The Industrialists Show Cause Before Judge Merritt Today.

AN ARRAY OF LEGAL TALENT.

Lawyer Rhodes and Arthur Brown Again at Bats.—Arguments of Counsel.

The hearing on the restraining order and order to show cause issued yesterday afternoon, under the direction of Chief Justice Merritt, in regard to the South settlement of the Industrial army now held by officers on the border of Davis county, began at 2 o'clock this afternoon, in the Third district court, before Judge Merritt.

Judge L. R. Rhodes, of Ogden, was again present as the legal representative of certain residents of Weber county, and of the Industrialist now under Mr. Smith's banner. On the other side were Judge Hugs, Judge Hoskinson and Attorney Arthur Brown.

The great interest taken in the proceedings was made manifest by the very large attendance of spectators, all the seats in the rear of the court room being occupied. A number of others, unable to gain admission, contented themselves by listening to the legal arguments close to the partially opened door, which was "guarded" by a court bailiff. A book of citations was within the bailiff's reach.

Upon taking his seat Judge Merritt intimated that if there were any expressions either of approval or disapproval on the part of the spectators, as he was the case yesterday, he should instantly have the court cleared.

Attorney Varian then arose and said he desired to enter an appearance and demurrer in regard to Warren E. Thompson and Edward McGlasson, two of the defendants who had been selected by the officers of this court as being with "John Doe," "Richard Roe" and the 300 other defendants included in the complaint on which these proceedings were taken.

Judge Zane was today associated with Judge Rhodes on behalf of the defendants and people of Weber.

While certain preliminaries were in progress Judge Rhodes and Attorney Arthur Brown several times crossed swords, until Judge Merritt made the call for order.

As an opening, Judge Rhodes moved the two grounds of his demurrer—that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; nor such facts as would entitle the plaintiffs to relief. Counsel then went on and read a lengthy answer, which set forth in substance that the defendants had done no wrong, and meant no wrong; that they were virtually held as prisoners by heavily armed officers, and their lawful progress impeded by threats; that they had committed no crime in the course of their march which they were not prepared to answer for; and the promise was given that if the present complaint was dismissed they would leave this place and "the Territory which they knew them will know them no more." In the course of his argument Judge Rhodes insisted that this was a question which appealed to the heart of every man; and that there was nothing in the complaint lodged against these defendants to warrant the interference of this court. If this injunction was to become perpetual, where, he asked, would this matter end? It would mean that the defendants must remain where they now are for the balance of their days, residents of Weber county, whether they want to or not. All these men did was to ask the permission of this Territory to walk peaceably across its soil to seek employment in the eastern states, and he asked that this question be decided by a Christian court in a Christian manner.

Attorney Varian followed on behalf of his clients and addressed himself to the court on a question of law. This bill, he said, was filed by Davis county; but where did it get its authority to appear in a court of chancery, to ask for a remedy only given by that court, in behalf of all the inhabitants of the county? When and how did it become the real party in interest here, and which of its property rights was in issue? A remedy in injunction only went to aid of property rights which were invaded, directly or indirectly, belonging to the party seeking relief. Counsel dismissed the question of this court's jurisdiction, and remarked that a matter of very serious moment was involved here which should be decided on the face of this bill alone.

Attorney A. Brown followed and was still speaking when the News reporter left at 5:30.

The arguments will occupy until late in the afternoon.

LIPPMAN AND MORRIS.

The County Recorder, His Record Book, and the Selectmen.

Before the adjournment of the county court yesterday afternoon there occurred a passage of words between Selectman Morris and County Recorder Lippman, arising out of the latter's application for a printed record book for use in his office. It may be here explained that printed record books consist of deeds and mortgages of a kind most frequently used by the public, greatly help the work of the recorder's office and make the most humble record possible. In 1888 the legislature passed the following:

"The county court of each county shall, from time to time, as may be necessary, provide the recorder of such county with well bound books, properly ruled, necessary to the execution of the duties of his office. They may procure books of printed forms to be filled up in the recording of any instrument, when the same may be done without abbreviation or erasure, and shall in all cases, where practicable, procure the necessary index and abstract books with proper headings. The cost of such books shall be paid by the county."

