[illegible] meeting in the Assembly Hall tomorrow, Saturday, at 11 a.m.

Tomorrow is the last day of registration for the coming election.

The Liberals are registering in droves today. Members of other parties should do likewise, providing they are entitled to do so.

Dr. [illegible] stated to a News reporter this afternoon that he now considers the chances for the recovery of John Robinson, who was shot three times yesterday [illegible] by Thomas Dailey, are very favorable.

Thomas Dailey, the man who so tragically attempted to murder his brother-in-law yesterday, as chronicled in last evening's News, was buried in the city cemetery this afternoon, the funeral occurring from [illegible] undertaking parlors.

Escalante is All Right.

"Subscriber" writes under date of the 21st of September from Escalante, Garfield county, that the people of that locality have had a good season and the health of the community has been very good. Everybody is very busy threshing and the cutting of the last crop of lucern has just commenced. A splendid roller mill has been completed by Brother J. S. [illegible], and three brick houses are nearly completed. "So," concludes "Subscriber," "you see we don't lack the plan and pull to make a good settlement. We have got two new reservoirs started and expect to finish them this fall or early next spring."

"FERRYMAN" HAS A WORD.

To Weary Travelers Bad Roads Always Seem Worse.

There Are Difficulties Enough, Goodness Knows, and "Ferryman" is Opposed to Magnifying or Misrepresenting Them.

[illegible], Lincoln Co., Nev., Sept. 21, 1893.

Editor Deseret News:

Dear Sir.—An article in a recent issue of your paper with prominent headlines (relating to the difficulties of Arizona travel—sand, rocks and little water) has been sent to me and requires a short review and the same publicity. Inasmuch as the writer of that article is a man whose statement should and probably will command respectful notice when [illegible] in his normal state, it is due to him and the public to say that, according to his own showing as I view it, he was at the time of his writing in an abnormal and dreamy state. On the trip he so romantically depicts he left this place for Utah [illegible] after two hours' rest with a team he himself stated was exhausted twenty-five miles behind at St. Thomas, and would not [illegible] to venture the ordinary road and would [illegible] prefer a new track on which two watering places could be had near the road which, all in all, is less than forty miles and can easily be driven over with a fresh team in a day. The first watering place, twelve miles southeast, where the road comes within two miles of the great river, he [illegible] and chose to go to at all; the second one, twenty miles on the road and one mile off, he did not drive to, but carried a barrel of water on the horse (which must have helped the horse a good deal) and on "all that fearful desert road" there was no time or place where he was more than nine miles from water. It is safe to say that if he had taken the road he recommends from St. George, 100 miles, which he [illegible] and [illegible], it would have seemed [illegible] miles, if indeed he could have made it at all.

As to the character of the roads there are in fact no roads in all this region south of southern Utah affords, and from the nature of the terrain they cannot be made really good; but the distances are a matter of measurement and quite easily ascertained. An exhausted team and an anxious driver are not reliable estimators. When a party of California emigrants perished in 1849 in Death Valley, two survivors stated that they traveled ten to fifteen miles a day, whereas recent measurements between their camps show that they made less than one and a half to three miles a day. Any strange stretch of country, especially if without water, is always overestimated—it does not need to be a Sahara or a Gobi.

The longest waterless stretch on this oldest road is between Lee's and Mountain springs, forty-two miles by railroad survey, usually called forty-five; and fresh teams often drive over it in a day; but tired and heavy teams need two or more days and must carry water or do without. Recently the new mining camp at White Hills, thirty miles from the river and a little to the left of the road, furnishes a chance to lessen the dry stretch of 12 miles and that camp has also made a new road to Hackberry, greatly lessening the distance to that point, which most Utah travelers want to touch to reach conveniently the various settlements of eastern Arizona. In a choice of several roads from here southward, on which I have done many hundred dollars worth of improvement work without help, and which still need much more, I am of course expected to tell the chances of each and be responsible for each, as well as for all the overloads, the exhausted teams, the lack of [illegible], the willful going off the plain road into the mountains in search of springs and all the other native contrariness often shown by travelers. A lovely position surely.

