UTAH LEGISLATURE.

COUNCIL.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

C. F. No. 16, to provide for a uniform system of free schools finally passed; with 10 numerous amendments.

THIRD READING OF BILLS.

C. F. 32, regulating the compensation of clerks of district courts in criminal cases, passed. This measure gives the clerks at Provo $450, clerk of Ogden $600, Clerk at Salt Lake $900, clerk at Beaver $200, Clerk of Supreme Court, $750, per annum respectively.

C. F. No. 35, providing for the payment of jurors, witnesses and jailers, finally rejected; and creating and defining the duties of court commissioners, received its third reading and passed, Bank and Gentlemanly voting no.

This bill names as Court Commissioners H. H. Bishop of Ogden, J. B. Tuckett, Provo, W. H. Hadley, Beaver and D. D. Pyper, Salt Lake City, and in case another district is formed, the Governor is authorized to appoint the Court Commissioner. The compensation of these Commissioners per annum is placed at $500 each for Ogden and Provo, $750 at Beaver, $400 at Salt Lake, and $200 per annum for the one appointed by the Governor under the act. It makes witness fees $2 per day and 10 cents per mile one way for actually travelling and 20 cents per mile one way by other conveyance. Stenographic reporters are allowed $5 per day and 10 cents per 100 words transcribing.

Mr. Lund presented a bill from Washington county for maps furnished the Assessor and Collector, amount $28.25. Referred to committee on claims. At 4.30 adjourned.

HOUSE.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

A large number of new bills were introduced and referred, after which the third reading of bills began.

H. F. 9, by Arnell, for an act to amend section 2780 of the Compiled Laws of 1888, relating to the fees of mining inspectors. The amendment provides for the striking out of the words "Pay for the services of county recorders" and substituting therefor the words "By the by-laws of the mining district in which notice is recorded, or said rules are made." Passed.

H. F. 26, by Ferry, for an act authorizing the sale of public lands for the benefit of the University of the Dead. On motion of Marshall consideration of the bill was made the special order for next Tuesday.

H. F. 31, by Montgomery, for an act to fix the liability of corporations in case of accidents to employes by reason of the negligence, carelessness, or of any employe or servant of the corporation. After a debate lasting an hour or more Marshall, Ferry and Arnell opposed, Dee bill was killed by a vote of 8 ayes to 14 noes.

H. F. 55, by Tatton, a bill of interest to stockholders, passed by a vote of 19 ayes to 8 noes.

The bill is as follows:

Sec. 1. That section 2254 of the Compiled Laws of Utah, 1888, be amended by inserting at the end of said section, after subdivision 3, the following subdivisions, to be numbered 4 and 5.

"4. To construct or maintain any aerial or yard to be used for the purpose of shoving or slipping of sheep, within one mile of any stream of water used by the inhabitants of any town, city or settlement for domestic purposes, where the refuse or filth from said aerial or yard would naturally find its way in said stream of water by action of the elements.

"5. To herd cattle, horses, or sheep within one mile of any stream of water used by the inhabitants of any town, city or settlement for domestic purposes."

The council amendment the passage of C. F. 32, as to regulating the compensation of the clerks of district courts in criminal cases.

Adjourned.

Tail and Aristocracy.

The old time masters of the farmers, who laid the foundation of, and instituted the feudal landed aristocracy, to enslave with wife generally freedmen. As soon as they had the power to do so they made the whole farming population their subject. Yes, in these times, and almost without exception, all farmers were serfs.

The swordsmen, pirates, and captains of these marauding, plundering, murdering raiders, were of course aggressive, despotic, grasping, cruel, reckless and blasphemy. They put themselves in possession of the land, and compelled farmers to be their slaves. And by degrees, under a system of feudal aristocratic rule, the original farmers were put in a kind of moderate slavery, that admitted of the possibility of a continuing to rule them of the fruits of their labors.

Sometimes these warlike and plundering captains were called kings. Some of them it is true were benefactors to their fellow; but each were lord and or tetrarch.

The tillers of the soil gain their livelihood, peaceably, and without contention with the Great Giver of the produce of their toil. Hence the farmer's occupation, as a general thing, does not engender a disposition for combativeness, strife, greed, etc., and what today is sometimes called progression.

Therefore, considering the utmost difference of interest between the people, in a commonwealth, is it any wonder, that what they have written on the pages of history, are but as they are?

And therefore, as long as farmers do not acquire a more equal intellectual, social and political standing, compared with the money lords, and do not organize for self protection, they will be imposed upon by that other class.

In our time there are filibusters, marauders and raiders on the borders of our commonwealths also, but with some exceptions, more or less approaching in their outward manner, as they have, to a new form, taken up exactly the same line of business as their prototypes of old; to rob the produce of the fruit of his toil, now, as in feudal times; but with a good deal more fraudulent, financial and commercial skill in manipulation.

