A Wyoming Man Bitten by a Rattlesnake While Irrigating.

AN ESCAPED CONVICT CAPTURED.

Cloudburst in New Mexico—Death of a California Pioneer.—A Flood in Cottonwood Canyon.

The closing down of the Colorado Fuel & Iron company's iron mine at Orient, Colorado, has thrown about 500 laborers out of work.

Cuthbert Burrell, a pioneer of California and a resident of San Jose since 1872, died on Sunday after a lingering illness caused by cancer of the stomach.

Carmencita Salcido, a young woman of twenty-four years, a native of Mexico, died suddenly at her parents' residence in San Francisco on Monday night in a fit.

The Southern Pacific company has sent out the order to cut down expenses in money of its departments in Oakland, Cal. The idea seems to be to make a reduction in the expense of operating street railroads in Oakland.

Mr. Denton, an employe of the Elliott mine was killed by a snake rattlesnake a few days ago while escaped his irrigating ditch, says the Buffalo Bulletin. He was brought to Buffalo the same night and seem of the doctor's case. Though the bite is extremely painful, he expects to be out again in a short time.

Frank Mahler, the German who escaped from the penitentiary at Canon City, Col., Saturday morning, was caught at Silver Cliff Monday morning by the marshal of that place and is now occupying one of the cabins. When captured he had on a suit of mocking and was almost exhausted from lack of food, sleep and from continued walking and exposure.

A tragedy occurred at the May flower mine, near Forest Hill, Colorado, last Sunday, in which Harvey McMahan was shot and instantly killed by Henry Phillips, a cook at the mine. William Sowring, a friend of Phillips, was accidentally shot through the right breast, but it is thought he will recover. The shooting was the culmination of a dispute over a dinner pail. Phillips claims to have killed his man in self-defense.

On Saturday a tremendous cloudburst coming on after ten days heavy rain, extending up the Pecos valley one hundred miles, destroyed the great dam six miles above Eddy, Mexico, a part of the flume, and part of the excursion passenger train. The bridges across the river were also carried out. No lives were lost and no private property damaged. The water did not come into the town. The entire loss is about $125,000.

W. H. Mosier, who had been in Rock Springs, Wyo., for over a year, has left for parts unknown, taking with him about $100 belonging to those who were trying to organize an order of the Patriotic Sons of America. Mr. Mosier took a great interest in forming this society and was appointed to collect the initiative fee, which he did to the amount named above, and then left. There is talk of bringing him back to answer for his crime.

A prominent eastern naturalist in a letter to the editor of the Tucson (Arizona) Citizen several years ago, in view of some exceedingly curious habits of bird and mammal life in Arizona, said: "Hereafter nothing from Arizona will surprise me. The unexpected is always to be expected." A propos of the foregoing it may not be known that the native fish in the Santa Cruz river bring forth their young alive. A more remarkable freak of nature cannot be found. The propagation of all true fish is supposed to be by the female depositing her eggs in the water to where they hatch and some fatty, but the young of the fish in the Santa Cruz are nearly an inch long at the time of their birth. Each female brings forth about twelve to fifteen young at a time. The male adult fish reaches from three to five inches in size, but the adult female is scarcely half as large. In color they are greyish brown on the back with bright silvery sides. At the present time the females are big with young, and strange appearing. We desire to call the attention of scientists and naturalists to this interesting and curious form of fish life.

The flood which came tearing down the Cottonwood canyon, northwest of town, on Monday, says the Richfield Advocate, created quite a sensation for a time; it took a diagonal course across the northern half of Richfield. No material damage was done, though it left occasions of mud, mixed up with brush, drift wood, rocks, etc., and making gullies and breaks in the ditches along its course. It made a rush at John Gardner's residence, but by a vigorous effort by the women folks, the only people at home at the time, the current was turned away from the house. Mr. Hales' residence was completely surrounded with the drift but no serious injury resulted. (The canal east of town, it is said, is full of mud and brush where the flood struck it. It is reported that some little damage was done to the north field, to the grain, in a few places. A heavy black cloud stood on the mountains west, steepled by thunder and lightning, and it is supposed there was a cloud-burst.

A passenger on the belated Midland train, due to arrive in Denver Saturday night, says the Denver News, reached the city over the Denver & Rio Grande last Sunday evening. The accident which caused the delay took place about fifteen miles above Buena Vista. The engine struck a pile of ties and rocks, throwing it from the track and killing Engineer Bates, one of the most efficient and popular engineers on the road. The fireman miraculously escaped. Engineer Bates was hurled in the sand and horribly scalded, so that death ensued a few minutes after he was taken out. "Tell my wife," said he, "that I have always lived for her, and bless my children!" He begged the sympathizing listeners and passengers to put him out of his misery. The death of the brave man is described by the passengers as intensely pathetic. He applied the air brakes and reversed the engine before striking the obstruction. A traveling salesman of the Wells Fargo Express company suffered a broken arm, but no other passengers were injured. Two tramps were pulled out of the baggage car a few minutes before the accident. Had they remained in their places death would have surely followed.
