A brilliant wedding of the week was that of Miss Stella Irene Drescher and Lewis A. Grow which took place on Wednesday night. The event occurred at the residence of the bride's parents at 131 First street, Rev. Ellis Hoggan of St. Peter's church performing the ceremony. The home was beautifully decorated with palms, cut flowers and smilax, the parlors in which the bridal party stood being especially attractive. The bride looked very pretty in a profusion of sweetness being used with artistic effect. Pink was the color chosen for the dining room, which was profusely filled with glass bowls and boxes containing bon bons brought from the chandelier to the four corners of the table, and sink candles in elaborate candelabra completing the pretty table decoration.

At 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the room, the maidens and usher in blending shades of pink, the bride being as they appeared. Miss Grace Emery and Mr. Harvey Lamb came first, followed by Miss Nellie Hoggan, maid of honor, and the bride with her father. The groom was Mr. Walter Mc Cormick Fisher who acted as best man assisted then in the window home where the service was read. The bride wore an elegant silk of white ingenuine over taffeta with elaborate trimmings of valenciennes lace. The maid of honor of white silk and was farmed with lilies of the valley.

Miss Hoggan was gowned in pink lace gown and carried carnations. The ushers were Messrs. Frank Emery and Mr. Emery were both sons of couple with whom Drescher.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Drescher and the groom the popular teller in the National Bank of the Republic of this city. The newly married couple left last night for a bird trip to Denver, but will return to take out their home in Salt Lake.

Another pretty wedding of the week was that of Miss Lillian Hyde and Albert Riker, which took place in Wellington. The marriage was celebrated at the residence of the bride's parents at noon on Tuesday, a breakfast and then and in the evening a brilliant reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents on North Temple street. The rooms were beautifully decorated, the bridal party consisting of the bride and groom, attended by Miss Jane Hyde and Amasa Hyde, Jr., standing in a floral bower of palms, flowers and ferns, while the wedding bell in the dining room pink roses, carnations and smilax were used with dainty effect.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white Dupioni silk and Duchess lace and carried bridal roses and lilies. Miss Jane Hyde was gowned in dainty white Swiss with trimmings of Valenciennes lace and carried pink roses. Mrs. Hyde, of which the bride and groom are members, were present, and assisted the bridal party in receiving. Both the bride and groom are well and extensively known in Salt Lake, and a host of friends will join in the chosen widow for their happiness.

POPE REFUSED MISS HAVEMEYER A CHURCH WEDDING

MISS DORA HAVEMEYER.

Newport wonders what the Havemeyers will do about it. Pope Leo has refused to grant a dispensation allowing the marriage of Miss Dora Havemeyer and Lieutenant-Commander Cameron McR. Winslow to be celebrated in the Catholic church of the fashionable summer resort. The wedding was announced to take place on September 16, but if it does it will be at the private residence of the Havemeyers, for the Pope will not change his decision nor to sanction a hurried marriage without the usual publication. Miss Havemeyer is the daughter of Theodore Havemeyer, the sugar king, who died two years ago. She is heiress to considerable of the Havemeyer millions and was a little girl in short skirts when the naval officer met her. They have been friends ever since, but their betrothal was not announced until after the return of Lieutenant-Commander Winslow from the war. He came back as one of the heroes of the sea.

FEMININE FLOTSAM.

Grouping of Guests.

A certain smart little hostess, who has received much praise for a set of cards she makes it a point always to insert her table guests according to their beauty.

She arranges the stupid people at one end of the table and the bright ones at the other.

"It is far more successful," she says, "than the usual model system, where an attempt is made to avoid pairing throughout a dull man and a clever woman or vice versa. Here both are together, the stupid society being an sensible of the incongruity as the sparkling one.

"Now people are happier herded, because so intellectual strata is necessary. Each department adjusts to each natural standard of conversation.

"It is an arrangement that works admirably as long as the classification is recognized." Philadelphia Inquirer.

Emergency Notes.