Of course legislators can do something against the extortion of trusts, railway, canal, telegraph and other companies, but the main remedy, at the present time, if there is any—is in having the producers unite, organize and work for self protection. C. A. M.

TEN CENTS A QUART FOR APPLES.

A Sample of Prices That People Who Live in Cities Pay Here to Pay.

"How much for the apples?" asked a Harlem woman of the grocer.

"Ten cents a quart," answered the grocer.

"Johnnybaghat!" exclaimed the woman's mate, who had come on from home to visit her. "Ten cents a quart! Why, that's $2.50 a bushel, so that's nigh onto eight dollars a barrel. When?"

"But they are very nice apples, marm; every one sound and big," pleaded the grocer.

"They's just as good apples as them selling at a dollar a barrel down in Maine this very minute, barrel thrown in," replied the down east aunt. "I'd like to know what business you've got charging eight dollars a barrel for apples that you can buy for one dollar a barrel."

"But that's down in Maine, marm," replied the grocer, "a long ways off from here."

"But it don't cost no seven dollars a barrel to get 'em on to here from Maine, does it?"

"No, marm, but we don't get no apples here for one dollar a barrel, now mind you. If we got 'em for $3 to a barrel we do well."

"Well, call it $3.50 a barrel that you pay, sure it's a little bit larger barrel than you're charge now's a hundred per cent profit."

The grocers hadn't thought about that, he said. Everybody else was selling at the same price and "somebody was kickin." Then he went on to explain that people couldn't expect to buy their groceries so cheaply, getting their supplies in dribbles, and that grocers couldn't afford to put so small percentage of profits into their prices when they sold a quarter quantities as would be ample in the case of large transactions.

"Well, what do they want to use such small quantities for?" demanded the down east aunt. "For my part I never heard of such a thing as a quart of apples! Sure I come here visiting, I guess I ought to know what I live that ever boys has a peck of apples at a time. A quart of apples! I wonder what Juthum's way to that?"

"Who's Juthum?" asked the grocer.

"Why, he's my husband, that's who Juthum is, and we've got an orchard of apples down there in it. I wish I had about a quarter of it right here in New York. Think of picking three barrels of apples off'n one tree and selling 'em at ten cents a quart."

"Jemmy, Sairey," said the down east aunt, moving out of the store, "don't buy none of them apples. Just go without apples till I can write down to you Uncle Juthum to send you a barrel."

"But what could I do with a barrel of apples?" answered the niece. "Positively there's no room for them in the flat and then if there was they'd spoil. I'd like to know what I'd do with a cellar and lots of storage room. The only place where we can keep anything is the ice chest, and that's really the reason why we have to buy dribbles, a quart of apples, a quart of potatoes, a couple of pounds of onions, one cabbage, two turnips and so on at a time, just about a day's supply each morning."

"Regular hand to mouth business," mused the aunt.

"That's just it, auntie, and I hate it, but what can I do? People who live in flats have to take our ways. They may try to do something else at first, but they soon get over it and become slaves to their surroundings. I could buy more apples at a time, but I'd have to put them in the bathtub, and the potatoes, onions and cabbages would have to go along with them. I hope some time we may have a whole house of our own and live like Christians again."

The down east aunt said nothing. She was thinking how nice it would be if she could buy a house and present it to her niece, "Sairey," a house with a cellar to it, in which the niece could each fall lay a stock of vegetables large enough to carry her through till the next Fourth of July.—New York Times.

Diamondiferous Earth.

The diamondiferous earth, locally termed the "blue," is reached at a varying depth, and is found in a hardened but friable condition. It is detached with comparative ease, and the process of filling trucks, each of which holds 1,600 pounds, is carried on unceasingly on a very large scale and with the utmost regularity. The contents are hauled to the top by powerful steam machinery, and if we follow their further destination, the scene changes in sudden and wondrous contrast from dark, stifling tunnels to bright, sunshiny farms, where the soil is turned up and weathered and harrowed and vivified by the action of wind and sun, and where the resulting crop is—the mounds.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Where He Learned.

The late Bishop Wilberforce was wont to relate that at one of his ordinations he once had a candidate who was the son of an English merchant settled in Greece. When examined in the Greek Testament this gentleman pronounced in the Greek manner, which seemed strange to the bishop, who exclaimed, "Oh, Mr.—, where did you learn Greek?" The trembling candidate faltered out, "At Athens, my lord!" The bishop added, "I passed him without further question."—Cor. London Times.

A Rival of Mr. Finnegan.

A resident of Cabin, who had been seriously ill for ten days, supposed he was dying Sunday morning soon after midnight, and sent a messenger for his doctor, who two hours later had not appeared. The patient told his wife he could not wait longer as he was in so much pain, so he arose, dressed and went for the doctor himself. This is almost equal to the historical exploit of Mr. Tim Finnegan at his own wake.

Tobacco.

