NOW FOR THE BATTLE.

As a result of the work of the Democratic convention in Ogden yesterday, a complete State ticket was nominated, and the two principal parties are now regularly and formally aligned for the approaching fray. Each party has named its standard-bearers, each has drawn up its declaration of confidence in its principles, also its pledges, and has expressed its regret and condemnation concerning the opposition. Each professes the profoundest confidence as to success, and is already showing sympathy with the "victims" on the other side. Yet from the preparations already made and in prospect, neither appears to be an it can afford to neglect any opportunity or throw away any chances of advantage; the remotest outposts are not going to be overlooked, any more than the headquarters or center of the campaign is going to be underguarded. All this promises a hot, aggressive and interesting campaign, in the result of which the glorious element of uncertainty cuts no small figure.

In both tickets there are many features of unquestioned strength, but neither is altogether free from weakness. The point of view of each believer will have to determine these various judgments—we cannot undertake either to commend without qualification, or to criticise in detail. Where there is more or less of a scramble for recognition and more or less of a deference to geographical or political expediency, it is inevitable that some men should be swept down to defeat who in all genuine respects are superior to those who are winners. In every convention where many candidates had to be named this has been the case and it doubtless will continue to be; for the victory of the ballots is what the contestants are struggling for, and no element that can in any way contribute to party strength can afford to be alienated. Hence, while ideal candidates are numerous enough, ideal tickets are scarce; there is usually a mixing of the strong and the weak, and every party has real cause to congratulate itself if the share of the former is greater than of the latter.

We are pleased to express the sincere opinion that in both the tickets now before the people, the strong largely predominates over the weak. To a disinterested observer one of the tickets is far better than the other in certain respects, it will have to be admitted by such an observer that in other respects the comparison as to superiority is reversed. Generally speaking, therefore, we should say that inasmuch as the voters are pretty thoroughly identified with one or the other of the parties, each ticket or the other in its entirety will be successful. Which of the two will be that happy assurance, neither we nor any one else at this time can tell.

LATTER-DAY SAINTS' COLLEGE.

The tenth academic year of the Latter-day Saints' college will, according to announcement, open on Monday, September 9. There is at this time no need of saying much by way of recommendation of that institution. It has, during the six years of its existence, proved its efficiency in every respect, and all acquainted with the principal, Willard Done, and the other members of the family know that they are worthy of the confidence of the general public.

In accordance with the designation of grades in the circular of the committee of education, three departments are recognized in the college, the intermediate, comprising the studies of the first year of the preparatory course, the academic, comprising the studies of the second and third years, or preparatory course, the literary, scientific and business courses, and the ecclesiastical department, comprising the studies of the two years' sermon course.

The studies comprise theology in its various branches; English, in its various branches; mathematics, including mensuration; history of the United States, Utah, ancient; business branches, such as book-keeping, commercial law, shorthand and typewriting; mathematics, pure and science and pedagogy; drawing, penmanship and music; elocution and physical culture. In this school, therefore, the Latter-day Saints have an institution fully up to the requirements of a modern high class school, conducted on the principle that their children should be taught something about the doctrines they believe, for which their fathers and mothers have made so many sacrifices in the past.

The college has been generally well patronized hitherto, and we hope that it may continue in favor with parents only with the years of Zion, in order that its field of usefulness may be still further enlarged.

NOVEL LEGISLATION.

