DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Thursday, - - March 23, 1893.

FRAGMENTS.

THE members of the county court have been engaged this afternoon auditing the accounts of ex-County Clerk Allen as per his recent request made to that body.

THE furniture to be sent to the World's Fair by the ladies of Davis county will remain in the Dowdesley window until Monday, March 27th.

The mental condition of Charlotte Ericsson, who resides on south Ninth East street, is being inquired into by Probate Judge Blair and two medical men this afternoon.

CITY Treasurer Duke, who has been confined to his bed for the past few days with an attack of la grippe, was on the streets again today in a rather enfeebled condition.

RECORDER STANTON'S Nimrod convalescing again horse has strayed or the dark fields of springtile. He took with him an arsenal of ammunition and expects to return heavily laden with the fruits of his hunting expedition.

High Priests.

In view of Saturday, March 25th, 1893 having been set apart as a special fast day for all the members of the Church, the High Priests of the Salt Lake Stake of Zion will not convene until the last Saturday in April.

ELIAS MORRIS,
President of Quorum.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE DESERET HOSPITAL BENEFIT turned out fairly well in financial results, considering the stormy weather, and the artistic results were all that could be desired. The program was an excellent one, varied enough to suit all tastes. It led off with the Deseret minstrels, with some changes in their personnel, and the jokes and songs with the vanishing lady finale went quite as well as ever, Mr. Maltese being the particular star among the funny men, and Mr. Robinson carrying away the honors among the singers. Mr. Squires and Mr. Heavens were well received. The Deseret sextette sang "Speed Away" in excellent style, and being encored gave an old time negro melody in equally good fashion. Elinson repeated his former hit, and could have had an encore, but declined it. Easton got a warm welcome and though he was suffering from a slight hoarseness, he got a big recall, and responded with "Annie Laurie" in his own tender style. Del Beesley was encored for his xylophone solo. The ancient statuary groupings were not what they would have been had the lights worked better, Mr. Welling, of course, was the feature of the evening, as he always must be; his playing was as enchanting as ever. Tonight he will render Bach's great fugue in G minor. The afterpiece Amerlen discovered in Twenty Minutes, is as pretty as ever in its music and as pointless as ever in its disingenuous story. Mr. Park appeared as the medicine man and made occasional mirth. The success of the piece was the singing of Mr. Robinson, whose fine baritone voice was heard to excellent advantage in the number he sang. Mr. Robinson seems to be the coming baritone. Mr. Horn accompanied and directed, but his orchestra did not respond to his efforts at all times, and was occasionally quite rocky. The same program for the same object goes again tonight.

E. E. SOTHERN'S advance sale opens tomorrow. Mr. Warner, Mr. Sothern's advance man, and Mrs. Warner occupied a box at the Theater last evening. The lady in the procession is known as Louise Paillet; she appeared here as Cattelon's leading lady a number of years ago.

For the first three months of the present season Mr. E. H. Sothern appeared at the Lyceum Theater, New York. In a play by an American author who had no previous experience in dramatic work. It was called "Captain Letterblair" and proved so satisfactory to the public that many people were mightly unable to obtain admission, and three matinees were given weekly to accommodate the disappointed ones. At the end of that time it was withdrawn only that the previously arranged tour might be carried out, and that the stock company of that house might begin its regular season. It will be seen here three nights, commencing Monday, March 27. Mr. Sothern has made himself a through favorite here, and the plays which he has given in the past five years, The Highest Bidder, Lord Chumley, The Master of Woodbarrow, and The Dancing Girl, differing widely in their character, are most pleasantly remembered. The new play, Capt. Letterblair, perhaps resembles Lord Chumley more than any other of Mr. Sothern's plays, yet it is distinctly different. It presents him in the character of a young Irish officer, impulsive, rollicking, impetuous, humorsome; with a gentlemanly brogue, and an ample supply of Irish wit. It was written by Miss Marguerite Merington, who, until recently, was for several years instructor in Greek and Latin at the New York Normal College. It was her first attempt at play writing, although she has been a magazine contributor for some time past. The company supporting Mr. Sothern, and every detail of scenery and stage setting, will be exactly as it was during the New York run.

For the World's Fair.

