DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Saturday, - - October 28, 1893.

FRAGMENTS.

THE NEWS reminds its readers of the theology class to be organized tomorrow under the auspices of the Church University. All worthy applicants, if above the age of fifteen years, will be admitted. There is no charge for membership. The class meets at the Church University building, 123 west First South street.

AT Wanderland last night a private of company A, Sixteenth infantry, Fort Douglas was armed with a fit of extreme severity and raved like a maniac. He was removed to police headquarters where he was taken upon by Dr. Marshall who stated that he was suffering from an attack of hysteria-epilepsy. Later the patient was conveyed to his post in the military ambulance.

In Rich County.

Joseph Irwin, writing from Laketown, Rich county, under date of October 25, says: Last week, Stake President William Budge and his counselors, J. H. Hart and William L. Rich, held meetings in all the wards of this county, one each at Garden City, Meadowville, Round Valley and Laketown, and two each at Randolph and Woodruff. Excellent remarks and spirit characterized all of the meetings. A sad occurrence happened just as the Round Valley meeting terminated. As the people vacated the house horses were seen issuing from the residence of Mr. Lehi N. Early, whose family were among the worshippers. Immediately all the men present jumped into a wagon and the make pressmen into their buggy, and drove to the scene of the disaster, but arrived too late to save anything except a bed and a trunk. Teams were rendered homeless a man, his wife and four children. Mr. Jesse B. Early lost a valuable mare in two days after an accident of her driving to the fire. The cause of the fire is a mystery, as for two hours before the family went to meeting there was no fire in the stove.

As stated in the NEWS when the first announcement of the fire was made, last week, Mr. Early's loss was over $1,000. He had cattled his insurance of $[illegible] with the Home Fire Insurance company, but not allowed it to become void through the non-payment of the premium.

Needlework Guild.

By request of the president, members of the Needlework Guild are reminded that their garments and dues should be sent to their respective directors by Wednesday, Nov. 1st.

A BURNING SHAME.

Utah is continually and justly proud of her splendid free school system, magnificent buildings and talented educators, the pulse, too, with pride to the small amount of illiteracy of her inhabitants. Naturally she is sensitive on this question and will quickly resent any insinuation that she is not entitled to her reputation and stands in this respect. There are men, however, who owe their all to Utah who for mercenary reasons and for the base advertising and political notoriety they are able to obtain out of it dishonestly and maliciously claim that all that Utah has in the line of free education came from the gray matter within their heads, by courtesy called brains.

Such a man is C. E. Allen, the lawyer without a practice, who recently went to Washington in the interest of silver and was converted by the Populists and who now aspires to become the leader of such a political organization in this Territory. Mr. Allen has a fair, common school education and has had a little experience in teaching the young idea how to shoot. He has served two terms in the House of Representatives of the Utah Legislature being elected on each occasion of course by the Liberal party before whom he cowed as supliant as did ever menial before master. While in the last legislative session he introduced a bill—for political effect—providing for the establishment of a free school system in Utah.

But it was so utterly unapplicable to this Territory and bristled with such incongruities that it was found necessary to set it aside. Or in other words to kill the measure outright. A new bill was drawn up and presented by Hon. W. G. Colbeth, and from that the present free school law was evolved. No one knows that any better than does Mr. Allen. Nor does any one know better than he that he talked long, loud and disgraceffully against it in season and out; that he voted against it every time it came up and that he did his utmost to prevent it becoming a law. And now and ever since he has been posing as the "father of the free school system of Utah." Fie for shame Mr. Allen! Your record will live you down. Instead of being the parent or author of Utah's free school law your name will go down in history as the strongest opponent it ever had. Be just, if not to your enemies, then be so to yourself.

Every old resident of Utah knows that there were free schools in this Territory (it is true they were not general nor was the system complete) long before Mr. Allen came here or before he under the magic wand of evolution became a lily of the valley or a Populist. Some of the gentlemen's admirers—it is probably due to ignorance—actually cry out when they see a handsome educational building: "Look what Allen (the parent falsely most not be omitted here) has done." Some of these ignoramuses are actually edified to the transportation to Provo. If Mr. Allen ever paid a dollar in the tax fund used in the erection of those structures there are very few people who know it. It is doubtful whether there is an area bully or political pirate in the Territory that would allow his name to be used in connection with such temerity. Call off your dogs Mr. Allen and let the truth be known. COLONEL AMOS.

SUICIDE AT BRIGHAM CITY.

An Old Lady Hangs Herself in a Peach Tree.

Tuesday, Mary Johnson, an old woman of the Fourth ward, says the Brigham City Bugle of the 26th inst, committed suicide. She was just seventy years of age and is said to have not been right in her mind for sometime. She went out in the garden, placed a noose around her neck, tied the other end to a strong peach limb and swung herself off into eternity. She had been living alone and her children who brought her dinner discovered her hanging to the tree.

AUSTRALIAN JOTTINGS.

