WHAT A MAN CAN DO.

THE ROAD FROM MECHANIC DRUDGERY TO POULTRY INDEPENDENCE.

In This Case It Was Through Industry, Sound Sense and a Few Hens, but No Money—A Successful Poultry Man and Farmer.

Mr. C. H. Wyckoff of Groton, N. Y., grew up on a farm, but being desirous of becoming a machinist he served an apprenticeship at that trade and worked at it for several years. Gradually coming to realize the limitations of a mechanic's life, the freedom and "out of doors" of farm life strongly attracted him, but every dollar of his weekly wages was consumed in the family expenses—a condition exactly similar to that of thousands upon thousands of mechanics, clerks, men who long to get back to the freedom of farm life, but find themselves confronted with the fact that the weekly wages barely meeting the weekly expenses and no surplus at the end of the year.

About 15 years ago Mr. Wyckoff found an old man, living on an old hilltop farm 12 miles out of Groton, who was willing to sell his farm for nothing down, accepting as security for the first payment a note for $1,000 with the indorsement of Mr. W.'s father. His father was able to loan him a few dollars, with which to partially stock the farm, buy a few tools and get each step ahead.

Mr. Wyckoff intended to develop this old run down farm into a poultry farm, having kept "a few hens" at his former home, and being a firm believer in the profitableness of producing eggs for market. He bought about 25 scrub hens and housed them in one of the old buildings on the place, gradually added to his stock as the eggs produced by the mixed hens warranted it and laid the second year respectable flocks of Plymouth Rocks and Brown Leghorns. From eggs produced by these flocks he saved up $75 and the next spring invested it in White Leghorn eggs, and a year later had grown to a stock of 100 good White Leghorns.

Mr. Wyckoff got his "living" out of the old run down farm and garden and set aside every dollar of the egg money to pay for more hens or for the eggs from which to hatch so to increase expenditure and serving at what you offered to place upon your table. The New Bill of Fare, is sparkling with the prevailing holiday spirit and its suggestions are most timely. The Housekeepers' Inquiries, the New Ideas for the Middle, and Seasonable Recipes are full full of help for the housekeeper, and thoroughly up to date. A number of choice samples of the chafing-dish are contained in this number also, given by a practical woman who uses them herself and knows they will be of use to others.

C. H. WYCKOFF.

tools or other things which were sorely needed in those first years, he wouldn't have "got there" so quickly. There were many times when a dollar or two "borrowed" from that egg money would have eased the pinch of hard times in that household, but Mr. Wyckoff believed that easy times were just ahead, that the hards would wear the shorter, and had the courage to wait and grow. That third year, when he had 100 White Leghorns, eggs were extremely scarce and high, and in January alone of that year his flocks gave him $90 worth of eggs. More chickens were hatched, more buildings and yards built, all paid for out of egg money, and for the last ten years Mr. Wyckoff has been selling $3,000 to $4,000 worth of products a year from that old farm.

The hens have paid for it all. The total investment was the few dollars paid for the first mixed hens. All the rest is accrued earnings of the hens themselves. The farm is all paid for—by the hens. The buildings to house them, the fences built to inclose the yards, the hundreds of young fruit trees set in the yards, together with all the crows, farm tools and machinery for carrying on a 60 acre farm, have been paid for by those hens, and there's a dollar or two in the bank. Compare that condition with the one of 15 years ago, when the weekly wages barely paid for family expenses.

Mr. Wyckoff says his "farm" doesn't pay any profit. He keeps six or eight cows and makes butter for market—but says there's no money in it. Indirectly, perhaps, it pays, because the manure from the cows helps enrich the fields for the noble crops of corn and wheat he raises for poultry food. Then there is the pleasure one gets from well filled fields. It warms the heart to see the crops grow. We walked down over the farm, and Mr. Wyckoff told us of the hard days' work he had put in there, ditching and draining, and showed us one splendid field of eight or ten acres which he had "made" himself, from nature in a rough, rough, stony pasture.

Mr. Wyckoff winters about 600 head of laying stock. As he has built up a large business in orchards and breeding stock, he usually has a thousand hens or even more at the beginning of winter, but not to his surplus. These he houses in families of about 50, the pens being 12 to 20 feet in row, each having a yard 8 rods wide by 4 rods long. The houses are made 12 feet long by 12 wide and divided into two pens by a solid board partition, having a door in pass through. Mr. Wyckoff, unlike many New York poultry men, does not have nests in his houses, he has some fears that a male bird's crow might be fatal, but never one of his hens.

Mr. Wyckoff breeds for layers and sells his stock "Indiana White Leghorns." He has made a record of 100 eggs laid in a year from his hens and has built up his stock by carefully selecting his breeders for large size and good laying qualities.

Mr. Wyckoff is a firm believer in green food and feeds it regularly winter and summer, whether or not the fowls have green food. He says he has found it effect not that the egg yield increased substantially when he fed green food and decreased when it was omitted. The chief reliance in summer is kale, but he begins with clover, feeding that until the kale gets a good start, then the latter is scattered and fed daily.

The eggs are shipped to a retail dealer in New York city and bring a premium of from 5 to 10 cents a dozen above the highest quotations published of the eggs of that kind in New York. The higher price they have once settled is of some a cause. He guarantees that the eggs are "strictly fresh," milk shipping twice a week (Monday and Thursday), the older eggs in the cases are not three or four days old when shipped. He has no difficulty in selling all he can sell, and during the hatching months (practically April and May) he sells great numbers of eggs for hatching from selected breeders.

Mr. Wyckoff hatches his chickens in incubators. The food for the little chicks for the first week or thereabout is boiled eggs, a porridge made of milk and meal, and a little oatmeal, makes it into a stiff dough with sour milk or skimmilk and bakes it thoroughly.

The Water Lily.

Several specimens of water lilies have the very curious peculiarity of blooming all day, and at evening closing their blossoms, and, by retracting the stem, drawing the flower entirely under water. This is the most singular fact in the history of flowers than this oddity of the water lily.

Ptolemy, king of Macedon, was the Thunderbolt, from the vigor of his military movements.

LITERARY NOTES.

Young men and women who wish a college education will be interested in the series of articles on American Universities and Colleges, now running in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. A paper on Yale was given in the November number, and one on Cornell appears in that for December.

Table Talk for December has for its leading article The Road to Christmas, all of the Yuletide spirit and neighborliness of all countries and their respective textile. Following it is A Hen's Time Day, a spicy little article giving hints as to the judicious expenditure and serving of what you offered to place upon your table. The New Bill of Fare, is sparkling with the prevailing holiday spirit and its suggestions are most timely. The Housekeepers' Inquiries, the New Ideas for the Middle, and Seasonable Recipes are full full of help for the housekeeper, and thoroughly up to date. A number of choice samples of the chafing-dish are contained in this number also, given by a practical woman who uses them herself and knows they will be of use to others.