In Solomon Brothers' show window, on Main street, the Granite Paper Mills Company of this city has a nice display of home-made news, job, print and wrapping papers, in reams and rolls, which is to be placed on exhibition at the World's Fair. Mr. A. Kimball, the company's agent, has neatly arranged a pyramid of that article. The foundation is a variety of paper in reams 22x30, the bundle is composed of straw butcher, manilla, white and pink satinet wrapping, cover, job and print paper; above, tapering to the top, first is an eighteen-inch roll of book or white wrapping, on top of it is a fifteen-inch roll of butcher straw, with a twelve-inch satinet roll above. On this is a nine-inch roll of manilla, crowned with a six-inch roll of pink, in a outlet. The pink has inscribed on it, a beehive.

Alleged Counterfeiters.

The police arrested a man this afternoon on the charge of passing counterfeit coin. They refused to divulge his name or any of the particulars connected with the case.

MARTIN AND MOYER AGAIN.

The Investigating Committee Still Probing the Complaint.

A BRIEF MORNING'S SESSION.

Trying to Find Out Something About Hobbs and His Receipt. Where Are They?

The NEWS report of the inquiry into the charges brought against U. S. Commissioners Martin and Moyer showed yesterday with the evidence of ex-Deputy Marshal Joe Hush. When his turn on the witness stand was over, Commissioner Martin was recalled by the petitioners' counsel, and it was further elicited that the Globe Collection agency appeared in 111 cases on his docket. Out of this number sixty-one were default cases, five were tried, and out of this number three judgments were rendered for the plaintiff and two for the defendants, twenty-seven are as yet undisposed of and the balance were settled and dismissed.

Questioned as to whether he had agreed with this agency that he would not charge a fee unless judgments were rendered against the defendant, the witness stated that no such agreement had been made.

In one of the cases decided in favor of the defendant an entry showed that the fee had been charged to Crook, but the entry had been made since the investigation was begun. In the other case the defendant paid the costs, the judgment having been rendered in his favor on a cross-complaint against the plaintiffs.

Attorney Varian asked the witness if commissioners and justices were in the habit of appearing as counsel before other commissioners and justices, and Mr. Martin answered in the affirmative.

Attorney Baldwin then asked the witness whether he ever turned over one of his own collections to any one else to bring suit on in his own court.

Witness—I am not sure, but I think one case which had been in my hands was brought before me, but a change of venue was taken.

Mr. Martin's attention was next directed to several other cases in which John Sullivan was plaintiff and Reed & Crook of the Globe Collection agency appeared as attorneys for the plaintiff. He stated that he had had their permission to enter their names as attorneys for the plaintiff in such cases, and that they had the summonses served themselves.

With regard to the alleged arrangement between the commissioner and Crook, Mr. Martin declared that no arrangement had existed. He held Crook responsible for the costs in all cases, and an open account existed between Crook and himself.

Attorney Hurd asked—Now, didn't you present a bill to Walker Brothers & Fyler for costs in cases in which they were plaintiffs, which they refused to pay?

Witness—I did, and they refused to pay it on the grounds that the Crook agency brought the suits and were responsible for the costs.

"Didn't you pay a portion of a bill which you owed them, then, with the understanding that they wouldn't appear against you in this investigation?" queried counsel.

Witness—I did not have any such understanding, although I paid a portion of the bill.

The matter of allowing interested parties to serve summonses was then gone into and it was ascertained that they were often permitted to do so.

W. S. Fugate was called and stated that Hobbs drew $50 out of the bank to settle the adultery case, which was referred to earlier in the proceedings, but he didn't see him pay the sum.

Carl Dammann (the defendant in two cases brought against him in Commissioner Martin's court for selling whisky on Sunday, and referred to during yesterday morning's inquiry) was called and questioned as to his second arrest. He stated that he paid the costs in the case and it was dismissed.

To Judge Loofbourow, witness said he believed the complaining witness had agreed that the case might be dismissed.

The next witness was C. A. Reed, a former member of the Globe collection agency. He had, he said, brought a number of cases before Mr. Martin and a running account existed between them.

Attorney Hurd—Did you have any agreement with Mr. Martin that he was not to get his fees unless the defendant was good for the amount?

Witness—No; we stood good for the costs.

"Did you agree with your clients that if you didn't make the collections from the defendants, that they would not be held liable for the costs?" asked Judge Hawes, and the witness said yes.

