An Old Man Brutally Beaten and Robbed by Masked Robbers.

A COSTLY STAGE LINE ABANDONED.

Typhoid Fever Epidemic at Hot Springs, Wyo.—Shooting in Montana.

The people of Hot Springs, Wyo., gave a house of $300 for the establishment of the stage line between that place and Lander, and now it has been abandoned.

Typhoid fever has become epidemic in Hot Springs, Wyoming. The Sheet of last week reports several deaths and a number of cases. Physicians attribute the epidemic to the poor sanitary condition of the town.

Herdsmen and stockmen of Wyoming say that the recent rain was much needed, as it tends to keep the grass green and prevent it from curing for winter for the stock. If it remains green until the frost kills it it is just as good.

The Casper (Wyo.) Derrick says: J. J. Hart already has about others for sheep amounting to 100,000 head, but so far he can't find anyone willing to part with their lands. This is not a bad indication and rather belies the assertion that the sheep industry is prostrated.

While Officer Hogan was trying to arrest John Doyle, a sewer contractor, who became involved in a quarrel on the street at Butte, Mont., at 5 o'clock on Sunday morning, the officer's revolver was accidentally discharged, the bullet striking Doyle in the leg and killing him instantly. He was not otherwise wounded and his death is a puzzle to the citizens, though several witnesses to the affray claim that the officer clubbed the man to death.

It was an eventful occasion when the first load of baled hay ever grown in Idaho rolled down Main street last Sunday afternoon and drew up in front of the Building Hay company's offices in the Payette valley bank building, says the Payette Independent. A goodly number of people had been congregated about the offices of the company for more than an hour, while the streets were packed with vehicles and horsemen, waiting for an opportunity to give the first load of Payette valley hay an ovation befitting the occasion. When the big wagon decorated with hay vines and flags came to a halt, the crowd gave three cheers from the north side of the street, which was answered with interest from the bank corner on the opposite side.

On Sunday evening masked robbers entered the home of Charles Hadley, an old man who lives all alone on the road to Lafayette, two miles from Walnut Creek, Cal. They bound Hadley hand and foot and then searched the premises for money and valuables. They found only $6 and a bank book, which they took. Hadley is about 75 years old, and is commonly reported to be wealthy, being regarded as a miser by his neighbors. The robbers evidently knew of his reputation for wealth, for having secured only $6 in their first search they tortured the old man to make him reveal the whereabouts of his treasure. They beat him terribly with a pistol, inflicting about twenty serious wounds. The old man, influenced by pain and fear, told them where he had secreted his money and bank book. The men secured $170 in coin and the bank book, showing that money was deposited in the Union Savings Bank of Oakland. Hadley became unconscious from the effects of their treatment, and the robbers, thinking him dead, left with their booty. After they had gone Hadley recovered consciousness and managed to free himself. He wandered out to the road to a hard residence, where he was found by neighbors and taken to Walnut Creek for medical treatment. He will probably die from the effects of the tough handling he received.

Valentine Soap Beans.

If we were restricted to one variety of dwarf soap bean, we would choose the Valentine, says the editor of Gardening, who adds:

The pods are round, very brittle and fleshy, and they last in good eating condition as long as those of any other green flooded sort we know. They also are of excellent quality. The variety is easy to grow, very healthy and a prolific bearer. It is everybody's soap bean. Besides the plain Red Valentine, we have also Early Red Valentine and Extra Early Red Valentine, the earlier points being gained by sedgeonness by means of repeated selection and improvement. There is also a white seed form. We saw Valentine beans in rows 2½ feet apart, beginning in the third week in April, on light warm land, and again every week or two for two people save in 10 days might be enough—till the third week in August, which seeing is opened by placing frames and sashes over them to save them from frost.

AVERAGE PLANT OF VALENTINE BEAN.

The agricultural appropriation bill was passed by the house of representatives May 17. It includes an appropriation of $990,000 for the bureau of animal industry, with the provision that the secretary may use any part of the sum he may deem necessary to prevent the spread of pleuro-pneumonia, tuberculosis, sheep scab and other diseases.

A Baked Potato.

A potato baked with the skin on, broken to pieces in butter and sprinkled with a little salt and a tablespoonful of cold sweet cream makes a truly delicious.—Inglehe Home Magazine.
