short in his leap, and was drowned. Charlie gave me his coat to hold whilst he pulled an oar, and I think that £155 which was in a pocket-book that he had saved must then have been lost by dropping out of one of his pockets into the water in the boat, and then being baled overboard.

F. AUERBACH & BRO.

TO CALIFORNIA.

We don't give this for an fait accompli, but it is very strongly rumored that Cedar Rapids is to be the half-way station between Chicago and Council Bluffs.

If this is to be, and some experiments have been made to that end, we suppose it is on account of the superior condition of the road. A trip on the steel railed and well ballasted road, is not any more now, if as much, wear and, tear on the employes and machinery to a train, from Chicago to Cedar Rapids, 218 miles, as it was on the iron rails from Chicago to Clinton, 138 miles, in the olden time.

It is not necessary for us to say that the C. & N. W. R'y is a first-class road in every particular, that it rides as easy as sitting in a "rocking chair," that its coaches are parlors, that its employes are the most polite and affable gentlemen the traveling public can meet or will meet in a lifetime of travel—the esprit de corps of the employes, if we may so say, is at a high standard; we say we need not say this in a newspaper, it is self-evident to every traveler on the road. But in the future these are to be increased; we suppose the speed will be increased; if possible, the superb trains will be more superb; there is to be no train more complete, either for comfort or safety, leave the world's commercial metropolis for the GOLDEN GATE, THAN THE GREAT TRAINS ON THE CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY—THE ONLY COMPANY RUNNING OUT OF CHICAGO THAT HAS A ROAD SO RELIABLE THAT THEY ARE NOT AFRAID TO RUN AT ANY SPEED CAPABLE OF BEING ATTAINED BY ENGINES OF THE MOST IMPROVED CONSTRUCTION, RUN WITH THE HAND OF IRON NERVE, AND A HEAD OF BRAINS, WITHOUT ANY FEAR OF ACCIDENT OR INCONVENIENCE.

Every employe on the road feels a personal interest in the North-Western Railway; it's the "eclipse" road in the West, and so far as anything he can do it will continue so to be.

THIS IS THE TRANS-CONTINENTAL LINK FROM THE GREAT LAKES TO THE GREAT MISSOURI RIVER.

The old time traveler speaks in high glee of the "ease and comfort" of these days of steel in contrast with the pioneer days of this pioneer road in the days of iron. The comforts of travel on the North-Western Railway are in every traveler's mouth from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It must be a proud compliment to the officient management, and that is the reason every officer or employe feels so happy and obliging.

It is with pride we mention these things, and join the general shout along the line, Hurrah for the "OLD RELIABLE"—Cedar Rapids Republican, Aug. 14, 1876.
