DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Friday, - - December 1, 1893.

FRAGMENTS.

Parliament meeting tomorrow (Saturday) at 11 a.m.

There will be a special meeting of the city council tonight.

The joint city and county building committee are booked for another session late this afternoon. Only routine business will be transacted.

Roller Bros., and the Utah Carpet & Drapery company yesterday presented the members of the fire department with thirty pairs of gloves and a box of cigars.

The Soldiers Win Easily.

The foot ball game played at the Exposition grounds yesterday afternoon between the city and Fort Douglas teams resulted in an easy victory for the latter, the score being 34 to 0.

The military boys were much heavier than their opponents and outclassed them at every turn. Naturally foot ball is a very rough game and some rough work was done yesterday, resulting in painful injuries to McIntyre, Norman, Dell and Goodhue of the city team and Doyle, Harding and Crowley of the Fort eleven.

The personnel of the teams was as follows:

[illegible]

George Dewey and Lieutenant Johnson acted as referee and umpire, respectively.

H. J. Tucker's eleven played a lively game with the Congregational school team yesterday afternoon and were defeated by the latter.

At The Congregational Church.

Thanksgiving services were held at the First Congregational church yesterday, a very large audience being in attendance. Quite a number of ministers of different denominations participated, and the exercises were unusually impressive. Among the speakers were Rev. C. T. Brown, Rev. T. C. Iliff, Rev. W. S. Hawkes, Rev. J. D. Nutting, Rev. J. McLean, Rev. H. B. Stevens, Rev. B. F. Clay, Rev. D. W. Bartlett and Rev. S. G. Adams. At the close of the services Dr. Iliff was called upon to make an appeal for the deserving and destitute of the city, the audience responding generously.

J. B. Toronto Chosen.

The citizens of the Fourth precinct held a very large and enthusiastic non-partisan meeting on Wednesday night and nominated Prof. J. B. Toronto for a member of the board of education from that district. On the second ballot he received 157 out of 208 votes and was declared the unanimous nominee. The other candidates were Frank Knox, W. H. Dale, C. L. Hawley, H. G. McMillan and A. L. Thomas.

THE UNION THANKSGIVING.

Services Held in the Assembly Hall Last Night.

Brief Addresses by Ministers of the Different Churches—A Large Sum Realized.

The Union Thanksgiving services in the Assembly hall were well attended last night. Governor West acted as chairman. On the stand were also ex-Governor Thomas, Chief Justice Zane, Rev. Fred W. Norris, Elder Angus M. Cannon, Rev. B. G. McNiece, Elder O. F. Whitney, Rev. T. C. Iliff, Elder C. W. Penrose, Rev. Lawrence Scanlan, Rev. David Utter, Rabbi Jacobson and others.

After prayer by Elder C. W. Penrose, the chairman made a few appropriate introductory remarks and then announced Elder Orson F. Whitney as the first speaker. Elder Whitney said the speakers were present for the purpose of saying earnest words in behalf of the suffering poor of the city and in support and in encouragement of the efforts of the Citizens' Relief committee, who were laboring without money and without price, who had undertaken the stupendous task of feeding, clothing and furnishing with employment as far as possible the worthy unfortunates of this community, regardless of sect or creed. To help the needy required something more than mere words. The poor could not be fed upon fine phrases nor be clothed with figures of rhetoric. "Faith without works was dead, being alone." The speaker feelingly referred to cases of destitution that had come under his own observation, and while he was desirous of assisting all needy persons our first duty was to the bona fide residents, honest workingmen, men of character, men of families who were out of employment. He said: "Every true philanthropist recognizes the fact that it is far better to provide men with work and let them earn their living—as all good men prefer to do—than to pauperize them by means of gifts and gratuities. But there are men walking these streets, hungry and almost broken-hearted, who cannot obtain work no matter how hard they try. I confess to a great sympathy, to a feeling of deep solicitude for the honest man, the actual citizen, willing and anxious to work, who cannot win bread for his family for the simple reason that he can find nothing to do. Let us remember him, not only in our prayers, but when we loosen our purse strings in behalf of the unfortunate. And let such be the first to whom we furnish employment." The speaker said he belonged to a church that disbursed large sums to the poor. Fifty thousand dollars, he had been informed, had just been appropriated by it for that purpose for the coming six months. That was exclusive of the monthly fast offerings and the amounts collected by the various relief societies and disbursed by the Bishops of wards. He trusted, however, that such considerations would not deter any Latter-day Saint from giving all that he could afford to such a cause as the one for which they were laboring.

Bishop Scanlan was the next speaker and he delivered a brief though very earnest address. "Love thy neighbor as thyself," was a very old command and a seemingly strange and unnatural one. It required a great deal of courage in him who first enunciated it. The only true, rational and philosophical explanation of that command was in the theory that there was a great ruler of the universe who created all things and by whom they exist; in whom we live, move and have our being, and there was no true charity in the world except among those who admit that fundamental truth. When we loved our neighbor as ourselves we loved God. God had the same interest in our neighbor that He had in us, hence we ought to love our neighbor even as God loves him. We were all one family, brothers and sisters, children of one Father in heaven. On this fact our action to our neighbor ought to be based.

If our feelings were weak our charity would be weak.

Dr. Utter followed in a cheerful strain and concluded by saying that he would give 5 per cent of all he possessed to the cause, and if every one present would do that there would be ample to care for the poor the coming winter.

