IN SESSION AGAIN.

do this day. (Applause.) He has thought that I would suggest to you to, that you approach this question, in the spirit that I have indicated, with no thought of wrong toward any man, but with the firm resolution that in the matters, which are of the people, and belong to the people, the people shall and will to rise. (Great cheering and applause.)

"Those whose heads here are silvered with the frosts and snows of many winters, have but to turn their thoughts back to the land, the dark, the terrible night that Utah has passed through. If you have but to consider the distress that you have witnessed—and it has not been confined to Mormons; it has not been confined to Gentiles; all the people here have tasted of the cup of bitterness that was thrust to their lips. It had been hoped that all that which had caused the people so much sorrow and suffering had been buried never to be revived. It had been hoped by us that sectarian strife would be no divider here, politically upon religious lines; that no man would seek to play upon the religious feelings of the people. Year after year, campaign after campaign, there have been interjected into our political affairs that which has been said would be and that which should be, and that which hereafter shall be kept out. (Applause.)

"It culminated in a recent occurrence that is a part of the history of our Territory, and true indeed were the words of those who in a spirit of sarcasm, stated that the Chairman of the state committee recognizing that his party was defeated, therefore asked for the reassembling of this convention. I was confident of victory the day before the fateful Monday; and I was as sure of fleeing from the battlefield on the Tuesday following, and why? Because in every nook and corner in the Territory, there were men and women who were saying that our candidates and our party were under a ban, our own people disheartened, an wrong the power and influence of those in authority, knew not what to do, or where to turn, left that without any action on their part, a victory that was theirs by right, was being in an unjust and wicked manner, taken from them. Upon carefully considering the situation, there came news in the papers, before we had taken any action, that our candidate for Congress was to be forced to resign, and there were remarks flying here and there as thick as leaves on a winter's day. There were questions coming and demands being made that action should be taken. Finally the State committee was assembled, and it considered the matter seriously and carefully for hours, and it determined that the question having been taken upon this people, at this time, it was the duty of Democracy, which is always concerned, to meet it like men. (Applause.) And it recognized that the people having been robbed of all political power, it could only be properly met by the representatives of the Democratic party coming from all the different quarters of the Territory, in convention assembled, so that when the word was spoken as to what should be done, it would be with the majesty of the great party, founded by the man who wrote the Declaration of Independence. (Applause.) So we have asked you to assemble here today in a spirit of kindness toward all, but with the firm determination that we propose to march forward to victory. For my own part, when this news came to me, when I viewed that our people were discouraged, I felt and I said, that if we are to have the victory that was within our grasp, taken from us by sinister means, then we would that this territory was false to the pledge that it made to the nation; we would know that this people were not the honest people that they had said to the world they are. We would know that we had better by remain here under the tutelage of the national government, and we should not enter the Union under false pretense, but that we should take down our ticket and tear down the Constitution. (Tremendous applause.)

"But no sooner did the word go to the that your committee proposed to stand firm to plant itself upon the eternal principle of human liberty and political freedom, that it proposed to give to every church the right that it seeks for itself, as a political party. There came words of cheer; there came words of assurance from men who I had feared would distrust my motives. I have no time to tell you as hard as I could, to come by, but they said to me that they were with me in this fight, and I sent back the word to them that I was with them in the fight. (Applause.) In the course of the state committee became clear; it was to march forward, though but twenty men should follow. It was to maintain the Constitution of the State; it was to appeal to the people, and to call to their minds the fact that when they vote for the Constitution they vote against every union of church and state, and upon such an issue as that, as God is my judge, I would prefer to march with you in overwhelming defeat, than to enjoy victory gained by such means as the Republican party are using today in order to defeat Democracy. (Tremendous applause.) For if we do not succeed in this campaign, upon this issue, which will not down, if we do not succeed during our lifetime we can fight for that principle, and some day our children or our grandchildren will win, and then you will be remembered when the men who seek to enjoy the fruits of Republican efforts and machinations, are cast into oblivion. (Applause.)

"I have faith in the people, you have responded to this call in such a manner, that I am satisfied that there is no weakening; I am satisfied that we are to march forward to a victory that will never Utah with glory, because she will enter the Union as a free State, the people having declared, as they will by their votes, that there is nothing theoretical, but there is rare a practical division between politics and religion. (Applause.)

"Go forward into the fight, take the word of cheer to every hamlet in this Territory. Carry back to every man, woman and child the thought that I now give you, that this is a heroic crisis year," and that Democracy is going to win. (Applause.) That it will not only be a victory for the Democratic party but it will open to the benefit of every man, woman and child and close the door forever to religious hatred and persecution. It will bring all classes nearer and closer together; it will give us peace, and bury the animosities of the past. All this is a matter for which men can and for which men should fight. It is a principle ever living; it will write victory upon our banner in November. (Re-peated and continued applause.

MR. SMITH'S WORD OF CHEER.

Judge Powers then announced that he had received the following words of good cheer from a most Democratic woman who was unable to be present:

Dear Sir—I am greatly obliged to you for sending me complimentary tickets to attend the great Democratic state convention today; but owing to circumstances I am unable to attend. I should be delighted to be present at such a gathering of Democrats in championing the cause of "equal and exact justice to all and special privileges to none." All hail Democracy!

MRS. BATHSHEBA SMITH.

STATEMENT FROM MR. THATCHER.

A lengthy communication was next read by the chairman from Hon. Moses Thatcher, in which he claimed that he had always been opposed to the union of church and state and that the rule in Utah had not been Republicans opposed to Democrats but by their Republican opponents. The statement was made up largely from previous political addresses by Mr. Thatcher, and concluded with the sentiment that if in the matter of restoring church interference in the affairs of state he was with his party heart, head and hand.

The statement was received with enthusiasm and applause so vigorous that an inscutchable tumult ensued.

COMMITTEES APPOINTED.

On motion of Judge Dusenberry of Utah county, the rules were suspended and the committee on credentials which acted at the Ogden convention directed to perform a similar duty at this and on motion of Hart a committee on address, one from each county as follows, was named by the respective delegations:

Weber—David Evans.

On motion of John Sharman, of Weber, Judge Powers, as chairman of the State central committee, was added to the committee on address.

THOUGHT IT PREMATURE.

Just as the vote was being taken to name the committee on address, Chas. Ballantyne, of Utah county, rose and moved to oppose it, when he was ruled out of order. Later, however, David Evans, of Ogden, brought the matter up in a manner that secures for the gentleman from Salt Lake an opportunity to speak.

Mr. Baldwin stated his reasons for opposing the motion as being that it seem a premature. The convention was grappling with a question larger than the State committee was equal to—that was why the convention had been called together as a nonsectarian to discuss the issues that had arisen and assist the committee. Deliberate action should be taken. If it was the purpose simply to indulge in a pyrotechnical display then gentlemen who understood all about fireworks should be chosen. (Laughter.) If on the other hand the whole question was to be discussed with the seriousness it seemed entitled to then the very best men in the convention should be selected to prepare the address.

A Voice—That has been done.

There was a little more discussion on this question but the committee stand as named.

A VOICE FROM WEBER.

David Evans, of Weber, offered the following resolution:

Whereas, It has been asserted that the language used at the recent Price band meeting by Jos. F. Smith, relative to the candidacy of Mo. Thatcher and H. H. Roberts, has been distorted, misquoted and misunderstood; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the chair appoint a committee of five to wait upon the president of the church and respectfully ask for a verbatim report of that was said relative to the candidacy of said Thatcher and Roberts at said Price band meeting to the end that the public may know exactly what was said on that subject on said occasion.

H. V. Maloy, of Salt Lake, inclosing, if moved to amend the resolution by inserting the words "Patrick H. Lannan."

Amid the laughter of the delegates the chairman ruled the motion out of order on the ground that it was not germane to the question.

H. V. Evans in speaking to his resolution said he knew it would meet with opposition as it was a matter of great moment. Presidents Woodruff and Smith had very properly taken the position that they did not desire to be misquoted. Their language, they claimed, had been distorted and misconstrued and it was due them, the Democratic party and the people of Utah that they be allowed to state just exactly what they did say. That would simply be an act of justice to all and could not possibly work injury to anyone.

Hon. J. L. Rawlins said a committee on address has already been appointed. In that address, he presumed, there would be a statement of fact as the result of a careful inquiry into the case. It was a fruitless proposition to further discuss the matter at that time and he moved as an amendment that the resolution be referred to the committee on address with power to act.

The amendment prevailed and the convention took a recess until 2 p. m.

Afternoon Session.

There was the usual delay on such occasions in waiting for the arrival of committees. The one on credentials was probably ready to report on time but the one to whom was entrusted the duty of preparing an address was very much behind owing to the fact that disagreements arose in the committee as to what the declaration should contain.

Precisely at 3:30 the report of the committee on credentials was presented and adopted. There were no contests.

PROMISED IN TWENTY MINUTES.

Judge Powers here announced that the committee on address would be ready to report in about twenty minutes.

BORROW AND HARRIS.

At this juncture there were strong and numerous cries for Roberts, but as he was not present, Fisher Harris, Democratic nominee for state secretary, was called, and was delivering a grand and eloquent speech when the NEWS report closes at 4 o'clock.

He has never been arrested before but his father thought it might be a lesson to him if he was punished to an extent.
