PEGGOTTY BEACH MODERNS.

A New England Industry That Provides the Housewife with Some Money.

Fair old Scituate boasts an industry in which, if it be other, it is the leading town in the country. It has, as some of its more wealthy older towns have, its moss. Then the soils that carpet its harbor and make its shores bound by the sulfur is gathered on because every year that may not be periodic, but is still quite regular, augments the town for the bath of noisy, smoky factories and strong smelling wharves.

When the town gathering industry began in Scituate no one knows. Probably the cities of the town was first discovered by another by some fisher man's wife. The gathering and selling of moss for food began in Ireland many years ago. It was used principally by the people of the south of Ireland, and the convent. Many people have made the claim that they introduced the industry in this country, but even the other inhabitants of Scituate are in doubt as to who was the first.

The particular locality where the moss is gathered on is called "Peggotty Beach." Little Peggotty village is hundred feet, and here the women and their families ply the trade. There is no loafing. Everybody is expected to do his share of the labor. While the father is out in his boat selecting the sea to pull loose in his family's mouth and Mass tongue and jolly into the mouth of unwelcome "moss on" is on the beach at stories. There is much to do before the tide will answer," and he must watch the tides. With garden rake he leads off a patch on the gravelled beach, always being careful not to leave a footprint. Then he carries the moss that his wife and daughters have washed and the night before and spreads it on the smooth spot. It is of many colors, from the maroon, purple black to a delicate pink, according to the washings and bleachings it has received.

A few days in the morning and a westerly breeze—not a wind—is what the men pray for. Out by the rocks of Third Cliff the doubtful spots and dones were already stationed, and soon over wending up in the boat picking around to the water with long poles. In order to get a nearer view the reporter hired a typical small boy to take him out in his dory.

"How do you know when you are over moss?" was asked of a man whom the globe called "father."

"Oh, I can smell," was the answer.

The uninitiated would not distinguish one rock from another at the bottom, but the experience of years (for some of these people have been two as many as thirty years) makes their sight wonderfully keen.

The rake used in scraping the rocks has a bottle 20 feet long fitted into a heavy iron head. The teeth are set very close together and are sharp pointed. Over the back part of this head there is a guard that keeps the load from falling back into the water. As much as ten pounds of moss can be taken off the rocks at one shove of the rake. A good day's work for one man is 125 pounds of moss. The cargo often falls below seventy pounds. Should the mosses lose run of a rock which offers a good yield, and the ruffled waters interfere with his finding it, a bottle of oil is brought into requisition, and a little of it is thrown on the water to quiet the ripples.

The moss gatherers are not on the beach by the young folks, and "cooks" holding a barrel each of the weed are filled to the brim and the boats, and it is then spread to dry on the beach. To bleach the moss to the desired color eight washings must be made; it is bleached, when perfectly dry, in the shanties.—Cor. Boston Globe.

Trees in London.

The trees seem to grow better in the heart of the city than in its outskirts. Those along the Thames embankment are peculiarly flourishing. In Trafalgar square they have shrubbed a little. The tree in the northeast corner seems dying, and another near it on the east side wants a little looking to. Of course the source of delicacy is not city smoke, but sewer gas. In front of the National gallery well slipped boy trees, growing in sunny tubs—the gift of the Metropolitan Gardens association—give a little grateful color where it is most needed.

The success is so great—the green looks so well near the gray stone—that it is curious the experiment is not pushed a little farther. The yard between the ceiling and the facade of the building might easily be sodded over. London is greener than most large cities, but there is still room for much improvement.—London News.

A Press Secretary.

President G. Stanley Hall, of Clark university, tells the following story: "Some years ago John Warren, well known to old residents of Ashfield, started out as a 'drummer' to sell leather from Mr. William Bryant's factory. About this time he was 'converted,' and he forthwith began to carry as samples a poorer quality of leather than the average product of the tannery, for fear the goods when delivered might not be equal to the sample. He was 'on all fired hook,' and one of the village worthies in telling the circumstance, 'that he pretty nigh ran the old tannery clean out by selling from such darned poor samples.'"—Cor. New York Times.

WHAT IS A GUARANTEE?

Many merchants and salesmen are in the habit of indiscriminately "guaranteeing" their wares with no thought of being called upon to make the "guarantee" good. It is a prevalence and foolish custom more respected in the breach than in the observance.

A guarantee, to have any value, should be made with knowledge of the meaning of the word and a set purpose to carry out the terms of the guarantee. On this basis the makers instruct us to warrant, and we replace any bad stand imperfect to use.

We have used our best judgment, acquired by a considerable experience, in selecting the following Ranges for our stock and sell them to our customers with an absolute guarantee that if they do not prove to be all that we represent them, we will refund the purchase money in full.

"Jewel" Steel Range. A finished article, perfectly proportioned, made of the best material. Don't fail to see it. It will pay you.

"Quick Meal" No Gasoline, Evaporating. Light it as you do your gas burner. No smell. No danger. No complication. Every objection to the use of a Gasoline Stove done away with. Think of the discomfort caused in summer by avoiding the heat of a big Kitchen Range.

"Superior" Cooks and Ranges. Superior as to form. Superior in economy of fuel. Superior in design. Superior in construction. Superior in everything that goes to make a perfect cooking apparatus.

The "Fiesle Refrigerator." An ice saver. A Health promoter. Cellular stone lined. What is this? Investigate it. It will more than repay you.

Our stock of Builders' Hardware, House Furnishings, Garden Hose, Lawn Sprinklers, Lawn Mowers, etc., is complete in every detail.

A Crankish Canary.

(New York Sun.)

A childless couple up-town expend most of their sympathy on a canary bird which is a crank on the feather question. The little fellow, who is 7 years old, has always had an aversion to his natural dress, and has industriously pulled out every feather he could reach. The result is that he has now a speckled, shiny skin which looks like polished parchment, two or three lonely tail feathers, and a trifle of plumage on his head and neck. In summer he is all right, but the cold of winter bothers him. Always at first comes he to shed in a warm flannel jacket, which he minutes immediately. At night he lies down on a bed of cotton batting, subsits quietly to be covered up, and sleeps there peacefully till morning. If the cold becomes too severe he calls out until he is taken out of the cage and put to bed with his mistress, to whom he cuddles up eagerly for warmth.

An Inventive Youth.

Old Lady—This plaster you sold me won't stick.

Druggist's Boy—Oh sore fix that. Mr. Plunker, what's that sticky fly paper we had?—Good News.
