NEWS OF THE WEST.

The Discovery of a Human Skull Recalls a Brutal Murder of Long Ago.

A PRISONER'S TROUBLE.

Losses to Cannery Men in Oregon.—A Widow's Terrible Death.—Miscellaneous.

Three carloads of citrus trees and plants have been shipped to the World's Fair to replenish San Diego's exhibit.

This is how the Denver News puts it: "Denver's police force will command no respect while it is tainted with dishonesty."

The Homeopathic Medical society of the state of Colorado has opened its seventh annual session at the Brown Palace hotel, Denver.

Miss Mary Derby, a young school teacher, recently arrived in Oakland, Cal., from Denver, where she had worked in Oakland, but thought that her ability and recommendations would secure her a place in the Oakland school department. She waited and worked, but could not get a place. Her disappointment preyed on her mind until she went insane and has been committed to the Agnews insane asylum.

At Seaside, Oregon, a peculiar and serious accident happened yesterday. Mrs. Clayton and Mrs. Steele of that place were out driving, and the horse, becoming frightened at an umbrella, ran up a steep embankment and overturned the buggy, which fell back on the occupants. Mrs. Clayton had her collar bone broken, and it is feared that she is internally injured. Mrs. Steele is badly hurt about the head.

Picket Holton, a clerk of Boise, Idaho, was drowned the other day in the Boise river. He tried to find the river in a buggy and was thrown out. He was kicked on the head and nearly drowned. He was rescued by passers-by, but, seeming to have become violently insane, he rushed down the river, eluding his keepers for two miles, and jumped into the river and was drowned. He was a son of Rev. A. J. Holton, an eminent divine of Kentucky.

Mrs. Hannah Horgan, a widow sixty years of age, has met with a terrible death at San Francisco. In the presence of her daughter she was struck down without an instant's warning by an iron girder weighing about 1000 pounds, which swung around upon her as it was being raised in front of a new masonry brick building at Market street. Mrs. Horgan had just left her home for a morning walk with her daughter. They were together when the girder struck Mrs. Horgan, and it was almost a miracle that Mrs. Abern did not share the terrible fate of her mother. The physicians at the receiving hospital made quick examination of Mrs. Horgan, but it is supposed that her back is broken.

The lower river cannery men at Astoria, Oregon, sustained a serious loss the other morning through the very high water in the Columbia. Between Chinook and Stand 1 land, across Baker's bay for a distance of three miles, are over 300 fish traps, each of them costing a minimum sum of $1000. The most valuable of these were built of heavy piles along the edge of the main channel of the river. Fifteen of the latter were completely washed away by the strength of the current, which also did a great deal of damage to the traps nearer the Washington shore. Fifteen of the traps destroyed were valued at $1500 each, making a loss of $22,500. In addition to this the damage done among the other traps is fully $60,000. The whole of the sifting of the demolished traps, including all gear and tackle, was washed out to sea, and at daylight not a vestige remained of any of the salmon seines that last night bordered the river channel. It is said to be impossible to replace any of the traps this season, and, as the structures nearest the channel caught the great majority of the fish, the loss in addition to the cost of the traps will be very great. It is feared that if the currents continue with their present force a large portion of the traps will be rendered useless, if not totally destroyed.

Philip Boegar is a pioneer and is reputed to be worth $100,000, yet he cannot find happiness because he is seldom free from the divorce court. Thus writes the San Francisco Chronicle. Mr. Boegar enjoys the distinction of having had five wives, and he finds it a very difficult matter to keep up the bills of his lawyers who have been defending him in the divorce court for nine years. Old Philip's locks have become white as snow and he has become a character on the street. Boegar's last experience in the matrimonial line proved to be a most disastrous one. He married a young wife, and, according to his own story, he has not had a day's happiness since. It has been one long, continuous fight, and the old man is beginning to get a little weary. Mrs. Boegar No. 5 was unable to agree with the old pioneer shortly after marriage and she thought he must be insane, as she had him arrested on a charge of insanity. Boegar made a hard battle in the courts and succeeded in keeping out of the asylum. This contest was followed by a suit for divorce on the part of the wife. The case was dismissed and then Boegar tried his hand at securing a separation. There was lively skirmishing in court, which also resulted in a dismissal. In spite of the advice of his friends Boegar made up with his wife and they commenced living together. In a very short time there was a sensation in the Boegar household, caused by the arrest of the aged husband on a charge of attempting to poison his wife. It was claimed by the young woman that he had placed rat poison in her rice. At all events the old man was held to answer the charge before the superior court and his case is now pending. As soon as he was arrested he sued his wife for a divorce again on the ground of cruelty, one of the charges being that she had accused him of attempting to poison her. The suit has recently been dismissed. In the meantime his wife has become a very poor prosecutor and does not show that interest in the case that she did when it was heard in the justice's court. As a result the prosecuting attorney hardly knows what to do with the case. A day or two ago Mrs. Catherine Boegar decided to settle the wrangling forever, so she brought suit in the superior court to obtain a divorce on the ground of desertion. It is said that the aged capitalist is willing that she shall have her desire. She says that his fortune is easily wrecked and that he really does not know whether he is a rich or a poor man.

One of the most brutal murders ever committed in San Francisco has been recalled by Peter Nelson, a laborer employed on the new building now in course of construction on California street, below Kerney, cutting up on a shovel of earth a hideous human skull. He was digging a hole in which to place a post near the middle of the street and had not thrown up more than a couple of feet of dirt when the skull appeared. Quite a number of idlers who saw the uncanny thing drew back in horror, but one more bolder than the others picked it up and laid it on top of the barrel of cement. There was much conjecture among the crowd as to how the skull began to be buried in the street and many a wild tale passed around. Eventually the skull was replaced in the hole by Nelson and covered with earth. Captain of Detectives Lees has probably hit the nail on the head, remarks the San Francisco Chronicle, when he says that the skull is undoubtedly that of Flores Domingo, a Mexican from Panama who, in 1880, was murdered in a room of a Mexican and Italian lodging house which formerly stood on the spot where the skull was unearthed. Domingo arrived here on a Panama steamer with a "lot of supplies" which he intended selling in the mines, and spoke a can of money, which he carried on his person. He dwelt at the lodging-house referred to and there met a Spaniard called Ramon Cadlo, to whom he sold his goods at a fair price. In the evening Domingo went out to see the sights, and indulged in more aguardiente than was good for him for late at night he returned to the lodging-house in far from a sober condition. He again met Cadlo, the man to whom he had made the sale, and with him took part in a game of roulette which was substituted every night in the lodging-house office. Domingo was considerable money, and at the seven time did not forget to indulge in a large amount of liquor. Early in the morning he went to his room. On the following day, he not having made his appearance, his door was broken and his dead body, minus the head, was found on the floor. Everything of value that Domingo possessed had been stolen. What became of the head nobody ever discovered. Although the premises were ransacked thoroughly the head could not be found. Simultaneously with the murder Cadlo disappeared. It was learned that he had sold the goods purchased from Domingo to a third party at a very slight advance on the price given. It was presumed that he murdered and robbed Domingo. Every effort was made to catch him, but Cadlo eluded all the officers who were put on his track. In the opinion of Captain Lees the head now found was that of Flores Domingo. He thinks that Cadlo, obeying some horrible fancy that suddenly took possession of him, carried Domingo's head into the cellar of the lodging house and buried it there.
