BORDERING ON THE MILITARY.

Not unlike the cape worn by military officers is the cape of this somewhat severe but nevertheless stylish evening coat in putty white broadcloth. The coat hangs loose from shoulders to ham, the sleeve large and of the coat pattern, the deep turnback cuff displaying a further touch of the military in the stripes of gold braid and the red embroidered crescents. The front fastening is made by large gilt buttons. The cape is cut in circular panels and tiered sections, the back length being considerably longer than that of the front, all edges piped with a scariet cloth, the lining a heavy white satin. This cape is separate from the coat, being hooked on at the neckline and tying with heavy white silk and gold cords and tassels, the large gilt buttons ornamenting the front.

deilcious in the catalogue, and it is not necessarily an extravagant salad. Cut the fruit in slices, and with a sharp-pointed knife cut close to the membrane in each section, and take out the pulp in plump pieces. One fruit of medium size will make enough salad for two persons. Make a French dress-ing, substituting lemon juice for vin-egar, and paprika for pepper. Or make a delicate mayonnaise dressing, which is perhaps more suitable for the fruit. Pour the dressing over the fruit and mix very carefully with a sliver fork. Serve on lettuce leaves which have been dressed with a French dressing. A very little lettuce will do.

It really costs very little indeed to have the most fashionable underwear, if one is willing to shop a little for in-expensive fine things and to give a litthe thought and time to planning pret-ty designs. Petticoats are a bit more trouble and expense. They must have flounces and frills to give a frou frou foot effect, and they too must have the circular cut to be chic with the full skirts. skirts.

The real difficulty with all this fine underwear is doing it up so that it will not be torn to pieces or at least frayed and pulled. It can not be rubbed as heavy garments can, and if it is of silk or of tinted lawns it can not be boiled,

A new York girl, who is very fond of pretty things but hasn't as much money as the rest of her set to replenish lingerie or pay fine laundresses, has found out that the easiest and simplest way for a home laundress to manage is to use borax to soften the water. All white clothes she has boiled in water in which there are two tea-spoonfuls of borax to a gallon of waspoonfuls of borax to a gallon of wa-ter, and if she is wearing tinted mulis they are soaked before washing in cold water and borax, a teaspoonful to a pail. They are just rubbed lightly by hand, no board rubbing at all, and she saves the wear of her fine dingerie about two-thirds. Colored underwear is dried in the shade.

Her underwear ribbons she washes here if in borax water, and rolls on a broomstock without ironing. When dry they are like new. In fact, she does up all sorts of ribbons this way, even those that might easily be warranted not to wash and she turns them out as well renovated as the smartest milliner could.

The Domineering Girl.

She is always talking in an imperative tone, regardless of the conversa-tion of others. Her favorite position is in the center of the room, where nothing which might need her supervi-sion will escape her notice. She usually sion will escape her notice. She usually flustrates her conversation with com-manding gestures and a toss of the heard, meant to imply that her supervi-ability is not to be questioned. She overrules every one's suggestions and supplants them with her own brilliant-ly conceived ideas. She is not popular, but she is in evidence everywhere by her own persistence—is the domineer-ing girl.

DECAPITATED WHILE PETTING TURTLE.

One of the most beautiful pleces of statuary produced in recent times along classical lines, the figure of a young woman stooping to toy with a small turtle, was broken in transit to Waterton, N. Y., where it was intended for the Roswell P. Fowler Memorial Library.

The statue was entitled "Unconsciousness," and Lount Thompson was its sculptor. Charles S. Starbuck of New York City, recently purchased it for the Watertown library, CLUB CHAT.

One of the most interesting meetings held by the Utah Women's Press club was that which met at the home of Mirs. Andrew Jenson, the session being altogether devoted to Scandinavia, a topic of special interest now, in con-sideration of the late death of King Christian, and the recent partition of the kingdom literally without bloodshed, an example sincerely to be considered by enlightened Christendom. This sub-ject. "A Bloodless Contest in the Land of the Midnight Sun," was most ably dealt with by Mr. Andrew Jenson, who by both study and personal investigawho had a long, cold ride ahead of them did not appear over auxious to depart for their home. A rice pudding which is very much more delectable than the usual nursery dish is made by soaking over night a cupful of well-washed rice in a pint of milk. In the morning the rice will have absorbed the milk, and a little more should be added. Add to the rice and milk a cupful of seeded raisins which have been soaked for several hours in good brandy or sherry wine. Stir finto the rice and pour in half a cupful of melted butter. Bake for an hour and serve with very sweet whip-ped cream. Since there is no sugar in the pudding, the sauce must be sweet to make up the deficiency.
