BROKE UP IN A ROW.

Indiana Legislators Indulge in a Riot in the House.

CHEERBAWS, FURNITURE SMASHED

Member Injured Perhaps Fatally, Others Bleeding—Cause of the Fight.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 11.—The legislature broke up in a wild riot tonight, in which almost every man on the floor participated. Members were carried out and many persons were seriously injured. Adams of Park county, perhaps fatally. For only twenty minutes the State House was filled with a howling, surging rush. Men who had been friends and associates for years forgot all ties of friendship in the excitement, became deadly enemies and made every effort to injure each other. Myron King, Governor Matthews's private secretary, was seized in the elevator, and a big burly man grasped the door and refused to allow him to leave. The police finally forced the door away and the secretary was released. When he arrived at the door of the House at 12:15 he found it closed. He had an important message from the governor and a great deal depended upon its delivery to the speaker of the house before 12 o'clock.

He pounded on the door, but was refused admittance. He cried that the end was locked and repeated that it is special, as he had a message from the governor. His voice was heard by a dozen of Democrats who were in the corridors and they ran to his assistance. An attempt was made to force open the door, but the crowd of Republicans who were bent upon the governor's secretary being kept out with his message, resisted with all the force they could command. The party on the door were unable to stand the pressure brought to bear upon them and they were forced open. King, who was in front, was crowded upon by the crowd of Republicans, who were bent on keeping him from reaching the speaker. With one accord the men began striking at each other, and the minority was in great danger of being killed.

"Six men" cried a hundred voices. The women who were in the gallery screamed, not one or two of them, but all. In a moment everything was exclusive and friends and enemies alike were fighting. The sole aim of the Democrats was to get King through the crowd to the speaker's desk with the governor's bill, and the Republicans were determined to hold him from it at whom, at which time the House would adjourn sine die.

Inch by inch the Democrats gained ground. Many persons were knocked down and trampled under foot. Benches were fastened to the wall, but so hard they were drawn the men holding them were knocked down. The very chairs were torn from the floor by hands, and the desks were broken to pieces. Desks belonging to other members were forced by persons in the surrounding to effect an entrance to the chamber. The police were powerless to check the mob which seemed bent on destroying everything in its path.

At 2:30 the excitement was intense, men were fighting in every part of the room and several of them were bleeding from numerous wounds. The Democrats were gradually forcing King toward the speaker's desk, and the Republicans were growing weaker, on account of some of them being injured. A few minutes later King, with his clothing torn almost from his body and in the struggle was pushed by main strength through the crowd and thrown violently against the speaker's desk. He fell forward and Matthews's vote in his hand, but it never reached the speaker, as King was about to place it in Speaker Adams's hand, that official leaped and lost back the crowd and in a voice that could be heard above the turmoil, cried:

"The House has adjourned; the House has adjourned!"

This raised a great cry from the crowd and everybody made a rush to see the speaker. The vote was torn from King's hand by a man who tore out of the crowd with it and made good his escape. This practically ended the riot, several small fights occurred, but the police finally succeeded in driving them from the chamber. No less than two dozen persons were hurt. No arrests were made.

The trouble originated over the attempt to suspend Hubbard, a Democrat, with a Republican. The governor has three days in which to consider all measures. The bill was delivered to the governor three nights ago. It was his scheme to force it to the last minute and then the legislature could not pass it over his veto, as his statute adjournment would take place at 12 o'clock. The governor's secretary started with the bill with ten minutes' time.

Adams, who was injured, is the representative of Park county. He was knocked in the pit of the stomach and had to be carried from the house.

Largest Telescope Ever Made.

GREENVILLE, Pa., March 11.—Greenville is to furnish the lens for the largest telescope that has ever been constructed. Rev. John Peat, D. D., a Methodist minister of seventy-four years of age, has made the lens.

The lens is to be used in a telescope for the Methodist university at Washington. It is to be a monument to Rev. John Fiske much more significant than any costly column that might be erected to the memory of the grand old gentleman. The lens, when it is completed, is to be sixty-two inches in diameter and seven inches thick.

Sultan Mine Fire.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 11.—The shaft house at the famous Sultan gold mine, fourteen miles from Hat Portage, caught fire early this afternoon, and before the flames were discovered they completely enveloped the building. This, of course, shut off the air supply to the mine, in which were working twenty to thirty-five miners.

