CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 22.—Frelinghuysen, from the committee on foreign relations, reported favorably on the petition of the N. Y. Chamber of Commerce in relation to the Japanese indemnity fund, and reported a bill in relation to the payment of said fund.

The morning hour having expired the Senate resumed the consideration of the Senate bill providing for the counting of the votes for President and vice-President. Morton asked that the Senate remain in session to-day till the bill was disposed of.

After a debate by White and Thurman, Johnston briefly discussed the amendment offered by himself, which read—"If the Senate should vote for counting one certificate and the House of Representatives another, a joint meeting of the two houses shall finally determine which shall be counted by States, the representation from each State, including the Senators there from, having one vote; but if the representation of any State shall be equally divided, its vote shall not be counted." The question was taken on the amendment and it was lost, yeas 11, nays 39.

The question was then taken on Cooper's amendment, which reads as follows—"And if the two houses do not agree as to which return shall be counted, then the vote shall be counted, which the House of Representatives, voting by States in the manner provided by the constitution when the election devolves upon the House, shall decide to be the true and valid return;" and it was lost, yeas 13, nays 35.

The question then recurred on the following amendment proposed by Maxey—"But if the two houses fail to agree as to which of the returns shall be counted, the President of the Senate, as presiding officer of the two houses, shall decide which is the true and valid return, and the same shall be counted."

After debate the amendment was lost, yeas 7, nays 88.

After a short executive session the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 22.—Blaine proceeded to address the House. He regarded it as a very significant and gratifying circumstance that the judiciary committee, composed of a majority of democratic members, and presided over by a strict State's rights democrat, had reported, unanimously, a bill proposing to give Congress the right to take cognizance of local elections, even in counties and districts; he regarded that as a surrender of the doctrine heretofore held by the democratic party on that subject. It was admitted everywhere that there was as great a necessity for legislation to secure an honest vote and a fair count as there was to guard poor clerks from five dollar contributions for election purposes; with that part of the bill he sympathized. He did not think there had been, under the republican regime in Washington, any coercion of clerks, or any dismissals for not contributing, but both parties were in the habit of receiving assessments and contributions from office-holders; that was something altogether too well known and too notorious to be denied, and it might run into a great evil. He thanked the judiciary committee for proposing a remedy for that evil, and he thanked the House for the very large majority with which it had, yesterday, indicated its purpose to strike at an evil far greater than that. He undertook to say that the contributions made in congressional elections, both by successful and defeated candidates, exceeded, by many times over, at every election, the contributions by persons holding State offices; he thought that was equally notorious, and if the House designed to correct that evil, and tear it up by the roots, the bill would have to be so amended as that neither a senator, representative, delegate, nor candidate for such a position could safely use money for securing his election.

Brown, of Ky., replied to Blaine's suggestion as to the democratic party surrendering its state rights principles, and said the substitute proposed by himself was not open to that criticism.

In the course of his remarks Blaine quoted the testimony given by Cornelius Coendell, a former congressional printer, to the effect that 43 per cent. of the gross amount appropriated for printing purposes had been used for the purpose of carrying Buchanan's presidential election.

Holman reminded Blaine that the supposition that Government officers had participated in such frauds had produced a political revolution which had brought the republican party into power; did the gentleman suspect that a similarly well founded supposition at the present period would not produce a corresponding effect?

Amendments were suggested by Townsend of Pa., Hoar and Reagan.

Holman expressed the opinion that both sides of the House were willing to participate in any measure that would secure its party in elections, but the proposition of the gentleman from Maine seemed to go far beyond the scope of the bill. He asked Blaine whether he was ready to go to the extent of interfering with the legislation of the States as to the mode of managing elections.

Blaine—"I hold that the Government of the U. S. has a perfect right to prescribe the time, place and manner of holding elections for representatives in Congress."

Holman—"Undoubtedly, that is right."

Blaine—"Is the gentleman in favor of exercising it?"

Holman—"I am in favor of exercising it with a proper regard to the legislation of the states."

Blaine—"Is he in favor of exercising it to that end?"

Holman—"So far as its legislation applies to members of Congress I think it proper, but I think the gentleman from Maine will hardly seek to go so far as to attempt to cure the evils of State legislation."

Blaine expressed the belief that the colored voters in the South had not a fair chance of voting; it was not enough to destroy bribery outside so long as the spectre ghost of rascality stood within. He moved the previous question, but the House refused to second it, ayes 73, noes 91.

Goode said he sympathized with the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maine, but he considered it open to the constitutional objection that it would have the same effect as an impeachment, in so far as the penalty was removal from office.

Blaine suggested that he would modify his amendment.

Goode remarked that no proposition to modify the amendment had been made until after his criticism on it. This was an important bill, intended to apply a remedy to a most flagrant, outrageous wrong, and the gentleman from Maine ought not to be allowed to encumber it with grave constitutional difficulties. At the Norfolk navy yard no man could get any employment without a recommendation from the republican executive committee. As to his colleague, so-called, Stowell, that gentleman hailed from what was called the Black District of Virginia, where there were not enough white republicans to furnish judges who could read and write, the election judges had therefore been democrats.

