The End Death of a Stenographer and Accountant.

CALIFORNIA BARBERS JUBILANT.

Heavy Sheep Shearing Undertaking—A Proposed Orange Palace—Bicycle "Livery Stable."

A Prescott (A. T.) man has opened a "bicycle livery stable," which promises to meeting with much patronage.

The San Francisco Chronicle says the lessees of that city are incident over the half-mill worker them by the novel sweep-cleaning strike.

It is proposed that Riverside, Cal., shall have an "orange palace" next season. The plan is to build the palace and keep it open for about two months.

The total number of prisoners received at the Oregon state penitentiary since its opening, is now nearing the 4,000 mark. There are now in the prison 338. With the exception of a few days each week, these men are mostly idleless.

A two-year-old child of C. W. Hughes of Helena, Mont., was tripped up by a street crew while at play, falling with awful force on the sidewalk, and died a few days later. The force of the fall sent a third vessel in the lungs, and the boy slowly died to death terribly.

David Dale died in Riverside, Indiana, some time ago, and left an estate estimated at $80,000. Now comes a woman from Iowa with three children, representing herself as his widow, which he left in 1862, and claims her share of the estate as his widow. People are admitted that she married after Dale left her, and now she is confused.

An exchange says that five years ago John Hasser went from Minneapolis to California with $100,000 in cash. He lost all but $500 in real estate investment. He obtained a place planting fruit trees, and on Sunday started to his field of labor in a wagon, with his wife and two children. In crossing Mud Gulch creek he was drowned, with his son, leaving his wife and young daughter destitute.

A trapper in Weston county, Wyo., who killed an old she wolf with eight unborn puppies presented the nine pelts to the town of Weston county, and demanded $75 bounty. The clerk upon receiving the bounty law was unable to decide whether the trapper was entitled to the bounty on the unborn puppies. The case was referred to the county attorney, who will, in all probability put the case on up to the attorney general.

Charles Cunningham, of near Pendleton, Oregon, is making preparations for sending his sheep, which begins next Wednesday. He will run thirty sheers, and expects a total crop from the herd of 300,000 pounds. The sheep to be shorn numbers 20,000. The sheep are in fine condition, no wool has been sold, and it is clean and without dust. Twenty to thirty pounds will be taken from each one, and it is some one ten thirty-five to forty.

The affairs of the defunct Pacific bank at San Francisco have been presented to the attention of the superior court in a new form. Two suits were brought, the purpose of which is to compel the directors and stockholders to reimburse depositors. The plaintiff in both cases is F. F. Dundon, a stockholder, who sues on behalf of himself and all the other depositors. Dundon is a creditor to the amount of $2,151.31, which sum he had on deposit when the bank closed its doors.

Charles Thomas and Charles Hannegan of Cathlamet, in going up beaver creek, about eight miles from Cathlamet, Wash., on Sunday, discovered the body of a man standing in the creek, leaning against a tree on the bank. Near by on the limb of a tree were the man's underclothes. He had no trousers and a long coat, inside. The body was identified as that of F. Bird, who left Cathlamet in the early part of December for Waterford. He had evidently been dead over three months. Bird came to Oregon a year and a half ago from Omaha, where he has relatives and a wife and child. He was an expert stenographer and accountant and for several years was employed by the Armour-Cudahy Packing company of that place. When he came to Oregon he worked for the Haggard cannery, and last August came to Astoria in the employ of one of the tanneries. The latter part of November he disappeared suddenly, and several hundred dollars in his accounts. Where the body was found is one of the wildest parts of the country and the only way he could travel was by walking in the middle of the stream. It is supposed he died from exposure.