It is a very interesting fact that "a world language, Volapuk, is soon coming to be spoken universally by its enthusiastic votaries, but is to be seen in the form of tobacco, which is universally spoken throughout the world in consumption at the World's Columbian fair. A complete record of progress made in spreading Volapuk show that delightful national conversion of its votaries was held in Boston, and that only more than a year ago, which, although all but the few who keep closest track on the movement. A significant circumstance is that recently the Young People's society of Christian Endeavor, one of the leading church bodies, formally adopted Volapuk as a tongue for that organization, and a class of forty members expected to finally shortly was formed, to meet each Monday evening in the church reading room for instruction.

Other noteworthy instances are as follows: The people of Newton, quite all their own request, are to have a lecture on Volapuk under the auspices of a leader in Boston, Mass., and Worcester are to have lectures in January, and the utmost all were the society is actively constituted. Newspapers have published simultaneously all over the continent and the United States, have been given weekly since Oct. 16. The students were at Connecticut of the house and send them unconsulted public, as desired, for sale, and the sale of unknown numbers of young and old of both sexes are following the lessons.—Boston Advertiser.

Area of the Canadian Dominion.

In the last issue of the statistical Year Book of Canada, compiled by Mr. Sydney Jones, chief of the statistics branch of the department of agriculture, we find that the total area of the dominion is computed to be 3,470,392 square miles. In this estimate 199,168 square miles are assigned to water and 3,271,224 to land surface. The table which yields this total is said to be an entirely new one, having been specially prepared at the request of the compiler of the Year Book by the chief engineer, Survey Branch of the department of the interior.

"The measures here all," we are told, "have made some old checked, and may be regarded as the best or accurate to the present geographical knowledge of the country. No change will be made in these figures unless based upon new information." As this is a question on which there is not a good deal of discussion and much difference of opinion, it is satisfactory to receive this assurance from what we may regard as the highest official and professional authority.—Montreal Gazette.

Dr. Talmage's New Year's Resolve.

Arise in this new year of all your fifteen brightness, the happiest and the best. Inform your heart with the freshness of the morning; your soul with the sprightly of the dew. Resolve by good deeds and thoughts to make this the most triumphant year of your life. As a series of short sunshine to carry with you through this year, let me give you these:

Make every day begin and end with God.

Be content with what you have.

Have a healthy, joyful family altar in your domestic circle.

Fill your home with as much good reading and bright music as your means will allow.

Think ill of none, but well of all.

If forms fall on you, think of others. Don't dwell on it.

Keep busy and you will keep healthy. Respect all sacred things.

Love God.—Dr. Talmage in Ladies' Home Journal.

Something That Has Been Needed.

For some time past the public have been looking for an adjustable grille, with shelf attachment, upon which to place brica-brac, the wonder is to arrange over windows or doorways to conceal the ugliness of a crack, which is usually dependent upon a certain job. The great trouble has always been that they had to be made to order, as sizes and doors vary in width. Now, however, a firm in Boston has undertook to go into the narrow-door business. It is in two sections, running upon a sliding rod bar. By drawing these pieces apart they can be extended to the width of the door, and the open place left in the center of them is furnished with a short drapery.—Philadelphia Upholsterer.

The Boys Did the Job.

An East Dover (Me.) farmer had a more something over 20 years old, and not thinking it advisable to winter her, spoke to some boys to take her out, shoot her and bury her for a money consideration. Boys No. 1 and 2 did the job all right, but No. 3, not knowing the mare had been killed, went the following day to the farmer's barn, and finding an animal in the stable, took him out and led him down to a place of concealment, and shot him in the head, and he was buried. The farmer's surprise on coming home to find his boy No. 3 had shot and buried a nice 5-year-old, worth in the neighborhood of $200.—Boston Transcript.

Big Cows, Big Tree, Small Man.

A party consisting of D. M. Bacelin, R. C. Brown and others, of Brown's Mill, went out once hunting the other night and killed the largest cow and cut down the largest tree yet on record. The cow weighed twenty-seven pounds and the tree was nearly fifteen feet across the stump. The tree was very hollow, and Mr. Bacelin, who weighs but a trifle over a hundred, went into the hollow of the tree and came out at a knot hole.—Cor. Atlanta Constitution.

Dying Penance.

An old woman has taken up her abode in a wood on Lord Annaly's estate at Killyleagh. She has made a bed of fern leaves between the trunks of trees, stake and ferns forming a rude hutch. The only article of furniture is a crucifix. She subsists on bread and water, and says she has resorted to this wretched mode of existence as a penance.—London Letter.

Ending Red Cloud.

Old Red Cloud, who was deposed from his position as chief of the Sioux to make room for American Horse, a younger man, is now a pitiful spectacle, it is said. He frequently visits the Chadron agency and weeps and wails about his fall from power. He is now rapidly going blind and seems to be dying from a broken heart. His sand spurs remains faithful to him, and he is popular with the Sioux nation.—Exchange.