"And didn't you have a similar arrangement with Mr. Martin?"

"We did, as I understand it.

Attorney Hurd—When you served a summons when the suit was brought by other parties, how much did you get for your work?

"I got $1 and Mr. Martin $1," answered Mr. Reed.

Next came to the witness stand I. C. Crook of the Globe Collection agency. Asked by Mr. Hurd about the matter of costs when the defendants were unable to pay the judgment, he stated that the agency stood responsible for costs in all cases.

"Didn't Mr. Martin simply allow you to bring cases without paying the costs in advance, and when judgment was rendered against the defendant let the matter run along until you collected them?" asked Judge Loofbourow.

The witness replied—"Yes, I think so; but we paid him for all the time he put in."

John Sullivan was interrogated as to a suit which he had brought in Mr. Martin's court against J. T. Maloney. Judgment had been entered for $20 and costs, and the plaintiff had received $25, including $10 which he owed Mr. Martin for attorney's fees in another case. There was a discrepancy of $5, and considerable time was spent in trying to discover where it had gone to. Finally witness remembered that he owed Mr. Martin $15 instead of $10.

The petitioners now rested on the Martin case, the understanding being that the defense would introduce its testimony today. Thereupon court adjourned.

TODAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

Upon the resumption of the investigation at 10:35 a.m. today, Mr. I. C. Crook of the collection agency was recalled and asked concerning two questions on the subject of certain cross-examined yesterday afternoon, in which Walker Bros. & Fyler Co. were interested parties. It became apparent that he had served 102 summonses from Commissioner Martin's docket, receiving $1 on each of them. The commissioner himself kept the second dollar.

Some little delay was here occasioned by the absence of Judge Howat (a member of the investigating committee), who had been called away on other court business, but it was presently decided that the inquiry should proceed and that the notes of the stenographer should be read over to the judge upon his return.

In answer to Judge Loofbourow, Mr. Crook said that a misunderstanding arose between himself and Mr. Martin some time last November, and since then their dealings had practically ceased. There had been a sort of tacit understanding between the commissioner and himself, but the latter appeared to have been under some misapprehension in regard to it.

Mr. Hurd—Do you mean to be understood now as swearing that you did not have such an arrangement with Mr. Martin as that in cases where suit was commenced and you got judgment, but did not collect it, that there were to be no charges for costs made by Mr. Martin?

Witness—I will say yes if I can qualify it.

Mr. Hurd—Well, go on.

Witness—As the general subject-matter of our business it became a sort of tacit arrangement, which was definitely from either party especially, that where the business caused Mr. Martin no trouble or called on us to come of trial—and the judgment came by default—the general understanding was that the costs should come from the defendant. I do not think a week has passed but what Mr. Martin and myself have had an altercation over this matter.

Mr. Hurd—Was it not your understanding, and did you not so inform the Walker Brothers & Fyler Co., that you had made an arrangement with Mr. Martin whereby all costs in their cases should be reckoned unless they failed to prove their claim?

Witness did not think he ever stated to them that he had any arrangement with anyone.

H. A. Tarpum, Jr., said he was acquainted with the man Hobbs, whose name was mentioned yesterday. A receipt signed by Commissioner Martin for, he believed, $50 was shown to the witness by Hobbs, at the Cullen hotel, some time last April, in reference to the case in which Eva Watkins was complainant and Hobbs defendant. Witness did not know where Hobbs was now and had not seen the paper since.

In reply to Judge Loofbourow the witness said he was formerly bartender at the Cullen hotel, but was now a commercial traveller for a San Francisco firm. Hobbs was tall and slim and usually "wore" a red board. He laid the receipt down on the bar counter, but witness could not remember how it was worded, as he was very busy at the time. The amount on the receipt might have been $25, he would not now undertake to swear as to that, neither could he tell whether Hobbs' name was upon it. Hobbs, however, called the attention to the name of "Martin, U. S. Commissioner," and said he thought he had been "worked" for $50. When Hobbs came to him with the receipt he was somewhat intoxicated, and did not seem altogether clear.

As Judge Howat was still engaged in the Supreme courtroom, the court adjourned at 11:30 till 2 p. m.

During the first hour of this afternoon's session nothing of special importance developed.

SUPREME COURT CASES.

That Partnership Trouble Between Hanneman and Karrick.

