THE CARLSBAD SEASON.

The Fashionable European Watering Place, as Seen by a Salt Lake Tourist.

Carlsbad, Sept. 8, 1898.

(Written for the "News.)

Arriving about 4 p. m. from Dresden I found my way to Pupp's famous hotel, one of the finest in Europe. I fell into my comfortable quarters anticipating a pleasant week's stay. Connected with the hotel is the largest and finest concert garden in Carlsbad. Here you can see hundreds of people of all nationalities whiling away the day drinking various summer concoctions or sibbing an ice and listening to the orchestra discoursing various popular airs. Laziness seems to be the one absorbing study. I soon found myself doing justice to a very good beef steak with some equally fine peas. On all side sthe fashionable throng are moving about in a listless manner while others are sitting in the shade chatting over the topics of the day. Carlsbad is situated in Bohemia, Austria, close to the German frontier. It is built in a very pretty valley on all sides stretches a beautiful forest. The one drawing card is its springs, the water of which people travel from the four corners of the earth to get. They number about seven in all, the Sprudel being the largest. It throws a volume of water in the air about 15 feet in height. The water is very strong and must be taken under doctor's orders. I tried half a glass but the taste was too much for me, so to make it more to my cultivated taste I squirted the salt into it. But the water came out number one. I then tried vinegar, seeing the salt had lost its savor. The vinegar had a like effect on it decided I would water the lawn with it. Invalids who have run the race as long as possible until nature cried stop for the stomach's sake go to Carlsbad for repairs. The regulars generally take from three weeks to six, according to the disease. The patients stop all bad habits with the exception of smoking. As an hour to take on an average about four glasses of water a day besides during himself, he has to give vent to his feelings in an occasional all round oath. A great many fat people come to reduce their weight. The process they go through is somewhat similar. The only difference is they need to take a mud bath every day. Two tubs are placed in your bath room one full of soft slimy mud the other to wash off the mud. The mud baths are also very good for the complexion. One thing that amused me more than another was the Turkish baths. Vienna is called the Boston and one of the best in the world. Here you can see some of the funniest people the world contains. There were two or three Germans who looked as if they are big Aleutians. If ever human beings were warped out of shape, they were. It seems have taken extra pains when of fear to stick their chests into the pit of their stomachs. I often think if a temperance league would gather two or three such specimens and send them travel throughout the world giving lectures on the abuses of drink, exhibiting them as an example, it would have more effect than all their speeches on early death, starvation, etc., that we get on all sides from zealous temperance. I can't give a full description of those fellows. They are like all masterpieces in the art and sculpture line—must be seen to be appreciated. Another amusing sight in Carlsbad is to get up early in the morning and see the people come out to get their first glass of water. As it must be taken by seven o'clock, there are about two or three thousand who gather around the spring, all in a line waiting their turn, as prince and pauper have equal privileges in getting the water. The springs are controlled by the city, there being no charge for the water. Here you see a millionaire or duke moving slowly along in line with a pauper before or behind him. Each one carries his own glass strapped over his shoulder like a field glass. The line reminds me more of a London theater at the shilling door than anything else. At present everything is going full blast, the city being full of people of all sorts and nationalities, mostly of the wealthy classes. We have four princes, one king and equally as many princesses here at present, while dukes, lords, etc., are too numerous to count. One time interest is paying when he is thrown in contact with them day after day. The novelty of such things wears off. I have seen princes since I have been roaming around. That was in Russia. He was not one of your Hans Andersen style, of exceptional beauty and grace, but was a plain, homely mortal. He married an American girl from Boston, thinking she added to pedigree. It is not the mistake the latter, America is fairly represented here, by a number of well known people. We occasionally have a dance somewhere in town at which most all turn out. It is remarked on all sides, what graceful and pretty dancers the American girls are. The papers give them a big send off occasionally. European people will have to get up earlier in the morning to beat us at most things. American tourists dress and look better in the average than any other nation. Now you can see dress. I have seen more well dressed people in Carlsbad than any other city I have been in, the reason is that most of the people here were born with a silver spoon in their mouth, and come from fashionable centers such as Paris, London, New York, Vienna, and from all over the world. The season lasts until the latter part of September, then the people move to pastures new, mainly to the mountains for about three weeks, where they rest up, then for Paris life, where the stage of champagne suppers, whisky cocktails, brandy and sodas continues with renewed force until they are glad for the Carlsbad season to open again. There are numerous pretty drives into the country from here, where the scenery is grand. I was one for a horseback ride the other day with a friend of mine. It was the first time I had been on a horse since leaving home. Coming back we stopped into the River hotel for a few minutes. They have an Arab or a native from India dressed up in dressing, which robes. He had my horse. After I tipped him I asked me the native name, and said, "Mar from Jesus." I guess he was tired of the chase. I intend to have my photo taken and sent home. I have not grown any from the chase, I suppose. Just five days to Carlsbad, then west to Vienna, and Bude Pesth. As all are more or less acquainted with those places, I will let my story rest with an attempt at describing their beauties.

The increased valuation on personal property (except money) of 5 per cent ordered by the county board of equalization increases the assessed valuation of mortgages above their face value, and taxpayers subject to this Mrs. Jakeway, the county treasurer, said the matter before the board of county commissioners Saturday, but they decided that they could do nothing but to abide by the action taken by the county assessor, by the State board, and enforce collection of the tax assessed on the increased valuation. The question will no doubt be carried to the courts.

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. Will Payne's new novel The Money Captain is a story of Chicago. It is almost the best attempt ever made in fiction to give a dispassionate picture of the man who as the head of great corporations holds in his hands necessary to current material politics. It is likely that attempts will be made to prove that Mr. Payne's hero and his son are actually living men. The one is a well known capitalist, and there are two versions of his early career. The other discovers any such parallel. The one is a mere sketch, but the author discovers any such intention. Dodge is meant merely as a type.—Herbert S. Stone & Co., Chicago.

An important announcement for the autumn publishing season is that of a volume by the late Captain Ry Richard Burton. It is entitled The Jew, the Gypsy and El Islam. This is an extremely important study of these three subjects. The book was found a little earlier in England than in America, and the part concerning the Jews has already created violent controversy there. The book was edited by W. H. Wilkins, and since Lady Burton's death he seems to be allowed a free hand with Burton's literary remains. The American publishers of the book are Herbert S. Stone & Co., Chicago.

The Coronation of Wilhelmina, Queen of the Netherlands—1898, is the subject of the Illustrated London News, Weekly for October 1. There is a full-page reproduction of a portrait of the queen in her coronation robes, painted by Jacob Bonnefoi, and there are four pages of text and illustration. Dansky furnishes a letter from Paris from the special correspondent of Chicago Weekly in Amsterdam, and Dolmar furnishes a letter from Paris giving the situation of affairs in the Dreyfus case. The double-page picture this week is a representation of the battleship Massachusetts in dry-dock, Brooklyn navy yard, and the frontispiece of the number is a picture of Jesse Grant, Fire Area Post "A," Big Field Bikers' Camp at Camp Wikoff, drawn by H. Dilzier. An essay on The Tedic Note by Alice Meynell, The Drama, Literature, and Henry Hope's characteristic sketches, are other features of this issue.

Growing Children

Some children grow very slowly and are weak and sickly. They do not do their work or play. They are cross, peevish, fretful. They crave sugar. Anything or some stimulant or bowel tonic is taken greedily.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites is just the remedy for such children. It gives sound flesh, makes strong bones, healthy nerves.
