DURRANT'S DEFENSE.

Opening Statement of the Attorney for the Prisoner.

ALL HE DID ON THE FATAL DAY.

Defendant's Mother the First Witness Called to the Stand—The Pastor Under Suspicion.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25.—The intimation of Attorney Eugene Deuprey, for the defense in his opening statement that the murder was committed not by Durrant but by Rev. John George Gibson, pastor of Emmanuel church, made in a significant allusion to the resemblance of the preacher's handwriting with the lettering on the paper inclosing Blanche Lamont's corpse, caused a marked sensation.

The address of Deuprey began with definitions of the duties of jurors in capital cases. He attacked the newspapers for the articles written and published concerning Durrant, and warned the jury against improper deductions from circumstantial evidence. Deuprey then said: "The district attorney has presented a strong case of circumstantial evidence against this young man; it has created a suspicion of the world against the defendant. We claim that guilt of the defendant. We claim that beyond a strong suspicion the prosecution has failed to go. We contend that with all the testimony introduced the only means to be passed on have not been uncovered. Where did Blanche Lamont fetch her life? When and the place of her death? Who caused her death? These questions have not been answered. A fourth question is the cause of death. A fourth question is the motive for the crime. We have not and never can be answered, what was the motive of the accused to take the life of Blanche Lamont?

"Under the testimony thus far we have to ask the court at this time to instruct the jury, without one word, to acquit. As a duty to the defendant, his parents and the community, his life should be unsealed. You are entitled and shall know where Durrant was and what he did on the morning of April 3rd. Was he at home in the morning until he went to bed at night.

"The district attorney promised to show that Durrant was not where he should have been on the afternoon of April 3rd, namely at the lecture room of Cooper Medical college. Where is that promised proof? No allusion to it has been made. The prosecution has called witnesses forty and fifty witnesses. Of that number all have given material evidence. Twenty-eight of the three young ladies, one broker, a Victoria hotel keeper, a police court skyster and his colleague have furnished the substantial evidence against whom the prosecution relies. We insist that the proper proof is wanting to connect the defendant with the murder. We will show that other men had access to Emanuel church. Proof may point to others.

"Let me carry you along the ground upon which we ask for a verdict for the defense. First you shall hear from the mother of Durrant how he was interested in church work, and what he did for Emanuel church. We will tell you how he met Blanche Lamont, and of his associations with her. Mrs. Durrant will tell how her son was dressed when he left home on the morning of April 3rd. She will tell what her son did that evening. The good repute and honorable character of the defendant will be proven. The attendance at the Cooper Medical college and his general demeanor will be shown.

"On the morning of April 3rd, Durrant left home and walked towards the home of George King, so that he might have a helper that evening in St Image in the church. He accidentally met Blanche Lamont, whom he told he was on the way to King's home, and asked her to accompany him. She said that she did not have time to accompany him before school, and requested Durrant to accompany her to school. He acquiesced in this and accompanied her as far as Butter street and Octavia, while the defendant went on to Webster street to the medical college. We will show you these facts, and what Durrant did from his arrival there until the noon hour, when he walked to Broadway and to a ball game that afternoon.

"We will show you his return to college at 1:30, and what was done from then until 5:15. That he went to Dr. Cheney's lecture, and we will prove his notes, different from any other students and show he is marked present. Dr. Cheney will tell you that he was present. We will show you that after this lecture he took the Sutter street cars to Polk and Mission and Ninth, and Mission and then to the church, and alone did he walk into the church. We will show that he arrived at the church at 5:35, and not before, that he entered the door on the west side; that he went into the library in regard to a book and a card he wanted. He removed his coat, vestly folded it, hung it on a peg, and then would not drop out while he was facing the gas jets. He then went up to the ceiling by a ladder, and fixed the gas burners. We will show you that when the gas fixtures turned on the seventy-two gas jets much gas escaped. Through lack of ventilation this gas remained in the atmosphere of the ceiling, and when Durrant went to the ceiling he inhaled the gas, which made the size, as testified by George R. King.

"You are asked to believe that this man, accused of the murder, went down to talk to a woman a witness to his crime. We will show that Durrant was on the platform lying down, and was lying returned, went down to the platform to take the subject. We will show that upon the request of King, Durrant helped King to carry a cabinet organ down stairs into the Sunday school room. Then Durrant and King left the church together, Durrant putting on his coat at the door. In being King's dinner time, Durrant walked with him a short distance. Then Durrant returned home, meeting a lady on the way, to whom he told that the gas had made him sick. After dinner he went to the church to an evening entertainment.

