A Clergyman Placed on Trial for Embezzling the Sum of $3,000.

MEAT PACKING HOUSE BURNED.

Exciting Tale of a Robbery By a Negro.—Singular Horse Among Animals in Wyoming.

Some very extensive improvements are being made at the Mount Pleasant [illegible] preparatory for fall grinding, [illegible] accommodate the new ale of the [illegible] year.

Animals around Laramie have a queer choice. Two or three pet antelope have died of it. The animals' eyes turn yellowish white and then they sicken and die.

The boundary line between California and Nevada is being surveyed once more. That work has already been done twice, but on neither time to the satisfaction of either state.

The Lake (Colorado) county commissioners have extended the time for payment of all assessments until September 1st and will levate on the delinquency properties until then.

The Jeff. Maynard arrived on Wednesday at San Francisco from Kotzebue, Alaska, after a voyage of eleven days, with a cargo of eleven tons of ivory on the Alaska Improvement company.

At Smith's junior mill in Long Valley, Nevada, has counted the death of Dick Nelson. He had been at the mill three weeks and was about twenty-one years old. Nelson, skipping [illegible] on a log that was floating in the pond, fell full length over the body, stepping on the pole which had been killing him instantly.

A fellow named Davis, who recently completed a sentence in the Marysville jail, came down to Salina and put up at the Commercial hotel. Tuesday morning he showed the hotel that he was armed, filling the hotel that he was a desperado, and omitting to drop a few cartridges into the slot at the [illegible]. An hour later George Atkins [illegible] his wounded brother and started to pull of the marshal's inquiry. He succeeded in overhearing the fellow in Glenwood and put a stop to his further flight by attaching the horse thief's by the brain jumper.

Recent investigations into the conditions of the Pacific back of San Francisco, says the Chronicle, have developed a total absence of sanitary state of affairs. That the institution is [illegible] worked up to the [illegible] the situation any longer makes an exercise of [illegible]. The wildest and most reckless speculating in the history of the state is supposed to be the result of the P. Jelle book. Millions of dollars were issued [illegible] and sold [illegible] and the most questionable means were resorted to by the [illegible] managers to carry their operations. Some of those acts border on the criminal and may yet be brought to the attention of the grand jury.

A clergyman on trial for a felony was the unusual spectacle presented in a San Francisco court on Wednesday. The defendant was Rev. Rodney M. Gressley, an ex-assistant rector of Trinity Episcopal church and a former superintendent of the Society of Twenty Home. The reverend gentleman's offense was one that has largely gained much notoriety in the newspapers. He was indicted by the grand jury for the alleged embezzlement of $3,000 entrusted to him by an aged lady member of his flock, named Mrs. Allen, who says he deliberately robbed and defrauded her of all she had in the world. She so declared to a jury on Wednesday, and it was in means for Dr. Edwards to dispute the charge.

The meat packing house of Mott & Youle in the suburbs of Stockton, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday evening. The entire plant, one of the most extensive of its kind on the coast, was totally destroyed. Owing to the location being outside the city limits the fire department was unable to render assistance. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed to have been the work of incendiaries. Residents of the neighborhood claim to have seen a flash from the boiler room, then two men running from the place. The packing house was in course of erection but had not been [illegible] of completion. The loss, however, is heavy, as much valuable machinery has been put in place, and it will probably reach $25,000.

Miss Julia Hoaggerty and Miss Katie Moran were in the superior court at Oakland, Cal., on Wednesday, and told a most exciting tale about a robbery wherein they are the prosecuting witnesses. The young ladies are residents of Berkeley and are well connected. They are now committed to appear in court and prosecute Frank Mollet, a young colored man, whom they accuse of assault and robbery. The story, as brought out in court, is to the effect that the young ladies had been on visiting a friend during the evening. About 10 o'clock they started for their homes in Berkeley. It was a bright moonlight night as they walked along the railroad track. They had reached a place where no houses were to be seen when suddenly the negro came upon them. "Girls, allow me the pleasure to see you home," he remarked. Miss Hoaggerty replied that she guessed they could get home very well themselves. Then the stranger made a grab for one of the girls, and both screamed and ran. In their mad efforts to escape both of the young ladies fell into a ditch near the railroad track and were covered with mud before they could scramble out. Then Miss Hoaggerty started to run across a field, when the negro gave chase. The unhappy girl tripped somehow and fell down. Mollet pounced upon her in a rough manner and held a pistol in her cheek while he went through her pockets. The fellow secured a small sum of money and then ran away. Miss Moran had made her escape, and ran up the road screaming at the top of her voice. She soon aroused the neighborhood, and Miss Hoaggerty, who has been so quite faint and [illegible], was rescued. Subsequently the fellow was captured, and yesterday he was fully identified by both of the young ladies. They told their exciting tale to the jury in a calm manner, and said that their experiences that they will long remember. The prisoner was a desperate looking fellow, and the feeling against him in Berkeley is very strong. Search for gats of trembling have been made.
