THE EVENING PAPER IS THE PAPER OF TODAY, THE MORNING PAPER IS THE PAPER OF YESTERDAY.

Deseret News.

EVENING — TRUTH AND LIBERTY

5 O'CLOCK EDITION.

NO. 281 — FRIDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1898, SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH. — VOL. XXXI.

TRANSIT OF MKINLEY.

He Reiterated Chief Executive's Daily Round.

TWO DECLAMATIONS BEFORE BREAKFAST

Booming Cannon and Shrieking Whistles Greet the President from the Iron of Morphous.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 21.—President McKinley rather addressed two immense audiences before he had breakfast at Indianapolis and before he was out of the hotel to show himself to the commemorative throng. Long before the appointed hour of the speaking and solid rows of people had begun to form in the north, south, east and west sections of the city, and when the President came to the window he was greeted with a roar of cheering that was heard for a long distance. Mr. McKinley was not giving his speech in the morning, but he had to show himself to the people.

The message of congratulation and thanks of which Chairman Hanna read the President at noon, I think, was sent early after 4 and at that hour a large number of Republicans had gathered in the parlors of the Denison hotel to congratulate the President on the occasion of his 55th birthday. Mr. Hanna read the message to the President and then the President was roundly cheered by a gathering that was not large, but was representative of the town. The President said he was very much obliged to the people for their good wishes, and he was very glad to be in Indianapolis, which was not what he had expected, but he was glad to have been here and such a crowd of patriotism is this country as he had seen in Indianapolis. He was very glad to be in Indianapolis on this occasion. North, south, east and west they had come to Indianapolis to do honor to the country. The President said he was very glad to be in Indianapolis on this occasion, and he was very glad to be in the city of the Hoosier State, which had done so much for the people of the United States. What it has done for the people of the United States, he could not tell in the few minutes he had to spend here. I know you are proud of your State, I know you are proud that this native born Hoosier was President of the United States. What it has done for this country, what it has done for the people of the United States, I know you are proud of it. (Applause.) I know you are proud that this native born Hoosier was President of the United States during the fifties of our country. (Applause.)

He said that the President was indeed a Hoosier born, Hoosier by adoption and Hoosier by choice. He said:

"My fellow citizens: About a week ago I received a telegram from the people of Indianapolis that they had arranged for a reception and was invited to come to the city of Torchlight. I thought it was a very fine thing for the people of the city of Torchlight. What it has done for the people of the United States, I know not. I know it has done for my own people, I know it has put more life into the people of the United States. What it has done for the people of the United States, I know not. I know it has put life into my own people, I know it has put life into the people of the United States. What it has done for the people of the United States, I know not. I know it has put life into the people of the United States. I know it has put life into the people of the United States. What it has done for the people of the United States, I know not. I know it has put life into the people of the United States. (Applause.)

"Fellow citizens, I thank you most cordially for the reception you have given me. I do not misinterpret the feeling which prompts the people to come to the station and give me a cordial greeting. I do not misinterpret the feeling which prompts the people of this great city