NOTES FROM OGDEN.

Prepared for Deseret Evening News.
—H. S. W. Shaw—Various Items.

The Fourth District court held a lengthy and very session yesterday and yesterday a set of business. Nelson Avery, who pleaded guilty a few days ago to the charge of unlawful cohabitation, was sentenced to the penitentiary for sixty days. Gilbert Brown, the oldest of the Brown boys who killed Sheriff Hoy, and who was a boarder in the prison hard two weeks ago, was sentenced to the reform school until of age. The grand jury, after much delay, returned an indictment against Eugene Ferrel, who killed George Lewis a week ago Sunday, charging him with murder in the second degree. He was called up before the court and pleaded not guilty and his trial was left for about April 15th. His bond was fixed at $5,000, which he could not secure, and he was remanded to the city jail for a few days on application of his attorneys, Judge Marriott, A. R. Heyes, and D. L. Lowe. The grand jury reported having found eight indictments under Territorial statutes and two under United States laws. Bench warrants were issued in the United States and four territorial cases. An indictment was returned against Henry Wheadane for the offense of purchasing a witness from appearing before the grand jury in the case of the United States vs. John Hopkins, who has since been indicted for unlawful cohabitation. He was arrested and took the statutory time to plead. Frank Wilson, the man who was brought from Carson city, Nev., last summer by Sheriff Hoy, on the charge of assault on A. W. Wertz (the hold-up case), having been informed upon by Allen, who is in the pen for seven years on the same charge, was arraigned and pleaded guilty. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. The case of burglary against James F. Horne and John Evans occupied most of the morning session and was not finished until nearly 4 o'clock. The defense was represented by T. G. Rennsmeyer. After being out fifteen minutes the jury returned a verdict of guilty as to Evans and not guilty as to Horne. Evans waived time of sentence and was given three years in the pen. These are the men who were arrested a short time ago for burglary at Kaysville. In Evans' possession were found pieces of jewelry stolen.

Ogden has not been doing much crowing or even talking of late regarding the proposed shops of the Rio Grande Western which must and will come here, but the subsidizing citizens have been doing some pretty hard work, however, and their efforts are now about to be crowned with success. The deed for the site, which is twelve twenty inches of mine acres as first intended, is now in the hands of the attorneys of the Rio Grande Western, and the approval is only the matter of a few days. A gentleman who is well on the inside stated yesterday that the company will commence the erection of the shops just as soon as the frost gets out of the ground. The improvements will, in fact, be more extensive than has been made public, and while the railroad people claim that a "center" structure themselves, intimations point to the truth of the assertion.

Dispatches received from the smelter people convey the intelligence that several of the promoters of the great enterprise will be in Ogden by the 15th, prepared to commence active operations at once. It is understood the necessary machinery for the plant has been ordered placed aboard cars, and will reach here the time the buildings are ready for its reception. Before leaving Ogden the Utah representative of the company selected the site, which is at the point of the hill, near Riverdale, in close proximity to the Union Pacific tracks, and so situated that the necessary elevations can easily be obtained.

Mark Besser, who was arrested at Kaysville on the 28th ult., charged with adultery, alleged to have been committed with a woman named Alice Nichols, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Holmes yesterday afternoon for hearing. He waived examination and was held to await the action of the grand jury in bonds of $1000. The case being out of the jurisdiction of the Fourth judicial court it will go to the Third district.

George F. Peabody, Utah representative of E. B. Rollins & Sons, New York, one of the greatest lumber houses of the United States and the parent owners of the electric light and gas combine, was in Ogden yesterday on business connected with the plant here. He says the improvements contemplated by the company will be even more extensive than at first contemplated.

When Union Pacific passenger train No. 1 arrived at Rawlins shortly before noon yesterday, John Terry, a colored porter in the Pullman car "Atlas," was found dead. The body was taken from the train and on to West held. It is believed the cause of his death was heart failure.

KEEPING PRIVATE JOURNALS.

A Correspondent Urges the Matter upon the Members of the Church.

Editor Deseret News.

As I have traveled through the different States of Zion in the interest of Church history, I have very often, in my public instructions, taken particular pains to point out the necessity of the members of the Church keeping private journals for among all the people living on the face of the earth at the present time, there certainly is not a community which has had as experience that possesses more general interest than that of the Latter-day Saints. And this is not by any means confined to the experience of the people collectively but embraces that of the individual members of the Church. Take for instance our pioneers, who in the midst of privations, dangers and perseverance have built up one of the most prosperous commonwealths in existence; the wanderings of our missionaries who have traversed the globe and visited nearly all the nations of the earth as messengers of peace and salvation to a fallen world, often traveling without purse or scrip; how the good disciples of old, most of the days of Ohio, Missouri and Illinois, where the Saints were forced repeatedly to sacrifice all their earthly possessions to satisfy the demands of wicked and bloodthirsty mobs; then study the experiences of the pioneers in the days of the Nauvoo Temple and the sufferings of the Latter-day Saints in the far off lands of America, crossing the ocean in sailing vessels and the plains and mountains with ox teams and hand carts. Continue all these questions of the saints and study the experiences attending them all separately and collectively, and we have a greater variety of startling events, interesting scenes, and brave actions than is met with in the history of any other people. Now we have taken such as to the point for the Latter-day Saints continue to miss very interesting history, and to be losers because we all neglect to make a note, and giving a few dates here and there, a person of ordinary intelligence when he gets old, and finds himself possessed of desire to write a biographical sketch of his life, can, with the assistance of a few dates, supply the rest from memory, and thus be able to make a record of the doings while sojourning on the earth—a record that may be read with the greatest interest by tens of thousands yet unborn.