A discussion as to the relative amount of intoxication to be derived from very as it pleases is one that would popularize be supposed to take place only in Kentucky or France, and even then not in the highest scientific circles. As a matter of fact, however, that very theme has lately been disturbing the learned equanimity of the Paris Academy of Medicine in an exceeding degree, without as yet having been satisfactorily answered. It cannot possess much interest save to a limited number, but a wider field of investigation, into which the discussion led, can not but be of profit as a warning to the whole family of man. This related to the well-worn but ever important subject of the poisonous effects of spirits, champagne and liquors, as the same are manufactured and used in France. According to the reports, one of the delegates declared that chemical analysis proves all these beverages, and particularly the more expensive, to contain a large quantity of the poisonous substance known as fusel oil and amylic alcohol. Of course this was quite a shock to the gentlemen's feelings; but he went on, and declared that it was safer to drink the culinary spirits sold over the counter at a wine shop for a few sous to the wholesome loan to take a monitoring "quietness" at a franc. To prove this assertion he had been doing rabbits. Those to which the cheaper alcohol was applied suffered comparatively little. Those treated with "good old cognac" a glass a bottle all died. He mentioned that real old cognac is no more wholesome than the average brand. Finally, a committee of seven was appointed to carry the question. The result of the efforts of the various liquids are to be confined strictly to science and, lest in the main issue of the investigation, scientific material should be furthering on the various kinds of liquids in of which an animal is capable.

SPARROWS AND BEETLES.

An eastern exchange has the following to say about a certain bird occasionally seen in these parts:

Power themselves to the scientific name for the common English sparrow that chirpers so early there, and has multiplied so much as eaten as to induce some measures to reduce the bird population. In New York it is a nuisance due to food or house them and they are slaughtered without mercy. But which men undertake to correct nature they make a mistake. New York city is now suffering from a want of sparrows and an invasion of caterpillars which are destroying the shade trees. A new species of devouring is not has made its appearance in the Hudson river valley, a cross between a lightning bug and an English beetle, which is making havoc of the trees in other parts and so much to the society of that region.

Salt Lake City is not suffering from a want of sparrows, by any means; but we have an overplus of the identical "devastating insect" described in the foregoing, and for which the sparrow displays as much affection as a tramp does for a new and wooglifer—he doesn't disturb them except it be by accident.

HARDLY A PARALLEL.

The bad demeanor of the American press and foreign residents in China for a vigorous policy on account of the outrages against foreigners in that country suggest to the New York Evening Post the propriety of drawing a parallel between outbreaks of a similar kind in China and in the United States. The paper publishes the following in an official report:

In China, in 1870, occurred the Tientsin massacre; nineteen French and Russians (including several nuns) were barbarously murdered by a mob and the mission premises destroyed.

In the United States, in 1871, came the Chinese riot. Chinese dragged through the streets with hooks, stripped, some killed, several wounded.

In China, in 1891, some Europeans on a railroad killed some Chinamen.

In the United States, in 1885, came the Rock Springs massacre. In the Rock Springs massacre, a "riot" of the Chinese occurred, caused by an armed mob, inspired by Knights of Labor, now and about, some Chinese were killed, others wounded, some burned to death, shot and hanged, the dwelling houses were brought were killed and others wounded, families were burned to death, the dead were left and the dogs and hogs eat the mangled corpses. The whole population was driven out, leaving their dead and their property. For this we paid $148,000 (on September 19, at Seattle, the Chinese were expelled, Tacoma, Village, Issaquah, Snoqualmie, Roslyn, Cle Elum, Ellensburg, Yakima and several Montana towns, in Idaho, in Washington, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, and Oregon, hundreds were driven. In Juneau, Alaska, eighteen Chinamen were driven out, and in Wallace, with no cause, in two days, made with no cause. During the period the Chinese were expelled from almost of place on the Pacific coast, and more than 10,000 left San Francisco, for Mexico, Central and South America, and Japan, and the loss to the Pacific coast for one year's work, including damage to property, was over $10,000,000.

In China, in 1891, there were many lives lost in driving the white men out of the two mentioned.

In the United States, in 1885, there were great losses in driving the white men out of the two mentioned.

In the United States, in 1885, there were great losses in driving the white men out of the two mentioned.

In the United States, in 1885, there were great losses in driving the white men out of the two mentioned.

In the United States, in 1885, there were great losses in driving the white men out of the two mentioned.