In asphyxiation from gas, bathe the face and chest with vinegar, and hold some to the nose. Give strong coffee, and apply warm water to the head and warm water to the feet. In drowning, if the heart seems to have ceased beating, place patient on the abdomen, and roll gently to and fro, to empty the lungs; empty the stomach and air passages of water (usual). Remove all clothing from patient and place in blankets, using a bundle of clothing in such a body will not under his back to raise the stomach and chest and allow the head to fall forward, and secure it by tying string over it and under the jaw. Hold patient at an angle of 45 degrees, and give his arms below the elbows and draw them outward, upward and backward until they meet above the head. Repeat this movement twenty times a minute. Rub extremities to restore circulation. If breathing is restored, then promote the circulation by friction, artificial heat, etc. Give a teaspoonful of brandy, or ammonia, or ether, or camphor, also some hot milk, beef tea or coffee to drink.

Women as Army Nurses.

At the present time there are 33 women nurses in the service and there are now several from Puerto Rico to Manila. A nurse now receives under contract forty dollars a month, and fifty dollars if serving out of the states. An army uniform has not yet been adopted, but is in contemplation. Nurses are now taken in place of the woman nursing corps of the army on a permanent and satisfactory basis. But it is a hard life, Miss Mitchell says. "This is a thing which it is impossible to do continually, or at one stroke."

With the exception of the hospitals in other lands, organizations which so all the nursing of a large force of sick and wounded men, Miss Mitchell says, only when in them the continued ministrations of the chief of women nurses are needed, and that is more than a fortnight. The women nurses during the recent campaign performed herself upwards of sixty cases, the most trying and usual conditions. She has been a soldier's nurse than that, and has been unknowingly so officially. Nursing is distinctively a woman's vocation. It is a profession which under all ordinary and most extraordinary circumstances, should belong to women. Ask any of the soldiers who by ill or wounded if he would suffer the care and attention of the women nurse. There will be not one in a thousand who would. It will be seen that the more strengthening and support of a good woman's presence is, in time of war and suffering, far great as that of her professional rival—Anna Northend Benjamin, in Frank Leslie's Popular monthly for September.

An Object Lesson in Wealth.

Pictures had heard of the late Jay Gould and his high-piled millions of money, but for the past two years they have been treating a special object lesson on the power of wealth in newest Gould. In the effort of his daughter, the Duchess de Castellane, to produce in Paris the palace of the Grand Trianon, as built by the French Kings at Versailles, has been a certain age. Three-quarters of an acre of land was bought at the intersection of the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne and the Avenue Malakoff, at an expense of more than a million of dollars, the land alone costing a million dollars, the total cost of the palace is estimated at $1,000,000. Public interest has been made keen by the announcement that while the expenditure of money is no the Gould country, the interior was to be a faithful copy of the Trianon and Versailles. If the Gould millions are used in the building of the French architecture, it is from this idiotic desire. The period of the Louis XIV. and XV. in French decorative history was so remarkable—so undeviating that from its beginning the ancient Gaul has been unable to deal with such a wide interest as to be able to produce a purely native building or decoration. The Duchess is paying the central portion, but the detail decoration of the two wings is being undertaken by her son-in-law, two years time. When it is remembered that the Trianon was built for Louis Fifteenth's Madame Pompadour, it would take Doris years to build a Trianon, with all treasures for its interior, the property will then be worth millions of dollars. Both the Court and the nobles are collectors of rare art work and bric-a-brac, and in a single year it is said, they expended a million dollars in purchases for their new palaces. When the author of the idea was being arranged for the Castellanes went to Italy and sought the original palace of Verona. They did not find the palace, but revealed the secret of the book and those could be found only by the purchase of the old structure.

The household staff of servants attached to the Castellane palace numbers thirty-five persons, which necessary to the Count, a chief of the household, a chief of cellars and the wine, one coachman, a maid to the Countess, two footmen, a valet and a maid, and assistants. In the matter of food requirements, a butler and half a dozen footmen are required. When a dinner is on the house hours are lively indeed. The duty of the Count's butler is to see that the wine, the butler's butler, stockings of silver and a waistcoat of transparent silk and black silver knickerbockers and silk lace breeches. Another footman is required to see that the wines are poured in the reputation court style.