In a somewhat extensive experience I have found it a very unthankful task to direct travelers and am doing as little as possible at it. On the whole, and in the course of years, travel gravitates where the least serious obstacles are found. Thus far, for a quarter of a century, the travel from Nevada, eastern Oregon, Idaho and southern Utah to Arizona, has gone over the river here and below, following the natural passes and lines of drainage as affording the best chances for heavy teams, most water, feed and chances of supply; while the bulk of the northern and Utah travel has gone above the Grand canyon over Lee's Ferry and kept the highland ridges of Arizona. Even if the ferry business was my only or main resource, which it is not by any means, I would not make any great efforts to influence the course of travel; but would say let people go where they think best so long as no misdirection is attempted or serious misrepresentations made. The whole country offers plenty of hardship without it.

Yours respectfully,
Ferryman.

Parowan Stake Conference.

The quarterly conference of this Stake convened in the Cedar City tabernacle September 17th and and 18th, 1893.

Present on the stand were Elder F. M. Lyman of the council of the Apostles; Elder Jesse W. Crosby of Panguitch Stake, Elder Daniel Thompson of Millard Stake, Elders Uriah T. Jones and Webster of the presidency and the members of the High council, Bishops and presiding brethren of this Stake. After the usual opening exercises Elder Uriah T. Jones reported briefly the condition of the Stake; he said there was less ill feeling among the Saints at present than there had been for some time past. He reported the Sunday schools in the Stake as being in good condition and doing a most excellent work. He regretted, however, that there was a seeming [illegible] exhibited by many who professed to be Latter-day Saints.

Elder Jesse W. Crosby was the next speaker. He spoke of the [illegible] God in gathering His Saints out from the nations of the earth; also treated upon the duty of good example, the Word of Wisdom and the observance of the Sabbath day.

Elder Daniel Thompson related some of his early experiences in Utah, and gave good instructions to the lesser Priesthood, and bore his testimony that the Gospel was true. He exhorted [illegible] to see the details [illegible] heartily [illegible] sustaining by [illegible] many [illegible].

Elder F. M. Lyman occupied the remaining time in instructing the people with regard to their duties, [illegible] of [illegible] etc.

2 p.m.—The Sacrament was administered, and the remaining time was occupied by Elder Lyman in [illegible] the subjects of the [illegible] Church discipline, false doctrine, etc.

Monday, 10 a.m.— The general authorities of the Church were presented and sustained by unanimous vote of the conference [illegible] the Stake authorities.

Brother Christopher J. Arthur, of Cedar City, was selected and ordained a Patriarch.

Elder John J. C. Webster, Daniel S. [illegible] and Niels O. Mortensen were selected and set apart as alternate members of the High Council.

Elder Lyman read a portion of the [illegible] chapter of [illegible] made some remarks upon the same, and occupied the time of the meeting in giving instructions to Bishops, Stake Presidents and High Councilors in relation to their duties.

2 p.m.—Elder Lyman continued his instructions to High Councilors and presiding officers, [illegible] members generally, in relation to the blessing of children, the carrying on and conducting Church schools, the keeping of genealogical records, the Word of Wisdom, etc. He advised the young people to marry when they were young and take those responsibilities upon them early in life.

The Board of Home missionaries were presented and sustained by vote and conference was adjourned for three months to meet in Parowan.

Wm. H. Holyman, Clerk.

School Board Meeting.

The city school board held an adjourned meeting last night, President Nelson in the chair. The members present were Pike, Pratt, Dooly, Young, Baldwin and Beebe. A number of petitions were read and referred to appropriate committees, several bills were allowed and considerable routine business was transacted.

Before the meeting adjourned the following resolution was referred to the committee on sites and buildings with instructions to report at the next meeting:

Resolved, That the committee on sites and buildings be authorized and instructed to proceed with the construction of a two-room school building, in accordance with plans already submitted and approved by the committee on sites and building, to be located between the Cane addition and the [illegible] plant, provided that a suitable site for its location be donated to the board for that purpose.

If you are getting lazy, watch James.

If your faith is below par, read Paul.

If you are impatient, sit down quietly and have a talk with Job.

If you are just a little strongheaded, go and see Moses.

If you are getting weak-kneed, take a look at Elijah.

If there is no song in your heart, listen to David.

If you are getting worldly, spend a while with Isaiah.

Simpler Living.

Mrs. Ewing, the cooking teacher, struck the keynote of a great reform when in one of her lectures she called for plainer food and fewer courses at our meals. The best way to secure variety is to have a few [illegible] dishes at a time and something else next time, not to have a great number of dishes all at once.