SILVER IN NEW SOUTH WALES.—The yield of silver in this colony for last year was 255,984, silver sell lead £3,[illegible].

AUSTRALIAN TIN.—The production of tin in New South Wales last year was 2[illegible],[illegible] as compared with £[illegible] in the preceding year, the largest annual production since 1884, being from 1,708,750 in 1881.

NEW SOUTH WALES GOLD MINING.—Gold mining in New South Wales appears to be looking up, as the yield of last year was 2[illegible],176, being 317,[illegible] more than that of 1892, and the largest since 1876, when 2[illegible],[illegible] was raised.

NEW SOUTH WALES TIMBER.—Steps are being taken by the New South Wales agricultural department with the view of fostering the export trade in colonial timber. It is proposed to send a number of samples of wood boxes to London. A consignee in the British metropolis will be asked to lay down a portion of a street with them, in order to show their value. It is believed, if it can be shown by practical experiment that Australian blocks are better than the timber now used, a large trade will spring up, provided that the wood could be sent to England at a reasonable rate.

MINERALS OF NEW SOUTH WALES.—The mineral resources of the colony are incredibly large, the coal measures extending from the 29th to the 35th parallel of south latitude, and reaching to the sea along many miles of coast. The seams are of great thickness, and the coal is raised in considerable quantities for export as well as for home consumption. Gold is found in many parts of the colony, and fresh discoveries are frequently made, the total quantity of auriferous ore and metal annually obtained being considerable. Silver has lately been obtained in immense quantities at Broken Hill and elsewhere, and it is believed that the silver-lead resources of the colony will be found to rival those of any other known silver-producing country, either ancient or modern. Silver lead and lead ores are plentiful, but not much worked. Copper is abundant in several places, especially in the Cobar, Nymagee, Bathurst and Bourke districts. There are immense deposits of tin in the northern parts of the colony, the area of auriferous country being estimated at 55,[illegible] square miles. Iron of excellent quality is plentiful, and in many places is found in close proximity to coal. Other metals include antimony, bismuth, kerosene shale, etc. Diamonds and other gem-stones are also frequently found.

VALUE OF RATABLE PROPERTY IN NEW SOUTH WALES.—The capital value of all the ratable property in the colony is £147,[illegible],000, as compared with £144,277,[illegible] for 1892-3, showing an increase of £2,452,[illegible] for the twelve months; in this increase is included the value of property within the five municipalities established during 1892, viz., £1,[illegible],000, so that actual increase of municipalities existing in 1892 was £2,[illegible],000. The annual rental value of buildings, and cultivated lands or assessed was £7,[illegible],414, including £44,[illegible] for newly established districts, the annual value for all municipalities was therefore £5,[illegible],[illegible] as compared with £[illegible], showing an increase during the year of £[illegible],842. In municipalities other than the city of Sydney unimproved land, that is to say, land not occupied or cultivated, is separately assessed. For 1892-3 the value of such land was £14,[illegible],[illegible], including £3,[illegible],000 in new municipalities, leaving £14,[illegible] to be compared with £[illegible] for 1891-2, or a reduction of £1,[illegible],000. The capital value of all ratable property in Sydney and suburbs, £107,[illegible],000; other municipalities, £[illegible],000; total, £[illegible]. Annual rental value of buildings, or occupied land—Sydney and suburbs, £[illegible]; other municipalities, £[illegible]; total, £[illegible]. Capital value of lands taken as improvements—Sydney and suburbs, £[illegible]; other municipalities, £[illegible]; total, £[illegible]. These figures show the best possible criterion of the rapid progress of the colony.

THE JENOLAN CAVES.—These are perhaps the largest and most interesting of the various cave systems of New South Wales. They are easily reached from Sydney, the greater part of the journey being performed by rail, and are of vast extent and singularly attractive, being remarkable principally for their stalactite and stalagmitic formations. Among others may be cited the New Cave, which, when illuminated by the magnesium light, has been described as a scene of surpassing loveliness, the appearance of a heavy fall of snow being produced, with rocks in the background presenting to the imagination a block, frowning 483 the Bell Cave, which is the finest, as it is called, is reached, where are six singular stalactites hanging close together, which, when struck, give out sonorous musical tones resembling a chime of bells; the Lucas Cave, a series of large chambers connected by narrow passages, whose principal features consist in stalagmitic formations of very massive form, a pool of exceeding clearness, a large white mantle resembling folded, the sheets of semi-transparent stalactites, and some very pretty pillars; the Imperial Cave, 350 feet high, with its swiftly running underground river, one of the most sensational of caves; slight the Easter Cave the most beautiful and grandest of them all, and numerous others—a whole group, in fact, of magnificent subterraneous halls and bewildering galleries, forming under illumination a gorgeous spectacle, "filled with pendulous pendants and drooping sprays, gigantic columns and shadowy arches, all replenished with dazzling, illusive gems." Without the caves are a host of other attractions, those next near to
