Nikola Tesla of New York Revolutionizes Electrical Theories.

TERRIBLE ENGINE OF DESTRUCTION.

He Exhibits a Working Model of a Torpedo Boat that Operates without a Wire Attached.

New York, Nov. 8.—Nikola Tesla, the electrician, in a newspaper interview, describes an application of electricity whereby, without the intervention of any artful medium of communication, [illegible] absolute [illegible] of any type of vessel, balloon, or land vehicle, at any distance that may be desired. From a station on shore, or from the deck of a vessel under way, a torpedo boat equipped with Mr. Tesla's controlling device may be propelled either on or below the surface, maneuvered at will in any direction and finally brought into contact and exploded against the side of a hostile vessel or any point within the range of the vision of the operator. More than this, assuming that it were possible to [illegible] the position of the vessel which it is desired to destroy, the torpedo boat could be directed to it, even if the ship lay in the harbor of Southampton and the operator was stationed at Sandy Hook.

Mr. Tesla said that some months had elapsed since he had fully developed his device, for which he has applied for a patent. When it was learned that Admiral Cervera was bottled up at Santiago it was his intention to supply his mechanism to several launches and similar small craft loaded with high explosives and [illegible] under the guns of the American fleet [illegible] the necessary arrangements could be made. Then Mr. Tesla proposed a raid on the Spanish vessels in Havana harbor, only to be thwarted by the circumstance of the suspension of hostilities.

WITHOUT WIRES.

"Hitherto," said Mr. Tesla, "the only means of [illegible] [illegible] of dynamite will exert a shattering effect on a battleship [illegible] with [illegible] dynamite, which, exploded [illegible] would raise a wave that would overwhelm the biggest ship ever built."

Concluding his description, Mr. Tesla said:
