STIFLED THE BABY TO DEATH

Escape from Wyoming Feeble Intoxicants—Murdered in Prison—Saving Soldiers' Homes.

The street runway in San Jose, Cal., has been placed in the shape of an ellipse.

E. Moulder killed a deer recently it being in a snow now in Carlin, Cal., on Monday.

The jailer at Rawlins, Wy., says, one week a bottle of tablets only, is a sufficient dose to cure the drunkard and wife.

Frank Barnum, an employee of the Standard Cattle company, was drowned in the wagon of the pontoon near Newcastle, Wy., Monday. Barnum was struck by lightning and instantly killed.

A traveler on the Sierra Nevada, in spite of all rules, recently became entangled in one of the fine traps in the forests of the Columbia. The trap cost about $1,000. It was easily wrecked. The bear which was killed, weighed over 1,200 pounds.

Monday night William H. Dugan, or, alias Wm. Alley, alias Wade, fled escaped from the penitentiary at Laramie, Wyoming. He was sent up March 28, 1894, for horse stealing. A reward has been offered for his arrest.

In the Sun Quentin prison, California, on Monday, a convict known as J. W. Lilly, alias Kelly, jumped on another prisoner, Walter Arthur, apparently without cause, and stabbed him to death. Arthur was quite old at the time of the attack, and unable to resist. Kelly is known as a bad character.

Douglas, Wyo., Newel Henry Pickard has been busy during the past week on a contract awarded him by the government, which called for the exhumation of the bodies of eight soldiers, who were killed by Indians near this place in 1865 and buried in lone sitting. The soldiers were found about four feet from the surface, and had been buried in various ways. The heads were pillowed on folded coats, and wisps covered the faces were in fair preservation. On being touch the clothing crumbled away and the skeleton fell to pieces. All the bodies contained several bullets, and one had three arrow heads and two bullets in side, and a leather cash in the shape of Pickard by a tomahawk. The remains are to be shipped elsewhere for interment.

A month old baby was starved to death last week in the Foundling's home in San Francisco, according to the report of Dr. W. S. Bright. Here is the doctor's statement: "I was called to the Foundlings' home on Wednesday evening to attend the child. I found that it was in great pain, and upon examination discovered that the clothing was drawn about it so tightly that it could scarcely breathe. This I loosened, and called the attention of the nurse to the fact that she must not pinch the children up so tight. The loosening of the clothing brought us relief and I ended for milk. The nurse I thought got out the child has not been fed, but I considered the milk and she gave it to me. It was pitiful to see the child take it. It took a thing it was nearly starved, and I was convinced to death. Before leaving I gave strict directions as to how the little one should be treated and when I next came from it the little one was dead. Knowing that all night not to right, I held a post mortem examination on the child and made the horrible discovery that there were but two drops of nourishment in its bowels, where power concluded that it had had nothing to eat for at least 36 hours. Assign that this it was perfectly healthy. There can be but one explanation and that is that the child was starved to death, and the indications were that it died in terrible agony." The nurse claims to have fed the child but that it was suffering from some diarrhea and could not assimilate its food.

On Sunday night the Salvation Army had a lively time in San Francisco. On Sunday evening, Rev. F. Fitzwilt, pastor of the Fourth Congregational church on Green street, turned a detachment of the Army to come over and help him in his services. His parish is a difficult one, located on the confines of the most complex Italian quarter of the city, and he thought the earnestness and spirit of the army would be good for his own parishioners and perhaps prove to some sinners. Major McIntyre and several officers were detailed to accompany the congregation to Dollar. The march began at 8:30 o'clock. The little band went into the district on their errand was like the retreat from Moscow. Not that the soldiers of the army did not make a brave show, but they were outnumbered. As they marched with tambourines and tambourines a rush of boys began to collect and drag their heels. Young men and maidens joined this rabble, until there were 200 men and boys trailing along after the army solid. When the little band stopped and tried to sing, their voices were lost in shouts and jeers. Presently, not content with screaming their voices, the crowd began to throw eggs, stones and things. Every member, including the women, was hit in the head and soiled in the most shameful and cowardly manner. Active officers Weber and the rank turned to a few moments to Sabbath Worshipers and to abandon the special meeting. The soldiers retreated their steps to the church, fled at its doors by women in their upper windows, who threw whatever vegetable come handy. In front of the church the soldiers decided to make a last stand, for every yard of the march had been with the wing stones, crowded about them. But the church people, hearing the outcry, come out, put a stop to the fun and escorted the Salvationists to proceed. Later all went into the church. The army does not intend to give up. "We could get licks again," said Major McIntyre. "I see the people here on. They are misunderstood yet, but they will like us in time. Next time we shall go with a big, strong force that cannot be dressed by the shouts of any mob. This sort of thing reminds us of old days and never fails to have an inspiring effect on our people. Next time we'll sing 'down down.'"

There is no dividing line.