"This will be the simple story of the defendant. He will be corroborated by those who know him well, and who will give reasons why these statements are correct.

"We will then turn our attention to some evidence found in that church. We will show that the marks upon the belfry door are the marks of a chisel, and that the chisel was found in the pastor's study in a tool box. We will show you, as long as they have introduced a paper here with letters on it to be compared with letters found in Emanuel church, that they are letters written by Rev. George Gibson. If we are to act upon suspicions, we will show you that there are others who have been cast into suspicion, and more than the defendant. We will show you that on April 3rd Durrant wore a dark suit of clothes of blue cloth, while the witness Vogel said he had light trousers. We will show that the strength of Mrs. Leake and Mrs. Crowell is impaired, and that the testimony of witnesses Quinlan, Oppenheim and Phillips for variety is bad.

"If we can prove what we have mentioned now, we should have the spirit of Blanche Lamont to call upon you to realize the truth, and if her spirit could come before you, we believe it would say: 'Let the defendant stand out in his free for he harmed me not.' Theodore Durrant is innocent; we stand for his life; we demand his liberty."

After a recess, Mrs. Matilda Durrant, mother of the prisoner, took the stand as the first witness for the defense. She told about her own birth and marriage in Toronto, Canada, where Theodore was born. The family came here in December, 1879. She detailed the childhood of the prisoner and his education at various schools. During vacations he worked at various occupations, and had money in the bank. He was baptized that evening, April 3rd. He had on was dressed in a blue overall suit, the blue trousers of which she identified, and the garment was produced in evidence. Mrs. Durrant stated that her son returned home that evening shortly after 6 o'clock, dressed in the same blue overall suit. He was not nervous. She testified that the trousers were made to order by a local tailor. When Theodore left home on the morning of April 3rd, he kissed his mother good-bye, and saluted her in the same manner when he returned at night. The family dined that evening at 6:15, but the witness said Theodore had little appetite, and did not look well. At 8 o'clock that evening he took his mother to a street car, and when she returned at 11:30 he was in bed asleep.

Police Sergeant Reynolds described the chisel marks on the belfry door. He searched for a tool with which the marks might have been made, and in the pastor's study found a chisel which fitted the marks exactly.

THE SURPRISE IN STORE.

OAKLAND, Sept. 25.—The line today says: Last night a prominent member of the Pinkerton detective agency passed through this city. He has just come from San Francisco, and is familiar with the whole proceedings in the Durrant case. When asked if he was a friend for a tip on the surprise that Durrant's lawyers were holding back, he said that as the fact would soon come out in court, he had no objection to telling what the profound secret was. The detective said that Durrant had worn in his possession some article which he knew to the court a letter, which is bound to establish his innocence of the crime with which he is now charged. The letter was written by Blanche Lamont, a day or two after she is supposed to have been murdered. Concerning the contents of the letter, or to whom or when it was addressed, the detective said he could not speak, but he said there could be no doubt but that the letter was written by Miss Lamont later than April 3rd.

DR. CHENEY DOES NOT KNOW.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25. — Dr. Cheney, who it was announced would testify that Durrant attended his lecture at the medical college on the afternoon of April 3rd, says he will make no such statement. He says that Durrant's name is present on his book, but that he does not know positively that Durrant was there.

Beaten by the English Boat.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 25.—The second race between the Shamrock, Sphinx IV, the English boat, and Colonel Wynn, representing the United States Yacht club of Connecticut, for the international challenge cup offered by the Royal Ulster Yacht club of New York, was won by the English boat today by 23 seconds.

"I was beaten by too many lies," said Mr. Fiest after the race. "I did not worth superstitious. I had some of those same evils aboard, and I treat them all before I discovered that four were too many. If I had held onto a small one on the little testing that we had to go, and one of good size to rendezvous, Colonel Wynn would have made a better showing.

England Not Alarmed.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Pall Mall Gazette this afternoon prints a series on the subject of the Irish nationalist convention at Chicago. The Gazette expresses the opinion that the so-called new movement is very like the one, which was recently crushed by the revelations in connection with the murder of Dr. Cronin at Chicago, and the object of which, it asserts, was clearly proven to be trouble and not the independence of Ireland.

"We can afford to smile at Mr. Finerty's statements," says the Gazette, "but if the Irish will formulate their demand and agitate for redress in the manner adopted by Englishmen they will find England more than ready to meet them half way. Threats only stiffen our back and call out our bearing."

CHEAPER TRANSPORTATION.

