He died last and she is suing Mrs. Sarah L. Rowland, the administratrix, for $5,000.

She was asked what personal service he had rendered Mr. Wells, and answered: "I poured his collars and ties, combed his hair and fried an egg at the breakfast table. Before he started for business I poured his collar and tie on him, combed his hair and fried an egg at the breakfast table. Before he started for business I poured his coffee and gave him his cane. When he came home at night I brought him his slippers, took off his shoes and put on his dressing gown."

"What did you call him?" Mrs. Edgecomb was asked.

"Uncle Erk, or Uncle Rasbury." That was at his own request, he called me Elizabeth and sometimes Sis."

"Did you ever go out with him?"

"Oh, yes. Ma took me driving and to the theatres. I always regarded myself as his companion and housekeeper."

COXEY, BROWNE AND JONES.

The Trial of the Commonwealers in Washington.

Peace's Address in Behalf of the Defendants—the District Attorney Discusses the Case.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Congressman Peace, of Colorado, in the police court today, made the closing argument in behalf of the commonwealers. He said no one who heard the evidence expected a conviction. "Mr. Coxey came to ask for the enactment of laws," said Peace, "which he believed, and therefore sense of others believe, to be of inestimable advantage to the unemployed." Coxey's plan might be foolish, but he had come to present it peacefully at the head of an orderly body of American citizens, and had as much right to petition Congress as anybody else. Representative of large interests, coming here as paid lobbyists to corrupt Congress, and a warm welcome has been men who come here barefooted, tramping through the snow, and led by a man who had the courage of his convictions, to be invited to open the doors of a jail built through taxation upon the citizens?

Peace commented upon the fact that for the first time during his term the district attorney himself had come into the police courts to prosecute a case, thus showing that the administration was behind the prosecution. "Tomorrow Coxey will be a free man by your verdict," said Peace, "if he will appear before the labor committee of Congress under the resolution of Mr. Bell of Colorado, to devise means of giving employment to the unemployed, and be listened to more attentively than any paid lobbyists, I can assure you. Whatever will be written of the Coxey movement, let it not be said that twelve citizens of Washington branded the honest well-meaning man as a criminal."

District Attorney Birney discussed the case briefly. He spoke of the senator from Nebraska, looking far over the heads of the jury to talk to his constituency on the distant prairie, a member for Kansas talking to the courts before of his state, and the gentleman from Colorado talking to his open southern constituency.

Terry's bill will seek to incorporate this ruling into a permanent statute of law.

TAKING A HORSE.

Fred Gleason Convinces the Victim Trembler of His Superiority.

NEW YORK, May 8.—It was a fashionable horse show assemblage that filled the boxes at Madison Square garden last night when Fred. Gleason, the well known horse trainer, met the vicious Iowa stallion Trembler in the arena for a finish fight. There were fully 8,000 persons present.

At 9:45 p. m. o'clock four men with reins standard to the nose and head gear of the horse led him plunging into the ring. While all hands under the last lines Gleason tickled his ears and legs with a whip, causing him to snort and roar with rage. The tamer's first move was to cautiously approach and fire several shots from a revolver held close to Trembler's head. This seemed to overawe him and when Gleason essayed to fasten a hopple to one of Trembler's front pasterns he met with not much resistance. With a pulley rope running from this hopple to a girth, Gleason lifted the foot at will and soon convinced his ugly subject that the man was master of the situation. As the horse became more and more helpless through the use of this device he seemed to lose heart and courage, and it was by rapid degrees that the tamer bridled, harnessed, hitched and drove the big horse about the garden.

IN COURT AT BEAVER.

Trial of an Indian for Murdering His Squaw.

WADE NICHOLAS HABEAS CORPUS.

Grand and Petit Jurors Empaneled.—Judge Boreh's Able Charge to the Grand Jury.

(Special Telegram to the NEWS.)

BEAVER, Utah, May 8.—The attendance in court was largely increased this morning, the room being completely filled.

There is but one murder case this term, that of John Wickette, for killing his squaw, last year. He was arraigned yesterday afternoon and counsel was appointed for him. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting him to understand the indictment and the proceedings generally, the interpreter having to do a good deal of explaining. Thus morning he pleaded not guilty. There is some little sympathy for Wickette in case of the hardship spoken of and the belief that he has a good defense. His counsel are preparing to make a stubborn fight for him.

In the celebrated case of Wade Nicholas, on application for a writ of habeas corpus, to extricate him from a 15 years' sentence in the penitentiary, Judge Boreh yesterday ordered a further hearing. The case was argued and submitted last December. It will soon be disposed of now.

After some preliminary proceedings this morning, the grand and petit juries were empaneled, after which a recess was taken till 2 p. m.

The grand jury presents singular circumstances of all but one or two being Mormons, and those who are not now have been. The judge's charge was lengthy and decidedly able and fair. Thomas Blackburn was appointed foreman of the grand jury.

AFFAIRS IN INDIA.

An Uprising Against British Rule Feared.

