PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, AUGUST 17, 1898.

Garden City Notes.

Sheriff Stores went to Highland yesterday and made Owen Brothers shake loose. The brothers had unearthed and begun a complaint charging assault in the justice's court against the sheriff. When Mr. Stores had disarmed the two he asked the complainant if he would look bad to have a fracas of that kind in the courts. The complainant thought the matter over and concluded that it would be advisable. The sheriff then interviewed the accused brother and he was willing to withdraw. Friendly relations and the result was that the case was withdrawn, good feelings were restored and no costs will be charged to the county.

Neither of localities have been filled with Coxey Brownlee Thomas of the Bernina Consolidated and the Gertrude mining claims, situated about 2 miles southeasterly from the Big Grande Western Railway within No. 2 A. and Lehi, located by Joseph Stoddard et al.

FRAUD WAS COMMITTED

Supreme Court Decides in the Case of S. W. Mosby vs Matt Gibson.

AN INSANE MAN GETS HIS RIGHTS.

Which is the Half Interest in the Copper Mining Claim—Defendants Scored by Chief Justice Zane.

The Supreme court has delivered an opinion in the case of S. W. Mosby, guardian ad litem of Daniel R. Mosby, vs Mathew T. Gibson, the Copper Mining company and Caroline Dressler, reversing the judgment of the lower court and ordering judgment to be entered in favor of the plaintiffs.

Daniel R. Mosby is now an inmate of an insane asylum in New Mexico. Action was brought by S. W. Mosby, guardian and lawyer of the insane man, who asked that a decree of the Third district court of the late Territory of Utah, entered of Sept. 1, 1886, in an action wherein the defendants, Gibson, was plaintiff, and the defendant, Caroline Dressler, was defendant, be annulled, that a deed executed by her to the defendant, Gibson, which she purported to execute as the guardian of Daniel R. Mosby and his wife, be cancelled. The decree and the deed were attacked on two grounds, viz: First, that the court in which the decree was rendered did not possess jurisdiction over the person of Daniel R. Mosby. Second, that the decree was procured by fraud on the part of the defendants.

On Nov. 3, 1885, Gibson was the owner of the Copper mining claim in Marion and held a half interest in it in Daniel R. Mosby. In the consideration that Mosby owned $200 to Gibson and, it appears, another sum of $1,000, Mosby made the trip and became a half owner in the claim and received a warranty deed to it. About this time Mosby's mind and eyesight has been in the asylum in New Mexico. Gibson and Mosby's mother, Mrs. Dressler, a lady of 75 years of age, were on very friendly terms and, according to the finding of the court, Gibson exercised undue influence over her on account of their friendship and intended her to be appointed the guardian of her insane son. Gibson, the court also found, persuaded Mrs. Dressler that the money paid by her was for a half interest in the Copper claim and subsequently a loan, secured by a mortgage on the property. Mrs. Dressler in her capacity of guardian was then made a defendant in a suit brought by Gibson to have such judgment be, the facts and when such was accomplished and the amount of the mortgage paid, Gibson received a quit deed to the property.

The case was tried by Judge Hilton, who while he found the transactions of Gibson were fraudulent, decided that he had no equity but to dismiss the case.

Chief Justice Zane, who delivered the opinion, goes into the case thoroughly and says:

Unquestionably Daniel R. Mosby had an absolute title to an undivided one-half interest in the Grover mining property when Gibson commenced his suit against Caroline Dressler as the guardian of Mosby and that he had held such title for nearly three years before. And it appears from the evidence in the record that Gibson succeeded a volume before the suit was brought of having Mosby's interest do-
