KILLED BY THE SPANIARDS.

Sad Fate of the Bagoff that Dared a Sharp Fight.

Mauserses were in Vogue to Make a Capture on the Floor but Six Cent. When the Settlement Occurred.

Key West, Aug. 11, 5:00 p. m.—One more make has been added to the ghastly list of the navy's war victims. Seven at U. Kennedy, a gunner's mate, was the gallant fellow, who was killed instantly killed during a sharp engagement with Spanish officers at a price of 1400 bulling in Porto Rico, on the south coast of Four de Rico in Adalid 2. It is not known how many Spaniards lost in battle for the gallant Kennedy was the one who undoubtedly avenged. The Nashville was engaged when Cuba was at Mariano Key when a call was made along to the land about ten miles to the northward. The garrison attacked launch crew of twenty Spaniards and Lieut. Henry H. Wilson, with Captain Sam, all carried office. Lieut. Wilson was in charge of the launch. He ordered all hands to land and they were landed in the face of a fusillade of Mauser bullets. The launch was lowered at the cannon's midnight in the dark and was landed on the sand with work with cheerful cheers.

James Mahoney, a coal crew coming, ran to the wounded and made a line fast to her in order to pull her out. At the moment he was shot through the shoulder, an enemy wounded, dropped over the side of the launch and took for the shore. Mahoney was wounded for the second time and the wound proved fatal. The launch was commanded to land at the schooner, but the Spaniards had left the shore and the launch was brought off. Two Spaniards, who had caught sight of the launch, opened fire on the crew of the Kennedy, who was standing over the side of the launch. He was hit through the breast and died instantly. Lieutenant Wilson maneuvered the launch so as to take a fire through the Spaniards from the rear. Lieutenant Wilson was proud out and the men proceeded to give people the enemies with such well directed fire that the Spaniards were routed without a chance to reach the American line.

The officers had in the engagement were highly appreciative of the gallantry displayed by the men of the "Nash" was in a perilous situation.

Kennedy was buried at sea the same afternoon.

Among his effects was found a letter to his father addressed to the care of Hopkins, agent of the U. S. consulate at Alfonso, Cuba.

The fact, matching the Kennedy accident, was the death of Ensign Gadsden Maple had gone to Rockville and could not a passage. On August 4 Commander Chadwick, who was senior officer there, informed the lad to the Maple with his friends before sailing under sail. Ensign H. Maple, launch with his under Ensign Gadsden, still stayed with his ship and shipped.

The Maple proceeded to the northward on the coast of Cuba and there was a sharp and a large prisoner was chosen in them. The launch would in after them but as soon as the war the Spanish vessel from to their small boats. The sloop was surrounded and forced the boats to land. The Maple headed for launch. As the latter drew near to the sloop a party of Spaniards in shore opened fire on the launch. Then the launch's one pounder opened fire on the enemy, but before the launch could be brought to bear upon the enemy the Spaniards had opened fire with six pounders and the launch fired back. While the dense smoke obscured the sight of some a dozen advantage to American guns which had been made under the Maple's heavy fire a large number of Spaniards were killed. Wounded.

The sloop turned out to be a trading vessel with no cargo on board and had hoping with the intention of selling it to an American port, a few shots from the Maple put her under water.

The schooner, which was proved to be of value. She was the Carmita loaded with wood and charcoal. She was loaded with wood and could be used in running when the Maple owing the schooner and launch received his Journey to Kansas City.

Commander Chadwick says that as all hostile trade is now considered a legitimate one, he was chickens and Cuba is being carried to between Batabano on the south coast of Cuba and Havana which port there is a railroad running into Havana. There are, however, no means of transport for the cattle and any of the ports between Batabano and Cienfuegos, and he considered it wise to send prisoners of war ashore on the west side of the island.