LONDON, May 8.—Colonel Malleson, an eminent authority on Indian affairs, has written an open letter to the newspapers on the expected uprising of the natives in India which was treated seriously by the Spectator on Saturday. Colonel Malleson says that the Spectator's estimate of the gravity of the situation is not one which is exaggerated. Undoubtedly some serious disturbance is impending and prompt action on the part of the government is imperative.

There may not be an uprising on Thursday, the anniversary of the Meerut mutiny in 1857, but it is bound to come if immediate measures are not taken to prevent it.

The Sikhs have a superstitious dread against the taking any important action on an ill-omened date. The writer advises the government to cease hamstringing with the laws relating to marriage, the sale and use of opium and other so-called reforms, which the native regard as mere meddlesome, and to quietly, but closely watch the movements of the natives in the meantime.

IN CONGRESS.

Senator Hoar Discusses the Tariff Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Senator Hoar spoke on the tariff bill today. The Senate was asked, he said, to set aside the laws upon the people had got. The tariff bill was born of an unnatural union between two hatreds, that of section against section and that of class against class. It was not a free trade nor a protectionist measure. The senator argued that upon high wages depended the constant improvement in the manufacturing processes which increased production and diminished the cost. It was said that you cannot interfere with the natural laws of industry and trade, but Hoar contended that all progress in human life rested upon such interference.

The credentials of Gear, senator-elect from Iowa, were presented today by Senator Allison, but the question as to the oath being taken they were laid upon the table.

The tariff bill was then taken up.

The Sullivan army is camped a little south of town. Mayor Smith has promised Randall that his army will be furnished with supplies if they will leave town.

THE TARIFF AMENDMENTS.

A Brilliant Conglomerate Says Mr. Reed.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 8.—Reed authorizes the following concerning the tariff amendments made public today: "The presentation of the Senate finance committee of eighty-one pages of amendments, apparently more than 400, is a delicate compliment to Mr. Wilson and his House of representatives. It virtually says that the House bill is right enough an hour or five hundred points. This will hardly tend to restore confidence in the country, especially as every amendment assumes of prior ignorance of present tariff. Evidently it will be the duty of the Senate to fully investigate the proposed amendments, for when the committee on finance returns hearings because it knows intuitively all things, but finds up some kind of backdoor influence that it has made four hundred mistakes, it is evident the committee will bear watching."

SILVER IN ENGLAND.

A Motion in the House of Commons Counted Out.

LONDON, May 8.—The collapse in the bimetallic movement in the House of Commons on Friday, when Samuel Smith's motion that the government endeavor to secure a stable par of exchange for gold and silver by international agreement was counted out, has caused much comment. The secretary of the bimetallic league says the apathy of the House is due to the fact that Smith's motion had only a second place at the evening sitting and the attendance was small, but a full day's discussion will be secured later when a division could occur.

IN SOUTHERN SUMMIT COUNTY.

"Traveler's" Notes and Observations on the Way.

WOODLAND, Summit county, Utah, May 5.—The people in the south end of Summit county are last completing the planting of their grain. The weather is still quite cold nights and the snow still lies in great heaps close to some of the fields.

At Wanship meetings have been held in relation to home industry, and the starting of some line of manufacture was urged. It looks as if a creamery will be built there in the near future. It is a splendid point for such an institution. All the people of this locality are stock raisers and small farmers, all keep cows, and it will cost but a trifle more to feed and milk cows than to feed and not milk them, as is now done; or, where they are milked, the butter produced is a drug on the market, never selling for more than fifteen cents, for ten cents a pound, while a good article of creamery butter will bring twenty to twenty-five cents a pound wholesale. Park, Kamas and Woodland each are points where creameries and cheese factories could be established by the people on the co-operative plan and this would tend to lessen their present cry of hard times, which are indeed more imaginary than real, as is evidenced in their actions and surroundings. Talk with the farmers and stockmen. Ask them if there has been more money spent in social pleasure in some of these places than ever before, and in my travels through the Territory I think I see need of a great reform in our way of living, if we may hope for greater prosperity, which can only come where there is perfect thrift. Industry produces prosperity and without frugal industry as communities we cannot hope to be prosperous.

There are many praiseworthy improvements in this part of the country. New and commodious barns have taken the place of the old, dilapidated sheds with straw covering; farm machinery is more generally housed under cover and taken care of, yet this reform is not without some of the sights seen elsewhere—harvesters left in the field, milky cows stepping days in the snow, and threshing machines exposed to the elements.

The lumber business this year at Brian cost a few years ago now seems to be almost at a standstill, but it is hoped it will revive.

A good spirit prevails among the people. Meetings seem to be well attended and a general spiritual awakening is apparent.

The crop prospects were never better at this season of the year.

More anon.

WAS HOME ON A VISIT.

A Salt Lake Lady Interestingly at Montana Mining Camps.

A representative of the News and a personal chat last evening with Andrew Dalbie, an expert engineer and machinist, who for the last two weeks has had charge of the immense plant of the Pinos Altos Mining and Milling company in the Sierra Madres mountains. Last night, after a visit of two or three weeks with his family in this city, Mr. Dalbie left for Mexico, where he expects to remain until Christmas.