The fire is supposed to have been started by a pipe in the pocket of a coat hanging on the wall. Foreman Johnson, noticing the fire, called on the men to assist in putting it out, but all ran away, being afraid of explosions. Johnson rushed into the fiery room, removed two boxes of powder, and then directed his attention to an attempt to save the building. There was no fire up to noon, and a wonderful escape was organized, but it was of no avail, as the shaft house was completely consumed.

Shortly after 2 o'clock the fire was extinguished in the shaft and the men descended and found six men on the first level apparently all suffocated. On the lower level they found three more, and these men were in better condition than the others. Efforts were begun to raise them. The first raised was revived after a short time. The fourth man, John Lagler, died shortly after he reached the surface. The others were in a critical condition, but all recovered enough to-

It seems the air shaft against and caused suction of the air from the bottom of the shaft, depriving the men of fresh air, and the resulting smoke followed the men, and when found they were unconscious and leaning against the side of the shaft.

GEORGE GOULD'S REPORT.

Financial condition of His Railroad Lines at Hard Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 12.—The annual report of President George J. Gould, of the Missouri Pacific and St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway companies, presented at the annual meeting of stockholders today, showed that notwithstanding the troubles and depressions experienced during the past year the road is not financially embarrassed. A synopsis of the financial report follows:

Gross earnings from traffic, $21,303,[illegible]; operating expenses, $15,[illegible]; net earnings, $6,[illegible]; other income, $741,[illegible]; total income, $6,[illegible]. Percentage of expenses to gross earnings, 70.[illegible]

Charges against income:

Accrued interest on bonds, $3,128,[illegible]; taxes, $[illegible]; rentals, $[illegible]; sinking funds, $[illegible]; property accounts, $[illegible]. Interest paid on advances of directors in late to December 31, 1894, $1,[illegible]. Total, $7,[illegible]; leaving a deficit of $1,[illegible].

The larger part of this deficit is caused by the payment of several years' interest on advances by the directors, interest for six and up to December 31, 1894. While the decrease in earnings from traffic amounts to $2,[illegible], expenses were reduced $1,[illegible]. The property was well improved and maintained notwithstanding the more reduction in expenses.

In the report, President Gould estimated allowance for financial depression and strikes that prevailed during the years 1893 and 1894, and added:

"Owing to the financial conditions of the country and the stagnation of business, no new enterprises were begun and many industries were closed, or their operations reduced, awaiting the solution of the national financial problems.

"Rates were greatly demoralized during the month of May. They were restored, however, on the 28th day of May, and since that date have been generally well maintained. It was hoped that Congress would pass the necessary laws to enable the railways to divide their business and regulate the payment of bounces to each other, in fair way rates would become uniform and there would be no discrimination; the interstate commerce law would become thoroughly effective and the business community put upon an equal and sure foundation. It is difficult to see how the railway can be saved without some such legislation. Without it financial errors will probably follow track until the whole financial structure of the railways has been pulled down. It is difficult to see how prosperity can return to the country with these conditions prevailing.

ACROSS NIAGARA.

A New Scheme for Carrying Tourists over the River.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., March 12.—Attorney George W. Pound, one of the directors of the Aerial Tramway company, has sent to Albany a bill authorizing his company to erect a tower and landing place in the state reservation park in the town of Lewiston, in the shape of the age. A similar one has been obtained with reference to Queen Victoria park, by the Canadian government. Leading Canadian politicians are interested in the enterprise.

The company proposes to carry tourists across the Niagara river over the brink of the cataract and thirty feet above the raging waters. A double set of cables will be stretched from the towers in the Canadian and American parks, with a supporting tower on Goat Island. On these cables cage-like cars will be suspended by trolleys and operated by electricity from the American side. The aerial line will follow along the brink of the American falls to Goat Island and thence to the Canadian shore, forming a curve in the form of the horseshoe fall. The cars will be of steel and the cables the best manufactured. The floor of the cars will be perforated to allow visitors to look below and the side views will also be unobstructed.

If the bill just sent to the New York legislature becomes a law, expert engineers will be engaged to superintend the construction. The promoters claim that the aerial tramway line will be as safe as the suspension bridge structure. The electrical engineer will be able to stop and start the car anywhere on the line. The bill has powerful lobbies in the legislature, it is said, and New York will probably be now Canada in giving tourists a grade.

If Dr. Price's were not the best baking powder extant it would not be able to retain the trade it has gained.
