FIFTY DAYS EACH.

Purloiners of Transferable Tools Are Found Guilty and Sent to Jail.

Tom Ryan, H. Ward and W. N. Harmon, the trio arrested for stealing razors and slippers from W. J. Wright's barber shop on Wednesday night last, had a hearing in the police court today. When arraigned yesterday they each pleaded not guilty, which of course necessitated the hearing to which they were subjected this morning.

The story connected with the affair is as follows: On the evening of Wednesday last, Mr. Wright moved from his place of business on East First South, three razors valued at $1.25 each and two pair of slippers of the value of $1.50 each. On Thanksgiving day he reported his loss to the police and Detective Sheets was assigned the "job" of unraveling the mystery. On Friday the detective went out to "do" the town in quest of the missing articles, and was rewarded by unearthing part of the stolen booty in Petrovsky's second-hand store on Second South street.

The second-hand dealer explained to the officer that on Wednesday night two men, who were subsequently identified as Ward and Harmon, came to his shop and pawned a pair of slippers, giving at the same time fictitious names and addresses. On Thursday morning they called again, this time selling him a pair of slippers for $1, under the same spurious titles. Armed with this information the officer went on Saturday to the Lodville house and arrested Ward and Harmon on suspicion, not at the time knowing that they were the guilty parties.

Coming up to the station, however, the men gave themselves "dead away" by asking Sheets if he was going to take them to the barber shop for identification. Said they, "We didn't steal those things, but we can put you on to the fellows who did. It was Tom Ryan and he is now in Ogden trying to dispose of them." The men's statement strengthened the case against them materially and the detective conveyed them to the station and turned them into the custody of the jailor.

The next thing to do was to capture Ryan, and Sheets accordingly took the train to Ogden on Sunday morning and returned with the man in the evening. The testimony given by them was very conflicting, one contradicting the other, and Judge Smith being apparently satisfied of the men's guilt, imposed upon each a fine of $50, which if not forthcoming, would necessitate their remaining in jail for the length of time.

As they were about to be removed to jail, their interrogations showed that they were unconscious of the fact that sentence had been passed upon them.

"What are you going to do?" said one.

"Going to put you in jail."

"What for?"

"The judge has found you guilty and sentenced each of you to 50 days' imprisonment."

"Can't we have a jury trial?"

"No, not now, but you can appeal."

"Well, we'll appeal then."

"Your bonds then will be fixed at $200 each."

"$200 each?"

They couldn't furnish it, and as they were afraid an appeal would do them no good, they concluded to take their medicine, and went unwillingly back to the municipal "Black Hole" to serve their time.

Salt Lake and Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles, Cal., Express, in an article on the Los Angeles Terminal railway, published on Saturday last, has the following:

It was reported recently that arrangements had almost been completed whereby the Terminal would extend its road through to Salt Lake City. There is no question but that when the present line was built it was the intention of the projectors sooner or later to establish communication by rail between Los Angeles and the capital city of Utah. The line would have been built long ago had not those who agreed to furnish capital backed out at the last moment. General Manager Barnett said a few days ago to an Express reporter that he expected to hear any day from the East that the capital necessary to carry the project to a successful conclusion had been raised. There is no question in Mr. Barnett's, nor in anybody else's mind but a road between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City would prove a great success financially, to say nothing of the great good that would take place generally to Southern California and Utah. The building of such a road would be followed by the development of the mineral wealth which lies untouched in the mountains of Southern Utah. The railroad always brings closer together the relations between the localities it connects, and as a consequence of a line connecting Southern California and Utah a big trade would be built up, just the same as is carried on between Arizona and this and the other state.