It is not just to the Mongolians in this time, when they are strangers to the true tribunal of the United world, to acknowledge that they, too, have been a need against. Race prejudices and acts of violence are not peculiar to the Asiatic countries. Still, the cases are hardly parallel. The missionaries who go to China enter the country well equipped and spend large sums of money yearly in the localities where they settle — money contributed by friends in this country or England. Missionary stations are centers through which a part of the wealth of other nations flows into China, and by means of which that country is benefited from a pecuniary point of view, leaving out every other consideration. Can this be said of the Chinese laborers in this country? Generally they are constituent channels through which the wages of the Mongolians are diverted from those to whom they rightfully belong, and sent to the far-away shore. In these facts lie the essential difference between the cases quoted. The Post argument has really no force in the point at issue.

Justly the demand has gone forth for a vigorous policy in China, because without it that country will always remain closed to civilization and its millions may become a menace to other powers. Let there be light. The standard-bearers of civilization have a right and a duty to perform among all nations, and in the wise performance of that duty they should be sustained at home and abroad. The question of retaliation is unimportant if considered by itself, but the question whether barbarism shall triumph over civilization in China is the one involved in the recent occurrences across the Pacific ocean.

THE BIRDS (Nevada) Gazette of August 29 says some very nice things to say about Salt Lake City, Salem and Utah generally—the result, no doubt, of observations made by the writer during the recent press excursion. We quote the concluding part of the article, without pretending to know anything about the parties at whom it is curious is aimed:

Utah is so much interested in the 10 to 1 proposition up in Nevada, you see does not feel like exercising every other interest and yet he will in the humanizing influence of the Salt Lake Nevada is now the through the incidences and selfish acts of a few of those who care for a while what becomes of Nevada or her people, so long as their gain reaches the positive permanent.

THE REPORTED atrocities in Cuba by Spanish soldiers suggest that the insurgents should be recognized as belligerents as soon as possible, on humane grounds if for no other reason. As long as those patriots fighting for the liberties of their country claim no recognition by the powers that be, they are nothing but outlaws liable to the fate of such. Their recognition as belligerents would place them under the protection of existing international rules of warfare and to a considerable extent prevent the unnecessary cruelties that only result in sanguinary retaliation.

ACCORDING to a cable, since the 20th of September, the date of the fall of the Quirinal, has been set apart as a special day of prayer in Catholic circles for the restoration of temporal power to the Roman pontiff. What his holiness would do for instance in France, or in the United States, were the prayers to be heard, can at present be only a matter of conjecture.

THE PEOPLE of Los Angeles, Cal., are "sicking" because of the high rate of tax assessment to the city the present year. The total rate figures up to 1.6 cents on the dollar. That is only two-thirds of the Salt Lake rate. The California state tax amounts to 0.83-100 mills on the dollar.

A WASHINGTON bank which failed for $280,000, and showed a sum total of less than $400 in its vaults, no doubt did the best it could to maintain the reputation of the West for thoroughness.

AN OPINION GIVEN.

Recently Mr. J. D. Thomas, of North Dakota, visited the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, and after carefully examining the country located in Winchester, he wrote to Mr. V. Blohm, Land and Immigration Agent, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Baltimore, Maryland, as follows: "I have been in nearly every state and territory of the United States, and am fresh in my opinion that the Valley surpasses all other sections in the Union. The lands are low in price, and produce profitable crops. I thank you for directing me here, and solicit time seeking present and profitable homes to locate in this country."

ANOTHER RAMBLER DAY.

The Rambler here made a good showing in the Golden game. The first event of the day was the ten mile road race, in which Mr. Gladney finished third, taking third prize and third time. Then came the track race, the luck falling second in the horses, Fowler first, Weber second, and Thatcher third in the one mile, class B, all "Ramblers" you see. In the half mile class A, Mr. Gladney second, Chase third. Half mile class B, Thatcher second, Fowler third. Five mile, class B, Fowler second, this race a hard one to achieve and the two last had Chamberlain and Weber taking second place behind him. The track was a sight for those parties and the race left to Evans. The two mile, class A, was won by Rambler event, May taking one, Bert Gladney second and Mr. Gladney third. Everyone praises the day to glory enough for one time.

Praise may laugh and people may sigh,
And days may float if they please,
But Rambler's win every whipper-snapper go,
Regardless of how others feel.

Moral—Buy a Rambler! Ride a winner and you'll be a spinner.