DISSATISFIED WITH THE FINDING.

An Appeal on Behalf of the Crescent Mining Company in a Personal Damage Suit.

The entire time of the Territorial Supreme court this morning was taken up with the case of Charles L. Hanneman, respondent, vs. Lewis C. Karrick, appellant. Judges Sutherland and Howat represented the latter; J. L. Rawlins and Waldemar Van Cott appeared on the other side.

The suit was originally brought by Hanneman as plaintiff against Karrick, it being alleged that a partnership was entered into between them on February 3rd, 1890, for a term of five years. It is charged that about February 1st, 1891, the defendant took exclusive possession of the books and stock in trade and forcibly excluded the plaintiff from participating in the business. Damages to the amount of $20,000 were claimed, judgment was prayed for dissolving the partnership, and an accounting asked for. The defendant's answer admitted the partnership agreement, but set forth acts of misconduct and negligence on Hanneman's part in the management of the business. It was admitted that in February, 1891, Karrick took possession, but denied that the taking was wrongful. It was also insisted that by reason of the premises and the agreement between the parties the partnership was dissolved, and that plaintiff had sustained no damage whatever.

The cause was referred to Attorney S. A. Merritt, as referee, who rendered judgment against the defendant for $12,040.50 and costs of suit. A motion for a new trial was overruled and hence the present appeal.

The arguments were made before Associate Justices Blackburn, Miner and Barth, and the case was submitted.

A MINING COMPANY'S APPEAL.

This afternoon the case of John G. Lindsley, plaintiff and respondent, vs. the Crescent Mining Co., defendant and appellant, came up for argument. Plaintiff was in the employ of the defendant company as a carman and while working in a raise on their property a cave in occurred, his left leg was broken and amputation became necessary. Damages in $25,000 were demanded. The trial took place before Judge Anderson in April, 1892, and the jury awarded plaintiff $2,000. The motion for a new trial was overruled, and against this ruling the appeal is now taken.

RAILROAD COMPANY'S APPEAL.

Late yesterday afternoon the arguments in the case of John J. Olsen vs. the Oregon Short Line & Utah Northern Railway company, appellants (appealed from the Third district court) was taken up. Williams & Van Cott appeared for appellants and Ferguson & Cannon for the respondent.

It was an action for damages alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff while crossing defendant's railroad track near Bingham Junction. Plaintiff was driving across the track when his outfit was struck by a train. His wagon was demolished, his horses were both killed and he was painfully injured. Plaintiff alleges negligence on the part of the defendants in not ringing the bell or sounding the whistle on their locomotive, and demanded damages in the sum of $5000. Upon hearing of the case the jury returned a verdict in his favor and assessed his damages at $3000. It is against this that the present appeal comes. The case was now taken under advisement.

Joseph.

The sacred cantata, Joseph, will be presented by the Twentieth ward choir tomorrow evening, in the ward meeting house, for the purpose of raising funds to purchase new music. Prof. Joseph J. Daynes will conduct the cantata, and the final rehearsal last evening showed that those attending the concert will enjoy a musical feast.

WITHIN OUR GATES.

W. H. Dusenberry, who is not a Dugberry but a judge all the same, came up from Provo and took a look around our municipal metropolis on the principal streets. He didn't take a bath but looked as if he would like to.

E. H. Anderson, of Ogden, took a run down today and was looking around among old-time friends here, of whom he has several notwithstanding the fact that, according to most junction points, this place is too far from Ogden to be proper.

B. F. Montgomery, the well known attorney from Denver; Amasa Funge and wife, prominent citizens of Chicago; M. Reynolds, San Francisco, and O. D. Houtz, the Provo Justinian, are the guests of the Cullen.

B. H. Gough of Dry Canyon, lessee of the Hidden Treasure mine, is here for the time being. He reports having been nearly snowed in, the visitation from the clouds aggregating two feet on the level. He concluded his statement with the characteristic and cheering remark, "Everything in sight."

B. N. Basin, who presides over this somewhat boisterous community as mayor thereof, and does credit to the job and himself, has got back from his trip to national headquarters. It is not known whether or not he let the gubernatorial bee buzz without restraint to his bonnet while there, but it is a well assured fact that an appointment doesn't require one's actual presence in order to alight where it behooves. Telegraphic advices, like the dead, travel fast.