Discussing mining matters in Mexico, Mr. Dalbie stated that there were three districts in the Sierra Madres mountains that are yielding to some cases enormous profits. These were the Jesus Maria, Pinos Altos and Chihuahua. All of them, he said, are turning out vast quantities of the mining gold and silver. In each of these districts there is also a great deal of low grade ore and the process to refine them for extracting are very simple as compared with the way in which the work is done in the United States. With the same facilities there as here Mr. Dalbie says that the low grade mines could be made to pay handsomely. There is a population of about 15,000 in the three districts named and the number is increasing rapidly. Wages for skilled workmen are higher in the Sierra Madres than in the United States. The Mexican peons, however, get only $1 to $1.50 a day.

The Mexican government is offering every inducement to foreign capital and immigration and as a result development work is being done very fast and the resources of the country shown up.

It Was Thought "Rather Steep."

In a suit for foreclosure by default called up in Judge Merritt's court this morning, for the purpose of obtaining a formal order, one of the attorneys present (D. C. Eckersley) was appointed to for his opinion as to what would constitute "a reasonable attorney's fee." The amount involved was $1,120, and the sum of $100 was placed as a fair allowance in the case.

Judge Merritt—Well, I think that's rather too steep—$100 for $1,120 by default. I will allow $75.

This is not the first time that his honor has been exercised in the "equation" in such a matter, and seems to have received upon cutting down whenever he considers the circumstances at all warrant such a step.

Arrested in This City.

Formation is the charge upon which Deputy Marshal Roman Cannon has arrested, in this city, Gustav Christensen, on the request of one of the deputy U. S. marshals of Devier county. The following telegram was received from the deputy, who expects to reach here tomorrow to take the accused man: "Charge, counterfeiting; bond, $5,000; if any. Await grand jury at Neph." That is all that is known of the matter here at present. Christensen will remain in the penitentiary until the officer arrives. But $5,000 reads like a pretty high bond for this class of offense.

An Absurd Regulation.

There is a good deal of "kicking" over the order issued by the superintendent of waterworks regarding lawn sprinkling. The sprinklers are permitted only two hours out of the twenty-four—from 5 a. m. to 7 p. m. In consequence of this unusual restriction for the time of the year a number of people are being disciplined with the purpose of bringing about a change. It certainly seems absurd to think the lawns in such an extent at a time when thousands of gallons of water are permitted to go to waste. Let the lawns have all they want now while water is plentiful. The time of scarcity will come soon enough when the restrictive rule will be applied as a matter of necessity.

Cause of Cooper's Death.

Coroner Taylor today held an inquest and autopsy over the remains of Peter Cooper, the man who dropped dead on Plum alley yesterday. The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased came to his death from an attack of acute congestion of the lungs and heart, superinduced by dissipation.

Up to a late hour today nothing had been learned concerning the whereabouts of any of the dead man's relatives or of his early life.

He will be given a pauper's burial tomorrow.

Saloonkeeper on Trial.

C. H. Meyer, an East Temple street saloonkeeper, was on trial in the police court this afternoon on a charge of interfering with an officer while attempting to make an arrest. The offense, it is claimed, was committed on Saturday evening last. Officer Gillette is the complaining witness. The case dismissed and got a jury trial.

AIMED AT HIS HEART

Jacob Nielson, a Drunken Bingham Miner, Attempts to Kill Himself.

HE FAILS AND IS SENT TO JAIL.

He Had Been On a Protracted Spree, Had Spent His Money and Was Temporarily Insane.

Jacob Nielson, a miner by occupation, who comes in from Bingham on Thursday last and who has been "seeing the town" ever since, attempted to kill himself late morning about half past eight o'clock by firing a bullet into his head. That he was not successful and that the pioneer was deprived of tragedy has no other defense which are difficult to account for.

Since his arrival in this city Nielson has been spending the most of his time at saloons and Commercial street resorts. It is believed that he had a considerable amount of money, and the class of companions with which he associated encouraged him in spending it and soon it had almost entirely disappeared and resorts took possession of his money and he refused to be robbed. One man who knew something of his conduct says that he met not acquaintance he came to Salt Lake and was engaged with the liquor he drank in operating highbinder games.

Last night he determined to take his own life and early this morning he succeeded his intention in as complete. He accordingly went to a second hand store on Commercial street and asked to purchase a revolver but was refused. He went to two other shops with the same result. His friends had provided him and notified the dealers of his condition. For a time Nielson seemingly gave up his despair, and finally went to a lodging house on Ruth's drug store at the corner of East Temple and Second South streets. There he was allowed to handle a revolver on the pretext that he intended to buy it. The weapon was examined and he asked for a cartridge. That also was handed him and he placed it in one of the chambers and fired a flash turned the muzzle of the gun to his breast and pulled the trigger. In less than a minute the place was filled with people to ascertain the cause of the shooting. Officer Lund who was near by as he time was the man in charge and conveyed him to the police station in the Hooper block.

An examination disclosed a bullet hole in Nielson's chest directly over the heart. On sitting the man the ball deflected and carried outward toward the arm, ploughing a furrow as it went and causing a flow of blood that effectually ended the attempt to drive down his body to his shoes.

The wound is suicide would give no reason for his rash act and was placed in the city jail to sober up.