Cox, who had been occupying the Speaker's chair, came down to the floor and rushed into the fray, striking first at Blaine, whom he accused of shedding crocodile tears over this subject, then aiming his shafts of ridicule at a California member, Page, and exhibiting what he called the tape worm ballot used by the employes at the Mare Island navy yard to compel them to vote the republican ticket, and owning up generally that one political party was about as bad as the other in regard to these election frauds.

The debate was further continued by Luttrell, Caulfield and Southard. Finally the House proceeded to vote on the bill and the various amendments. The vote was first taken on Townsend's amendment, providing that the expenditures for election purposes allowed by the law of any state should not be construed as being affected by the act; rejected. The next amendment in order was Blaine's amendment, including senators, representatives and delegates in Congress in the provisions of the bill.

Blaine called for the yeas and nays, and the amendment was agreed to, yeas 128, nays 88.

The next vote was on Blaine's amendment to the substitute offered by Brown, of Ky., being the same amendment as was offered by Blaine to the original bill, and adopted; the amendment was rejected, ayes 102, nays 107.

The next vote was on the amendment offered by Goode to Brown's substitute, making it a misdemeanor for any person to use force, menace, violence or bribery to influence the elections of the President, Vice-President, Senator, Representative or Delegate in Congress; adopted, yeas 212, nays 3.

The next vote was on the amendment offered by Reagan, as a substitute for the first section of Brown's substitute, making it unlawful for any officer, postmaster, clerk, or employee of the United States, or for any senator or member of Congress to solicit, ask, receive or accept any gift for election purposes; rejected.

The next vote was on Brown's substitute for the first section, that no officer or employee of the Government shall require or request, give to or receive, from any other officer or employee of the same, or other person, directly or indirectly, any money or property, or any other thing of value, for political purposes; and any such officer or employee who shall offend against the provisions of the act shall at once be dismissed from the service of the United States, and also be deemed guilty of a high dismeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined not less then $500 nor more than $3,000, and imprisonment not more than one year, at the discretion of the judge trying the case. This section is the amendment offered by Goode, and adopted. The third section gives United States District Courts jurisdiction of the offences created by the act. The substitute was agreed to, without yeas and nays, and the bill as thus amended was passed, yeas 178, nays 8. Adjourned.

NORTHERN.

Anti-Subsidy Movement—Military After Indians.

HELENA, Mont., 22.—A paper has been circulated and extensively signed by the business men of this place, protesting against the people of the territory voting aid to the Northern Pacific Railway, claiming that such a tax will be ruinous to the interests of the territory, and calling on the newspapers to oppose the subsidy.

General Gibbon and the military have arrived at this place, en route for the Yellowstone country, to bring the Indians in that section into subjection.

WESTERN.

The Spaulding Court-Martial.

SAN FRANCISCO, 22.—In the Spaulding court-martial, to-day, the testimony of C. B. Higgins went to show that Spaulding had signed a navy certificate for $13,850, payable to the witness, when the latter had no claim whatever on the Government. The body of the certificate was in Pinney's writing. The witness endorsed the certificate without examining it, on Pinney's representation that it was a promissory note made by Pinney. The certificate was then deposited in a savings bank as collateral for a loan of ten thousand by Pinney. In a subsequent interview Spaulding did not deny the genuineness of his signature.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Attempted Assassination. The Assassin Killed.

LONDON, 22.—A private letter dated Tunis, March 14, says—"We had great excitement here yesterday in consequence of the attempted murder of Judge Puliga, of the Italian Consulate, and the killing of the would-be assassin by the judge's dragoman. The body was brought, followed by an immense mob, to the Italian Consulate, and the turmoil was so great that troops were called out to guard the approaches to the Italian and American Consulates, and they had great difficulty in keeping the mob back for several hours with fixed bayonets leveled at them, and it was feared there might be a renewal of fanatical excitement which spread such alarm in Tunis some years ago. Colonel Puliga is the Italian Consular Judge at Tunis. It was understood that for some time there have been unpleasant relations between the Italian Consulate and Tunisian authorities. Some months ago the Consul neglected to pay an important ceremonious visit to the Bey; the palace authorities felt the affront keenly, but took no official action. Judge Puliga was walking or driving in the city, attended by his dragoman, when the attack was made."

Improvement on Exchange.

A better feeling prevails at the Stock Exchange; English railways are firm and there is a general improvement in prices. The market for foreign securities is quiet.

GERMANY.

About the Railway Scheme.

BERLIN, 22.—The Governments of the House of Darmstadt and, Brunswick, and those of most of the Thuringian Grand Duchies and principalities, it is understood, favor the imperial railway scheme, but the South German States are preparing a counter proposition for the control of the railway administration by separate States, with, as far as possible, uniformity in the tariffs and working regulations.
