Smith

Finds Proof That Lucy Smith Came From Family of Consequence and Stability in Community.

(Special to the "News.") New York, June 12 .- Elder Brigham H. Roberts, who is here in connection with the publication of a new history of the Mormon Church, in the American Historical Magazine, has made a discovery in the Boston public library of important documentary evidence relating to the Church's early history. The evidence deals with the history of the Mack family, from whom Lucy Smith, mother of the Prophet Joseph, was descended. Three important recent books, attacking Mormonism, charge that this line of descent was through inconsequential people atflicted with epilepsy and insulty. Elder Roberts has found indisuitable evidence that has found indisputable evidence that has found minispinable evidence that the antecedents of the prophet's mother were among the best known residents of New Hampshire, and one near rela-tive, a brother, rose to the grade of brigadier-general of the state troops that turned out during the Revolution-ory war.

ary war. Since the abandonment of the Spald-Since the abandonment of the Spald-ing theory in accounting for the Book of Mormon, and of the theories that Joseph Smith, the prophet, practised de-liberate fraud, the attack on the book is now concentrating on a pathological study, of the prophet and his family with the view of showing that mentally the prophet was defective and was five the prophet was defective, and was giv-en to epileptic fits and to seeing visions due to mental delusions. Tucker, who wrote in 1867, originated this theory and it has lately been seized upon by a writer named Reilly, by Lynn in his "Story of Mormonis and Alexander Stephens, in a History of the United States, repeats it, and so far the most difficult element in meeting the attacks has been the absence of definite information concerning the an-cestry of Lucy Smith Elder Roberts, while at work in the Boston library, found in the genealogi-cal department a 'volume entitled 'History of Glisum,' by Slivanus Hay-ward, M. A. Glisum was the town from which the prophet's mother came,

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

In running through the volume it was found that biographical notes were included on the life of Lucy Smith's father, Solomon Mack, and also of included on the life of Lucy Smith's father, Solomon Mack, and also of three of her brothers, Solomon, Jason and Stephen. All three of these citi-zens of Gilsum, it is noted, fought through the Revolutionary war. Jason afterwards became a Christian minis-ter while Stephen rose to be a brig-adler general. These boys owned ex-tensive areas of land, and were the builders of the flour mills on which the town's prosperity rested. Also they built the first dams ever erected in the built the first dams ever erected in the Connecticut river, and Solomon became the inventor of a diving suit used in working under the water on these dams.

This information, establishing the Macks as people of consequence and stability in their community, will fur-nish definite data with which to meet schools. the oft repeated slanders that the Smiths in Palmyra were a class of "cake peddling," ginger-beer selling mendicants who peddled such wares from push carts rather than participat-ing in the active pioneering work that occupied the brain and brawn of the best class of citizens. Heretofore the only definite know edge of the Mack family in the posses only definite knowsion of the Church, has been a brief allusion to them in the history Prophet written by Lucy Smith, his mother.

"We visited all the Mediter-ranean ports," said Mr. Wey, "and re-turned by way of continental Europe, England and Ireland. They are all fine countries and well repay a visit, but we found nothing like America and Salt Lake City. Germany is, perhaps, the most properous country on the other side."

most properous country on the other side." Mr. Wey stated that nothing definite had been decided on with reference to the Beck's Hot Springs property, acquir-ed before his departure for Europe by himself and James Hreen. "We would like to make it into a health resort." said he, "but it would take a lot of money. I do not know what Mr. Breen has framed up in my absence, but I visited some foreign health resorts and got some pointers."

MOTORMAN IS ASSAULTED.

Two Young Men Are Arrested and And Identified by the Victim.

H. S. Dillies, a motorman on the Saltair depot line, was the victim last night of a brutal assault by two young men, suffering in the attack several bad pruises about the head and the loss of bruises about the head and the loss of several teeth. Later in the evening H. T. Slime and H. W. Lee, two young men who were identified by Dillies as his assailants, were arrested by the po-lice and heid in default of $50 ball. The attack, according to the motor-man, was without provocation, and seems to have been the outcome of a desize of the young weap while in a desire of the young men while in a drunken mood to create a disturbance. The assault took place near the Saltair depot, the men first attacking the mo-torman while he was on the platform, when they struck him repeatedly, and then after he had beaten them off they resorted to throwing rocks.

SALT LAKE IN A NUTSHELL.

A new book on Salt Lake City has just issued from the press. It is entitled "Salt Lake City Past and Present," and is edited and published by E. V. Fohlin of this city. The author has compressed into a work of a little over 200 pages an excellent history of the city, and has illustrated it with numerous portraits of prominent men and many cuts of familiar scenes in and about the city from the time the pioneers entered the valley up to the present. The book deals with nearly every thing connected with the city that the ordinary citizen ought to know, and as the information is reliable and is systematically arranged, the work should prove to be a popular work of reference
