OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, JUNE 28, 1895.

Ogden's Educators.

The board of education has selected its teachers and assigned principals. The pay of the assistant teacher of the high school was reduced from $60 to $55 per month. The following is the list of teachers elected: High school, T. B. Lewis, principal; Minnie A. Eaton, classical course; John F. Engle, assistant.

Eighth Grade—City Hall—D. H. Adams, principal; George L. Wade and Mrs. L. Dalton, assistants.

Principals of Buildings—No. 1, H. F. Critchlow; No. 2, Mrs. T. Maguire; No. 4, Samuel Dagg; No. 5, J. M. Bishop; No. 6, W. S. Watson; No. 7, Mrs. F. E. Kropf; No. 8, J. H. Sweeney; No. 9, F. H. Christensen; No. 10, Mrs. R. Harrington; No. 11, George F. McCune; No. 12, Ben Thomas; No. 13, May Wise; No. 14, Edna Townsend.

To be assigned hereafter—Miss Clara Linn, Miss E. Cornwell, Miss M. Rogers, Miss L. Kirkpatrick, Mrs. J. Hazel, Miss Leola Kennedy, Miss Florence Shaw, Miss Jane Seaman, Miss Fannie Slater, Miss Rose Slater, Miss H. Alexander, Miss Belle Elliot, Miss G. Stevens, Miss Bessie Zinn, Mr. P. C. Evans, Miss Lina Hales, Miss Jane Kendall, Miss Helen Ahern, Miss Annie Carington, Miss J. Pierce, Mrs. W. H. Neal, Miss Mary Maguire, Miss Ella Johnson, Miss Winnie Pell, Miss Carrie Pell, Miss Nettie Fitzgerald, Miss Mary Kerwin, Miss G. Noss, Miss Carrie Lewis, Miss Minnie Hayes, Miss Julia Kiesel, Miss Mary Lindfield, Miss Margret Ross, Mr. F. J. Baird, Miss Mary Barton, Miss Susie Rolfe, Miss Lillian Shaw, Miss G. Keiser, Miss Della Hurst.

Notes.

At our Fourth of July celebration Master Sam Kahn, aged 14, will speak on the subject "How Vandalia is the Sacred Foundation of Liberty." The boy has appeared on several previous occasions and is an interesting little speaker.

James and Charles Wadman, two small boys aged 13 and 8, who ran away from home, were stopped at Pocatello and will be returned to Ogden.

The Utah & Northern brought in a dead Chinaman; he died while en route from the north.

IRRIGATING THE GARDEN.

A Kansas Farmer's Plan In Which the Windmill Plays an Active Part.

A plan for irrigating gardens which appears to have given satisfaction presents the advantage: The water can reach a long time in small continuous channels and will not wash, as it would down the slope. Land may lay quite sloping or quite level, still there is one way thing its surface that is level. Find the level line and lay out post bed 12 inches wide and then a path 12 inches wide. Make your path go around one end of post bed and then the opposite end of second bed, and so on for as many beds as you want, is the advice of a correspondent who illustrated and described his plan as follows for Kansas Farmer:

I show on this plot 12 beds, each 26 feet long, or 312 feet of beds, and this with two rows of vegetables in each bed, makes 624 feet of vegetables or plants. As the beds and paths are level from end to end of each, if your paths are a little or deep and you turn in 3 inches of water, this 2 inch load, with the fall it will get going around the end of the beds, will carry the water back and forth, until soon after the time the last bed is reached they will all have been soaked through and through and all of your plants be effectually subirrigated. The advantage of having only one stream of water to look after instead of several smaller streams running down the slope, where they soon reach the end of your rows and the water wastes away, is less trouble and by far more economical of water. Any man having an eight foot windmill can, by putting up a 100 barrel tank, or, better still, building a small tank on the west side of his garden, have his own supply of water for his garden, trees and on rainy days, if he prefers, have as fine a garden as any in the land.

If at any time he wants to water any of his land outside of his garden or orchard, he can be the same as the dotted "A" in opposite the bed marking water, and by turning through hose No. 16, can use water where wanted. By having an hose in lieu of dotted "A," arrangement can be changed, and be placed and moved in same manner as our vegetable garden.

The Sun Juice Scale.

Professor Smith, entomologist of the New Jersey station, issues a bulletin on the subject of this deadly insect pest with a series of experiments with the sun juice scale. If the insecticide be made to present in a young scaled, one a 10 to 1 wash and twice off the under during the winter season. If the trees are to assume to be injured by frost, prune back and wash the trees with a potash solution a month later. Treat the trees with immune condition.

Professor Riley, in a bulletin issued from the Maryland station, expresses doubts as to whether anything is to be gained by the use of fresh material sent by Professor Smith and believes that are effective treatment with sulphate the sun juice is the preliminary labor. The other treatment recommended be pyrenarum extracts. He concludes his bulletin with the statement: "As a result of four experiments in past years it is now evident that any thorough spraying of the trees prior to the fall of the leaves, with a solution of whale oil soap will be perfectly effective and may be depended upon as a effective for the treatment signed by Professor Smith."

Hops Growing in Michigan.

At our state fair one of our most prominent market shop brewers said to me: "If you will just keep still about the hop business, those of us who understand it will soon be at the top in the breeding of motion sleep."

Like myself, he is evidently somewhat of an enthusiast over hop culture. I realize it is an easy matter to overestimate the value of this or any other crop, and that two or three years' experience is not proof that it will be profitable in all seasons and under all conditions, but that it is a great aid in the raising of sheep I believe must be conceded. Last year I sowed seven acres the 16th of June on a rich piece of ground that had been taken up rye and oats in the fall and pastured until about the 20th of May. The ground was then plowed and thoroughly harrowed and allowed to lie for one week and thoroughly dragged again, and five acres sown broadcast with five pounds of seed to the acre. No rain out of seed on account of having sold so much to our neighbors and had to send for more, and the two acres were then sown after a thorough dragging about ten days after the first. The rape came last was the cleanest and most thrifty throughout the season, which I attribute to the killing of the second crop of weeds with the harrow.

By the 20th of July the rape stood one foot high, and I turned 75 ewe lambs on it. By the 10th of August our pastures were so completely dried up that we had nothing to do but put the sheep on the rape or into the hole. We decided to put 50 head of ewes on the rape in the daytime and the ewe lambs on at night, and this we did for a month until the end of the drought. The lambs were then taken off, and the 50 ewes were kept upon the rape in the daytime and on June grass pasture at night. The ewes had no other food during the time they were on the rape and the ewe lambs no coarse feed, and they grew and took on flesh in a most satisfactory way.

I have already called attention to the fact that I drain rape pasture valuable during the breeding season, and that when so treated ewes seldom fail to get in lamb.—George E. Brack in Breeder's Gazette.

Cause Enough.

Miss Elderly—I fainted last night.
Mordo—Was proposed?—Life.