The following are excerpts from Rabbi Jacobson's address: "I wish to thank Angus M. Cannon, C. W. Penrose and the others who were instrumental in obtaining this hall for us to hold our meeting in, and I hope that this earnest of the good feeling which now exists between the Church of Latter-day Saints and the other religious bodies will never be abandoned. [Applause.]" "I will say when I sometimes look at the collections for charitable purposes instead of exclaiming where are the poor? I feel like asking, where are the rich?" "We have now begun a new era, the old era of hate is ended, and Mormon, Jew and Gentile, Catholic or Protestant, have become my own dear brothers, children of one father brought together in the name of sweet charity."

The Rev. F. W. Norris was there to talk charity, a virtue that knew no bounds. It was the unceasing love of God to man.

The Rev. T. C. Iliff said they had met upon a platform as broad as the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God. He made a strong appeal for aid, and many pledged themselves in amounts ranging from a few cents to $500. The total subscription aggregated $2305.35. The subscriptions are payable in cash or merchandise, in installments covering a period of six months.

The choir sang "America" and the benediction was pronounced by the Right Rev. Bishop Scanlan, bringing the services to a close.

Happy Day for the Newsboys.

The city newsboys were guests of honor yesterday and enjoyed themselves as they never did before. The program outlined in Wednesday's News was carried out with a number of additional interesting features.

The little fellows were up with early morn and commenced to throng the barber shop of Jones and Hobbs as soon as it was open to have their hair trimmed and combed.

During the noon hour nearly one hundred of them bathed in the waters of the Sanitarium. From one until two o'clock they were at Wonderland at the expense of the Tribune. Then followed the big turkey dinner with all of its side-good electrics, at which speeches were made by Colonel Lett, who, with his son Will, gave the dinner, Judge Goodwin, Mayor Baskin and Dr. Utter.

After dinner the Herald took the boys for a ride about the city in Grant Bros. splendid carriages. At night they attended May Blossom at the Theater as a compliment from the Deseret News. They were furnished with stationery furnished by the Lafayette Floral establishment.

All things considered it was probably the happiest day in the lives of the youthful guests and will be long remembered by them.

MELANGE.

Chief Pratt has a funny policeman on his force who never loses an opportunity to boast of the greatness of this country as compared with the "ould sod." He delights to tell how he worked himself up to his present exalted position from that of a "slaving hod carrier." He further says he only engaged in that "kind of business" because he "had" to. This uniformed gunner will probably be out of a job early in the new year. In the meantime he should make application to travel with Barlow Brothers minstrels.

Lobengula, the Matabele monarch whose country England wants so badly, is said to be fully six feet tall in his sandals—unlike Jerry Simpson he doesn't wear silk hose. Tall as this dusky chieftain is he has the appearance of being equally owing to extraordinary corpulency. His obesity is the result of high living. If he were not so far removed from this section and the facilities for transportation were not so meager it might be suspected that he was in league with Salt Lake officeholders. The garb of this remarkable personage differs materially from that of our city aldermen. When in full dress he wears a broad-brimmed felt hat and a girdle of monkey hair.

It is a wise dog that knows the collector of canine taxes in these days of rapidly shifting scenes. The poor curs are quite well acquainted with Gallican during his eventful reign and darted through the dark alleys whenever his name was spoken. Then the curtain fell and they knew the Mignon no more. Next came Bruce Johnson, whose expeditions [illegible] for conveying the poor creatures to the crematory has made him a terror in dogdom. Homeless canines have only just learned to spot him when Major Dave Levy suddenly crosses the municipal horizon with an air about him that causes hounds of all ages to turn tail on the man who it is said will see that they wear collars in the future.

"Why is it," asked a prominent member of the local legal profession of the writer a few days ago, "that the editor of an honorable newspaper cannot sell his services for gold to a man or men who need them?" The answer is: Because it would utterly ruin his reputation and usefulness and make journalism a greater harbinger of crime than all the shyster lawyers in the land. Because it would dishonor the world of letters and bring into ill repute the army of intellectual toilers in the vast field of newspaperdom. Because it would transform society into an state of anarchism and terror. No, a newspaperman cannot afford to "sell his services for gold" in defense of lawbreakers. If a lawyer can do so he should know why and be able to state the reason.

Ex-Food Inspector Kendall, like his illustrious compatriot and colleague, Billy Boswell, over whose head hangs four grand jury indictments for conspiracy and fraud in office, declines to make room for a better man appointed by his honor the Mayor to succeed him. Kendall some years ago posed before the public as a school teacher. But for reasons known to others as well as himself he gave up the profession in which he was only an obscure satellite revolving about more resplendent stars in the firmament of juvenile instruction, because a ward heeler for his party—active and ubiquitous—after which he was dumped into a specially created office.

When this western cultivator of verdant ideas and kindergarten classes cast off his mantle of private citizenship and entered the political arena he danced merrily to the music of the Boss's whip. It was during those semi-halcyon days in the not very distant though comparatively past that the smeller of putrid meats and decaying vegetables commenced making a record. His reward followed, and now he wants to make it a life long heritage. He has become accustomed to the haunts of vice. Sin and conjugation. In fact he has become fascinated with the job. But his weekly reports indicate that he is a mathematical phenomenon of such magnitude that he is unfit for the position. He liked to see them in print and he was very successful in getting them there. They made him appear the busiest man in the community. The Mayor was observant and as they grew larger he commenced to think. His report official compilation set proves that he thought hard and effectually. During his investigation it is said his honor learned a great deal that surprised him. Will Mr. K. tell the people of this city what it was the Mayor discovered by making it a part of his final report and doesn't he think it would be more readable than any of his previous efforts?