The following was published in the London Magazine about thirty years ago:

"If a man keeps no diary, the pattering years away behind him as he leaves it, and days gone by are but little more than a bank broken by a few distinct shadows. His life is all confused within the limits of today. Who does not know how imperfect a thing memory is? It not merely forgets it mistakes. Things in memory do not merely fade away, preserving be they fair their own discernable as long as they can be seen; they change their aspect; they change their place; they turn to something quite different from the fact.

"In the picture of the past, which memory unasked by any willed exertion sets before us, the perspective is entirely wrong. How capriciously some events seem quite recent, which the diary shows are really far away, and how unaccountable some things seem far away, which in truth are not left many weeks behind us! A man might almost as well not have lived at all, as calling to forget that he has lived, and entirely forget what he did in those departed days. But I think that almost every person would feel a great interest in having back day by day upon what he did or thought one, say twelve months, that day three or five years ago.

The habit of writing the diary is very small. A few lines, or a few words written at the time suffices, when you look at them, to bring all what the Yankees call the "outstanding" of that season) before you. Many little things come up again which you know quite well you never would have thought of again but for your glance at the one word, and still which you feel you would be sorry to have forgotten.

There must be a delicate sense of the life of a person who keeps a diary unknown to other men. And a million more little lines and the most trivial aim in the memoirs of his family circle and in all among whom he lives. Life is also looking back, is not a bare line stringing together his personal identity, it surrounded, interwoven, entangled with thousands and thousands of slight incidents, which give it beauty, kindness, reality.

Mean fellow! life is like an oak well-rooted, straight and variegated, until had bare and bare. Other men's lives pass by with only worn and miles, (truly reader, you'll be like that oak when it was not a sapling, but a branch, and waved, leafe-tempted, and with lots of little twigs growing out of it upon the summer tree.

And yet now precious then the power of the diary to call up again a world of little circumstances and facts, to its powers to bring back the indefinitable but keenly felt atmosphere of those departed days. The diary is the tablet over gone. It is not merely a collection, and aggregate of facts that comes back; it is something far more excellent than that—it is the mind of days long ago; it is the dear "Auld lang syne days!" The perfume of hawthorne hedges is there; the breath of trees; the fallen, nut gray hair when it is sunny earth, often smoothed down by hands that are gone; the sunshine on the grass where those old fingers made daily chaser; the sweetness of smile, compared with which anything you hear at the opera is extremely poor. Therefore, keep a diary, my friend."

THAT $7 A DAY SENSATION.

It Will Be Officially Reported Upon at the Meeting of the City Council Tonight.

The respective pals that Aorina Mayor Beatrice and Committee Evans have been playing in the real inspectorship maintenance will be officially reported upon at the meeting of the City Council by themselves tonight. It is understood that they will not deny that they have actually received $7 per day each for the supervision of the work but they will endeavor to prove that they were legitimately employed to do the work; that they did the work and that they are therefore entitled to the money they have been receiving.

The question that apparently will trouble them most is can a city commission be legally hired to do any kind of special work and be paid out of the city treasury.

The argument will also be advanced that the work had to be done by some one and that is the thought given to them who would not and could not be bought by any coal monopoly and some one who would see to it that the public got good, honest weight when purchasing coal; hence the appointment of Messrs. Beatrice and Evans.

WHY THE DESERET NEWS SHOULD BE SUBSCRIBED FOR IN PREFERENCE TO ANY OTHER PAPER.

1.—It is the organ of the Church in Utah, which is Latter-day Saints, and the authorized medium through which the views, wishes and instructions of the Church Authorities are expressed and given to the people.

2.—It may always be relied upon as advocating or defending the right side of every question owned by public journals in that regard.

3.—It is devoted to the interests of the Latter-day Saints, and has done so for upwards of twenty years, and has always defended their rights and advocated the principles in which they believe; and every Latter-day Saint should therefore feel under obligations to do his part in helping to sustain it.

4.—It is devoted to the interests of the people, if any there be derived from it, being devoted to exposing the schemes of unbelievers and benefiting the community.

5.—It is doing its utmost to establish home industries, among which are paper making and typecasting, weaving and stereotyping—branches necessary to the development and independence of the community, but which, during their infancy (which in this Territory they have not yet passed), can only be carried on at a pecuniary loss.

6.—There is no danger of any subscriber in the News failing to get what he advertises for through failure of the house here and a complaint of the publication—a result in the case of hundreds of newspaper ventures every year.

7.—It is printed in readable type, so that even the aged can peruse it without suffering or danger to their eyesight.

8.—It is free from objectionable advertisements, so that no parent need fear that his children will have their minds corrupted from having access to it; in fact, it saves thousands of dollars worth of the best paying advertisements among all, because it is devoted to the moral and spiritual interests of its readers instead of to getting gain at their expense.

9.—Its time is not regulated by public opinion nor the hope of gaining subscribers or advertisements. It advocates that which is right and condemns that which is wrong, regardless of results, financial or otherwise.

10.—It never caresses its readers by palming off columns of self-praise for news items.

11.—The News practices no deception and resorts to no subterfuges to induce people to subscribe; but on the contrary, prefers to stand on its own merits, as the people's newspaper, with a promise only to do its utmost to give to patrons the full value of their money—a promise which it has endeavored to faithfully keep in the past.

12.—In conclusion, if a Latter-day Saint can afford to subscribe for only one newspaper, that paper should be the Deseret News; and if more than one, the News should invariably be the first.
