AIDING AMERICAN FEDERATION.

Giving Jonathan's nose a twoth seems to be a fad with which the European nations are fond of amusing themselves. They don't appear to be very particular now sharp the twitch is, either. Britain's action regarding Alaskan territory, and later her attitude in the Nicaragua affair; the insolent contempt with which Spain treats Secretary Gresham's demand for apology, and France's summary procedure with respect to ex-Consul Waller, all show that the European powers evince little disposition to treat the United States with that courtesy and consideration which they demand from this government and from each other. In one way, logically speaking, it may be said that recent political events in this nation have indicated that the mass of the people are not in harmony with the policy of the administration, and that therefore, as the people have administered a rebuke, foreign nations may treat the administration with contempt, for if a government is not respected a house divided will not claim respect abroad. This line of reasoning, however, is too superficial for the existing situation, as European nations yet may find it their destiny to have dealings with those who dwell on the American continent. Whatever may be the view taken by the American referee party, the expression thereof is not to be construed as an act of contempt toward the government, but, first of all, as would justify our unique power in European and colonial dominions lying on the United States.

It is no old saying that "pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall," and it is not impossible that the manner displayed by European powers toward the action on this continent may result adversely to their colonial and other interests in America. To say that this end might be effected by any warlike procedure on the part of the United States would not be consistent with past experience or present indications, for if this government has displayed any special quality in its relations with other powers it has been that of a very large amount of patience and forbearance. At the same time it has established a necessity to maintain on all suitable occasions with other American peoples in antagonizing European domination upon this continent. This is the spirit of the Monroe doctrine. It is the source of sympathy given to Cuban patriots. Were any of these acts, actions, it is the sentiment of broad liberality which would see the whole of America controlled by the votes of her inhabitants, to the exclusion of foreign royal adults. And the more diversifiably the United States is treated by Europeans with respect to matters that concern any part of the American continent, the more pronounced will be the sentiment and action in favor of solidifying the interests of the whole people from the North and South America and the islands adjacent.

Whatever she may be the immediate outcome of the instances which have provided American national dignity of late, it may be considered that they will induce American federation to some form or other, to the exclusion of European interference on this side of the water. Five years ago Mr. Blaine, as secretary of state, made efforts for a pan-American union, but the time was not ripe. He was not the first suggestion in that direction, however, for a movement in that line took hold among American statesmen since the beginning of the century. It is being augmented by the later events, and the outlook of distant future may show that the European attitude towards America has accelerated to effect a union by which Cuba, Canada, and other places now giving allegiance to Old World powers may complete sovereignty in a South Line of American republics. European colonies for and adjacent toward American nations or peoples of greater city towns to consider the latter for purposes of our more defense.

HEAT BATH SUCCESS.

The elevation of deaf mutes has been attended with some wonderful success in Utah, the people here showing even better than the regulars for other parts of the country. There are now ample facts for the public society for instruction of hearing for these physically unfortunate persons, and the good effects are so apparent in those who have been made beneficiaries as to afford the highest encouragement for continuing in the work. Many lives which otherwise would have been in some respects a failure to themselves and associates have been transformed into years of comfort and usefulness.

The number of deaf mutes in this community is not very large, therefore the question of what industrial training they should receive has not been difficult to settle. Shoemaking, cabinet work, wood-carving, sewing, type-setting, and other trades are within their reach, and in some places bookkeeping and sewing are added to the list. It may be that one of the vocations cannot most be abandoned in its present aspect—that of compositor. In fact it is now recommended by authorities on deaf mute education that as typewriting machines are coming into general use, deaf mutes be discouraged from entering into that trade, although it is one which presents few obstacles, as the faculty of seeing is the chief one called into action by a fairly educated person in order to do the work properly. But even with the exclusion of typesetting from the occupations which deaf mutes may enter, the progress of their education is such as to afford fresh opportunities in many new directions for their independence in earning a livelihood. The deaf mute education is a success that may yet lead into broader fields for ameliorating and improving the condition of the physically unfortunate.

AN OPINION GIVEN.

Recently Mr. J. D. Tolmer, of North Dakota, visited the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, and after carefully examining the country located in Rockingham, he writes to Mr. V. Hawley, Land and Immigration Agent, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Baltimore, Maryland, as follows: "I have been in nearly every county and territory of the United States, and am made in my opinion that this valley surpasses all other sections in the Union. The lands are low in price, and climate probably equal. I think you ought to be satisfied if a man had seven hundred thousand acres of Shenandoah Valley land to take in this country."

that conclusion then that the invented writer of these hostile prophecies must belong to one of two classes of persons: those who are so bigoted that they allow their hatred to warp their sight and sense, or those whose disordered stomachs has colored with nightmare and spectre.

TO HONOR PATRIOT DEAD.

The patriotic societies which have been organized the past few years are agitating the question of a monument to mark the graves of those patriots who died in British prison ships during the R volution, and were buried at Brooklyn park, Long Island. Eleven thousand of the patriots died on board the Jersey and other vessels then anchored in Wallabout bay, the present location of the Brooklyn navy yard. During excavations there in 1808, twenty hogsheads of bones were dug up, which were buried with impressive ceremonies in a vault in Brooklyn in 1808. No monument was ever erected, and the wooden lids over the vault became a public scandal from absolute neglect. After considerable effort on the part of citizens of Brooklyn, the bones were removed to Washington park. At that place the only state which includes the place of repose is a tablet on which occurs the inscription: "To the patriots now to be stock a suitable monument, by which the memory of the patriot martyrs will be preserved to a period that at least will recall to those who visit the place some idea of the great sacrifice made to secure American liberty.

MRS. MARY WESTFALL, who died in California on the 19th instant, at the age of 95 years, enjoyed the distinction of having administered to President Cleveland several spankings when he was a boy about eight years of age. The President's father was a Presbyterian preacher in the village of Clinton, N. Y., where Mrs Westfall resided, at that time young Grover was very mischievous, and so annoyed the lady that several times she inflicted personal punishment upon him. Mrs. Westfall was a witness of the first successful trial of the steamboat, viewing the Clermont on its initial trip on the Hudson; she was a young married woman when Lafayette revisited the United States in 1824, and the famous Frenchman spent a night at her house on his way to Niagara Falls. She was the widow of James Westfall, who was the junior law partner of William H. Seward, at Auburn, N. Y., in the early forties.

Yale's Hair Tonic.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: It gives me great pleasure to call the attention of the public to Yale's Excelsior Hair Tonic, which is the first and only remedy known to chemistry which positively turns gray hair back to its natural color without dye. It has been proved that Prof. H. Yale's wonderful women discoveries made the most valuable of all classes of discoveries. Thus Yale generously submits to all and gives the public her solemn guarantee that it has been tested in every conceivable way, and has proved equal to be the only Hair Specific. I urge you to try it immediately, as it means a business growth. Contains no poisonous ingredient. Physicians are invited to analyze it. It is not sticky or greasy, on the contrary it makes the hair soft, pliable, fluffy, and leaves it in curl. For gentlemen use it free with fear a little gray, streaks gray, entirely gray and with BALD HEADS it is specially recommended. All druggists sell it. Price $1.

If druggist refuses to substitute show them.