It was under this law that Recorder Lippman made his request yesterday afternoon. Selectman Morris moved that the request be granted with the statutory form of mortgage, but with no other printed mortgages. Mr. Lippman read the law on the matter and stated that the court could not say what should go in the printed record book. That was a matter entirely within the provision of the recorder after the court had allowed the requisition for a printed record. If the legislature had intended that only the statutory form deed and mortgage could be placed in printed record form they would readily have said so and would not have used the words "printed forms," which evidently meant more than one form. Besides, the statutory form deed and mortgage did not contain one hundred words and Mr. Lippman contended it would be quicker to write the whole instrument than to use such a printed form alone. The recorder added that he did not want such a printed record as Morris desired to impose upon him.

Eventually the matter dropped without any action being taken upon the application; but it is claimed that there is some spice, would-be against Mr. Lippman, who, in all fairness, will receive further his own printed records to such quantities as he may require.

No "News" Tomorrow.

The 30th of May, Decoration Day, has been established a general holiday by sentiment, custom and the statute. The News will yield to the Red, cross to the second and step the third of these mottoes, and will greet its patrons next on Thursday.

Democratic Societies.

The Democrats of Salt Creek were summoned last night by Messrs. F. S. Richards, Geo. W. Snow and Geo. R. Blair, after which a society was formed by the election of the following officers: John Taylor, president; Joseph H. E. Miller, first vice president; Chas. Holton, second vice president; Samuel Cotswain, secretary; Jas. B. Carlisle, treasurer; T. C. Isaac, C. A. Bolling, John Dougan, H. C. Collins and J. A. Cornwall, executive committee; Robert Hudson, Wm. M. Dixon and John W. Weiss, committee on membership.

In the Thirteenth ward last night a society was organized by the election of the following officers: President, Jas. A. Wilson; first vice president, M. H. Seeley; second vice president, F. G. C. Hixson; secretary, N. Fulbright; treasurer, F. W. Hoe; executive committee, A. C. Pratt, T. J. Anderson, J. J. McArthur and W. L. Burk; membership committee, Martin Lawson, J. W. Hamm, M. E. McIlmoyl.

While certain preliminaries were in progress Judge Rhodes and Attorney Arthur Brown several times crossed swords, until Judge Merritt made the call for order.

"Grandma's" Wedding Dress.

A city correspondent of the News sends the following for publication:

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Stuart celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Saturday, May 26, by giving a reception to their grandchildren. Mrs. Stuart showed them her wedding dress, fresh and bright, though worn away fifty years. The girls had great fun trying it on and laughing how grandma looked when she was a young and winsome bride.

AMUSEMENTS.

The World opens a two nights' engagement at the Theatre this evening. Harry Emery, one of the proprietors of the company, and one of the leading actors, has been in town several days shaking hands with old friends. He says on his little season to complete of business, for though he has encountered the depression everywhere, the World receipts have leap right up to a paying figure. Harry says the money he brings is needed to move and that the scenes of the "Harbor of Naples," "The deck of the steamer Fair Play," "The Shipwreck," "The Hall," "The Lunatic Asylum," and beautiful moonlight tableaux have been repeated on the local stage. The company has twenty Mr. Emery, L. O. Hart, Dan Knott, Charles A. Dudley, Miss Rose Wilder, Miss Annie Wisdom, and a number of others, which ought to insure a good reception of the play.

The Bicycle Races.

All two-wheels tomorrow afternoon, the weather permitting, the most interesting meeting of wheelmen ever held here will begin at National Park, corner of Tenth South and State streets. The program is an excellent one, and that there will be successful efforts at record breaking all who are familiar with the record work and training of the principal bicycler believe.

Two Suits Filed Today.

Minnie E. Jacob filed a suit for divorce this afternoon, in the Third district court, against her husband Wm. H. Jacob, on the ground of extreme cruelty. The parties married in this city in April, 1890, and plaintiff avers that from that time on the defendant has cruelly struck, assaulted, pinched and bitten her inequitably, making her life insufferable. She asks that her maiden name, Minnie E. Bunford, be restored to her.

Oscar W. Doyle, assignee of the Barton-Gardner Cabinetgrit sub today against John Lewis to recover an account of $181.50.
