HIRUCIOUS ESCAPE.

A NEW YORK FOUR STORIES AND 20 NOT SERIOUSLY INJURED.

A remarkable escape from death or serious injury occurred at 912 Vine street, near the Cincinnati Centennial Grounds. At that number lives Henry Gessler, a tailor, and his family, the younger of whom is George, aged 9. The Gesslers occupy rooms on the fourth floor of the building, a tenement house, and during the bad weather George has been more or less confined to the house. Unable to romp and coast in the snow with his companions, the lad was compelled to content himself with watching them from within, and he spent the greater part of the day leaning out of the window high up above the street. Yesterday, he went, the boy was perched in his accustomed place, when, leaning over so far to watch something on the street, he lost his balance and fell out. The window in which little George was wont to perch is on the side of the building overlooking a passage way that leads to the area beyond, and the one some the passage way is a one-story frame dwelling. The boy in his descent veered toward the frame house in question, and striking against its roof broke the force of the fall and landed in a pile of rubbish. The crash attracted the attention of the house alarmed the occupants thereof who, thinking an avalanche was falling in, ran out to investigate. They found the little fellow lying in a heap of snow and carried him upstairs and summoned Dr. T. L. Lewis, who after a thorough examination, found the boy entirely unhurt. Not a bone was broken nor a mark of any kind was found on his body to betray the terrible fall.

The only ill effect of the accident was a severe shock to the child's nervous system, the fright which he felt from his falling having deprived him of consciousness; but he came around at rapid under Dr. Hewett's treatment, and a half hour later was able to be about as usual.—Cincinnati Wochen-Herold.

The Secret of Vitality.

To American politicians, who so often break down in the middle of life, nothing is more surprising than the physical and intellectual energy of Mr. Gladstone at over four score, in spite of its Herculean labors of his long life. What is the secret of this prolonged power? A London journal explains its origins in part when it tells us that he is a man who leaves his politics outside when he enters his study or bedroom door. He has the faculty of closing at will one chamber of his mind, and opening another." Coming home from a hot and exciting debate in the House of Commons, he can in ten minutes banish all thought of it in the order of some fresh pursuit. Like Pendon, who used to say: "Le changement des idées est toujours un délassement pour moi," the great English statesman recreates himself, not by sketches of Mikoves, but by a change of occupation. Like Lord Hartington, Edinburgh's great minister, who, as a fellow tells us, used at night, when in his prime, to read Greek, he says: "Lin Dare, lord treasurer," Gladstone can throw off the political harness, and "be merry, jocund and phenomenal," with his family, or entertain visitors or enjoy the silent companionship of his books. Another secret of Mr. Gladstone's unimpaired endurance and vitality is that by long habit he has acquired complete control over his digestion, and never worries. What a saving of nervous energy does this imply, and what a contrast to the fussy, fret and dyspepsia of our American politicians, who are so often the children of impulse, and whose tempers are ruffled by the petulant provocation! Would not they had the Englishman's poise and self-control, and that, when claimed to resist labor and trouble to give the brain repose, they would try, at least, to vary their labors, which is another form of repose. Intense and prolonged application to one subject is the explanation of many breakdowns like that of Secretary Windom. "As your body," says a wise writer, "may be in activity during the whole of the day, if you vary the actions sufficiently, so as the brain work all day at varied occupations. Hold out a stick at arm's length for five minutes, and the muscles will be more fatigued than by an hour's sawing. The same principle holds good with the brain."

JETS OF GINGER.

Waite—How is the old man Gilfillan? Is he out of danger yet?

Jo. Bowlee—I don't know. He died this morning.—Ex.

Husky—A little horse today, my son.

Husky—You ought to have had a skin in return for the ponies you got rid of last night.—Ex.

Sis—How uncomfortable it must be to have a mustache about one's lips.

Bro—Oh, not at all so, I assure you.

Sis—Is it, now?—Ex.

"Why does Mr. Lummis speak of the perpetrator as his uncle," asked Mr. Trotter of her husband. "They are not really related, are they?"

"Oh, yes," replied Trotter. "Their relationship is a clothes line."—Ex.

Burglar (flashing his dark lantern)—Wake up, lady! Don't you make a noise, either! Where's per valyables?

Elderly Maiden Lady (moving uneasily in her slumbers)—Why, Algernon, this is so sudden, so—so unexpected.—Ex.

Angler (wailing)—Miss Goldbags has matter I know. I empty punky. Do you love my say those blood red roses where the American wives shamefully?

Pauny (with an ecstatic thrill)—Yes, I think how lovely and interesting it must be to have a real prince abuse you.—College Tod.

Teacher—When the wise men came to the king, what did they say?

Boy—They said, "Oh, king, live forever!"

Teacher—Quite right; and what then?

Boy—And immediately the king lived forever.—Life.

Drug Clerk (to man at night-bell)—What's wanted down in there?

Man—Do you want to save a man's life?

Drug Clerk—Yes; what's the matter?

Man—Come down quick (hic), there, and give me some whisky. If you're all busy closed.—Epoch.

"After you have mixed the batter for the angel cake what do you do?" asked the caller.

"I telephone for the doctor," said Ethel, "unless the cake is being made for the church fair."

Tommy—"Did you do much fighting during the war, pa?"

Pa—"I did my share of it, Tommy."

Tommy—"Did you make the enemy run?"

Pa—"You're right, I did, Tommy."

Tommy—"Did they ketch you, pa?"

Rouddale Bill (handing back the pie)—"Madam, will you kindly change this for a piece of snap?"

Mrs. Newhouse—"Certainly; but you can have the pie too."

Rouddale Bill—"Don't need it. I wanted the soap to get the taste of that one mouthful out."

Wickwire—"I tell you, Yabby, my boy, there is nothing like a baby to brighten up a man's house."

Yabby—"I have noticed that the gas rooms to be at full height in your house at almost any hour of the night.

Miss De Gushington (who has just named the day)—And where shall we go to spend our honeymoon, Harry?

Young Mr. Bliss—Wherever you like, Angelina. But say! It would knock things at the office higher'n a kite if I should be gone a month. Suppose we make it a honeymoon or ten days, sissy.—Ex.

The Second Edition,
Enlarged and Improved, of this most excellent work, has lately been published and is now for Sale at the
DESERET NEWS OFFICE.
It is Almost Indispensable to Every
Home and Foreign Missionary,
And is a desirable acquisition also to every Student of Theology and other person who values the means of advancing and defending Scripturality and Historicality the Principles of the Gospel.
The wishes of the compilers, that the work be published without profit so as to be within the reach of every person desiring it, have been studied in this as well as the first edition, and therefore no discount except for cost of postage is allowed to dealers.
The book is bound in four different styles and sent postpaid to any address at the following PRICES: 45 cents, 55 cents, 85 cents, and $1.10.

TALK IS CHEAP,
and the press teems with advertisements of sarsaparillas and other blood, liver and lung remedies but there is one medicine, and only one, the choice for which, as a cure for all lingering diseases arising from impure blood, are backed up by a positive guarantee. If it does not do just as represented in every case, the money paid for it is promptly refunded.
This peerless medicine sells beyond all others throughout the civilized world, and why should it not? It is the only one, and when its buyers up to a positive guarantee, by a large, old, well established reputation, for honesty, integrity and sound financial standing, back their words. And that's just what the Wonderful Discovery Medical Association of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery stands for. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery stands the fearful strain of time and, it takes to time, stands the test of consumption of the lungs (which is blood-spitting), purifies and invigorates the blood, thereby driving all skin and blood diseases, tumors, boils, scrofula, and kindred ailments.