Paper Read at the Deep Water Ways Convention in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 25.—At the Deep Waterways convention today Thomas Curtis Clark, of New York, read a paper on "New York and Deep Water to the Great Lakes."

"It is agreed by Americans," said Mr. Clark, "that New York is the port to be altered w.ev, the question is how to cheapen transportation thither? The cost of transportation can be lessened either by very deep ship canals or by canals deeper than at present in use, connecting with the lake vessels and requiring transhipment.

"If a ship canal is built at all, it should be deep. It should at least provide for a vessel like the Victory, 300 by 41, and carrying 20-foot draft, 20,000 net tons, or 232,000 bushels of grain."

Mr. Joseph H. Oilham read a paper on the subject, "Is a type of vessel to navigate fresh and salt water practicable?"

Mr. Oilham thought he could design a large screw steamer that would answer fairly well for combined ocean and lake trade. Such a design would pertaine of a compromise between typical lake and ocean steamers.

The address of L. R. Hard, manager of the Dairy Butter mill of West Superior, was along the line of his own experiences.

"We must be in a position to give better flour than can be had ..... for the same money from other ..... further reduction of price to the consumer is possible. The cost of making flour has in recent years been reduced to the minimum. The only hope, here, is in cheap transportation.

"With the completion of a canal of twenty feet from the great lakes to the Atlantic seaboard, I think we shall decided advantages over the present conditions will prevail, namely:

"First—A reduction of the cost of transportation from lake ports to the Atlantic seaboard and to Europe.

"Second—Greater dispatch in the carrying and delivery of freight destined to the market along the Atlantic ports and to Europe.

"The effect of so radical a revolution in commerce cannot possibly be otherwise than wholesome, and its ultimate effect will be that of greatly stimulating our grain and flour business with the markets of the East and the New England States, as well as those of Europe."

HOOSEVELT WAS THERE.

He Reviews a Parade Intended to Be a Demonstration Against Him.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The much-heralded demonstration of the United Society for Liberal Sunday Laws, which occurred today, was a unique affair, and the person who did most to make it such was Police Commissioner Theodore Roosevelt, for whose detriment the display was largely projected. Mr. Roosevelt had been invited to review the procession, and to the surprise of every one, Mr. Roosevelt did review it. He appeared early in the stand, which was crowded with leaders of the liberal movement, including Dr. Anderson, president of the German Reform United, Excise Commissioner Haberger, James Keating and a score or more of others, and was on the stand in his capacity as though these gentlemen had been his most fervent allies. Then he stood and smiled urbanely while the line went past with many banners and transparencies emblazoned with such phrases as "Down With Roosevelt" and "Roosevelt is a Fiend and Humbug," which were always cheered loudly among the enormous throng by the vehicle spectator.

The commissioner was recognized by all of the crowd as he passed and was heartily applauded and greeted with cries of "What is the matter with Roosevelt?" to which came the stereotyped answer.

When Commissioner Roosevelt first stepped upon the stand he was presented to Herman Ridder, the leader of the "German" line, who stepped from one form among. Mr. Ridder is one of the intent men in the opposition to Roosevelt, moreover, he does not know the commissioner, and thinking he was being made the victim of a joke, said unceremoniously things about the intent and when the situation was explained. Although Mr. Roosevelt overcame his interest every other feature of the day.

The parade itself was an interesting exhibition and drew enormous crowds to the line of march. There were 400 societies, represented by about 10,000 men in line. Most of the societies were organizations.

Many floats were drawn along, the most conspicuous of the lot comprising the Genesee of Liberty attired in Grecian robes, attended by the muses, with clasped hands and hanging heads—very handsome young ladies all of them.

Valkyrie Remains Here.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The World will tomorrow say: It may be safely stated the Valkyrie III will not cross the ocean this year. She will, unless all signs fail, be laid up for the winter at South Brooklyn or at the Erie basin. Lord Dunraven's change of front is, in reality, not so sudden as it seemed to those who took a trip down to the Erie basin yesterday morning, expecting to see Valkyrie departing, and found instead the crew busy unloading her stores and carrying them aboard the City of Bridgeport.

Rumors that the unsuccessful challenger would stay on this side until next season have been rife since last Friday. These rumors crystallized into what was practically a certainty last Monday night, when Captain Cranfield showed in Kismomet, one of his most intimate friends in this country, a telegram, ordering him to stop work on Valkyrie until further notice. The "further notice" came at breakfast in the morning in the shape of another telegram, ordering that the crew be at once taken off of the Valkyrie and put aboard the Bridgeport, and that the performance of this order that the crew devoted the greater part of yesterday.
