'Neath the shadow of the mountains
My darling lies at rest,
With her little daughter sleeping
Upon her quiet breast.

A tender, patient mother,
A true and faithful wife;
She is gone to join her loved ones
In the realms of endless life.

GRAND JURY REPORT.

THE CITY JAIL DECLARED NEAT AND CLEANLY, THE COUNTY PRISON A DAMP DUNGEON AND THE PENITENTIARY A HUMAN CORRAL.

The Grand Jury, on appearing in Court, for discharge, on Saturday, submitted the following report, signed by all the members but one:

Your Grand Jury respectfully report that we have investigated all cases brought to our notice by the United States Attorney, his deputies and others. We have reported to you all the indictments found, and also all the cases we have dismissed in which formulated charges were presented.

We have visited and examined the prisons of the county. We found the city jail neat and orderly. We consider it secure, comfortable and well kept.

The county jail is in the basement of the County Court House, and in reality, a damp, poorly ventilated cellar The prisoners there are obliged to sleep on straw mattresses, on the damp stone floor, and the dampness is so great that in a short time the mattresses become wet and the straw in them rotten. We do not think that these mattresses have been changed or dried as often as they should have been, and the prisoners complain that the bedding and cells are infested with vermin. We consider this jail wholly unfit for use, and respectfully pray this court to take action, if possible to have it closed and the prisoners removed to more healthy quarters. But, if it must be used longer, a decent regard for the health of the prisoners demands that more and better bedding be furnished, and that it be dried or changed as often as it becomes damp, and that so far as possible the place be relieved from dampness by the construction of drains

We found the Penitentiary to be an enclosure surrounded by an adobe wall, within which the prisoners are kept and allowed to mingle together In this enclosure there are two small wood buildings, one used as a dining room and the other divided into rooms used for sleeping apartments. These sleeping rooms are so small that it requires three rows of bunks, one above the other, reaching entirely around the rooms to accommodate the prisoners There are no cells, no separate apartments, no stone walls, no shops. Within this "pen" over fifty prisoners are now kept, and their number is likely to increase They are from all ages, from fifteen years upwards, guilty of all grades of crime from larceny to murder; many that have not been yet ever convicted of crime, but are awaiting the action of grand juries, all of necessity mingling together; the boy of fifteen learning lessons of crime from the hardened criminal of fifty They are required to do no labor and it seems to us a national sin that this amount of physical force should be thus worse than wasted; and we earnestly request that this matter be submitted again to the Department of Justice, with the request that these men be set at work first to build a suitable stone prison from the stone quarries so near at hand, and then that they be furnished with manual labor at some of the useful trades There are no provisions whatever for female prisoners, a want which it seems to us should be supplied at once We do not consider the penitentiary safe or secure But we found it well kept, and have only words of commendation for the vigilance of the officers and guards, which enables them to keep over fifty criminals herded in that human corral, for it is the guns and vigilance of the guards and not the adobe walls, that keep our prisoners there

In your charge to the jury you called our attention specially to the crimes of bigamy, polygamy and unlawful cohabitation, and what is known at the Edmunds bill These crimes you stated were well known to be very prevalent in this district Several cases of this nature have been before this jury and many witnesses examined but in the great majority of cases there seemed to be great difficulty in drawing out from witnesses that testimony which they were supposed to be able to give and in other cases the officers have claimed that they were unable to find important witnesses for whom we sent out supoenas, and these facts account for the very few indictments for these crimes found by us.

It appears to this jury that the unlawful marrying which constitutes the crime of bigamy and polygamy is perpetrated in this district largely in secret, and that the records of such marriages are not open to the general public or to the officers of the United States who are charged with enforcing the law, which secrecy, combined with the strong local public opinion against punishing these crimes in this Territory render it almost impossible to bring this class of criminals to justice. These obstacles to the enforcement of law would seem to us to justify the government in employing special officers to overcome them.
