FROM WESTERN EXCHANGES.

Two Shocking Accidents Occur at Evanston.

OFFICIAL EMBEZZLEMENT IN TRINIDAD.

Shooting Scrape at Oakland.—Loafer in Modesto.—Jail Delivery in San Francisco.

Evanston Register.—On Sunday last William Jeffs and Jesse Hamilton went out for a day's outing in the vicinity of Cook's ranch, some six miles south of Evanston, and were on their way back to town in the evening, when Jeffs got out at a point about four miles beyond Cook's ranch to take a shot at some animal which he failed to hit. He placed the rifle back in the buckboard with the barrel down and the muzzle resting against the seat, and the belief is that he must have left the trigger of the rifle half cocked, as it went off just as he was climbing into the seat. The charge completely shattered the right arm below the elbow. Hurrying down to Cook's ranch as rapidly as possible, dressed the wound as well as he knew how, and left the patient in charge of Jim Weinmaker while he came to town after a physician. Dr. Harrison went out to attend the patient, reaching there about nine o'clock, only to find that life was almost extinct from loss of blood. The patient's face was cold, his pulse imperceptible, and his face had already assumed the pallor of death. Two minutes after the doctor arrived the patient expired. The deceased, who was a well known and popular mechanic about thirty-three, leaves a wife and five children.

Denver News.—Trinidad, Colo., Aug. 4—Second district No. 5, the entire precinct of which is Grande Plaza, voted in June to sell for the purchase of a site and the building of a school house. The board bought two acres of land with about $300 in them, and built a house which, with the land and all, cost $2,000. Several hundred dollars of the remains unpaid, while the whole of the $2,000 is gone, no one seems to know where. Several papers of the county took hard knocks from Hill and Mr. Juan Side and Pat O'Neal discovered no knowledge of the matter. The county superintendent has referred the matter to the district attorney, and the people are anxiously waiting to see who the thief is, though every track has been so carefully covered that it is not likely he will ever be known, at least not punished.

Los Angeles Express.—Modesto, August 3.—The city was thrown into a state of excitement last night about 8:30 o'clock, occasioned by City Marshal B. D. Young shooting and killing Barney B. Garner, who resisted arrest. Garner has been drinking all the afternoon, and was very abusive to the hotel keepers, and defied anyone to arrest him. The frequent requests of the marshal for him to remain quiet were not heeded, and when Garner was told he was under arrest he refused to make a motion to draw a pistol. Marshal Young immediately drew his own pistol and fired two shots, both balls coming through Garner's body. One went through his heart and the other through the left shoulder. Garner fell exclaiming "Why did you shoot me?" and expired. Young immediately gave himself up and went to the county jail. Garner was a saloon-keeper and was quarrelsome when under the influence of liquor. He leaves a widow and three children. A pistol was found in Garner's pocket by the coroner. The inquest will be held tomorrow. He has been a resident of Modesto for twenty years and has sought the nomination for sheriff a number of times.

S. F. Chronicle.—Six prisoners escaped from the house of correction on Monday at 7:30 a.m. Back of the main building is the prison yard, which is bounded on the east side by workshops and buildings and toward the east partly by a tarbloser. Six of the trusties managed to carry an iron bar long enough to the northeast corner of the fence. Placing it in a slanting position, one after the other scaled the house and took to their heels.

The first man who attempted escape was attacked by the escape was Superintendent Pedley, who through the fog saw two mysterious figures moving from the prison in the direction of the outhouses. The superintendent at once gave the alarm by ringing the big gong at the gate six times. Every officer on or off duty at once responded and the assistance of Guards J. P. Kelly, William Tone and M. McCormick, who were absent on leave. A hasty search was made and it was found that of the sixteen men, six of the prisoners were missing and pretty soon the telltale plank in the corner had how they got away.

Fresno Republican.—Thomas Edwards, father of Annie Edwards, died with a serious accident yesterday while moving at their ranch on the Alma road. He accidentally got in front of the machine while it was in motion and some rear losing both feet. As it was, one of the wheels of his right leg immediately above the ankle was cut through, and the other partially so, while the flesh on the left foot was cut through to the bone. The wounds are of a fatal character and will be a month or more before he will be able to be about.

Sacramento Bee.—Oakland, August 4.—R. S. Colvin, a young drug-clerk, was last night shot and killed by John G. Herold. Colvin was engaged to Herold's daughter, but three years ago she broke off the match because she saw him coming out of a saloon, drunk. Herold was a man of wealth, and endeavored to lay and move to the Herold family and move away. He and Herold had several quarrels on the subject. Last night Colvin, a friend, named Maxwell and Herold were discussing the question in a room in the Wilson block. Colvin expressed a desire to marry the girl, declaring Herold was "illegal on your house," and instantly drew a thirty-eight calibre revolver and began firing. The first ball entered Herold's left side, but Colvin called for mercy, but Herold fired twice more, one ball entering the abdomen and the other the groin. Colvin staggered to the door and to the room, and Herold fired again, sending the ball into the back and out of the left breast. Herold then went down stairs and surrendered himself to an officer. Colvin was thought to be of the Oakland police court and was very popular. He was aged 19. Herold is 55. Years ago he was a newspaper man, and was one of the assaulted by three men and sheriff of Alameda county, 1868.

NAPOLEON'S SAY.

THE "LITTLE CORPORAL" TOWN THE SCENE OF WATERLOO.

The version of the "disappointed cheese" by Napoleon I. "Little Corporal" has just been given to the public through the medium of the London United Service Gazette. Needless to say, even when the taste of antedeluvian years, the narrative touches with some interest, for the world still wants to know if Waterloo was not through the perfidy of General Grouchy, for the thousands of the lore of Marengo and Austerlitz, of the superior tactics of the first Napoleon.

After describing the preparations for the battle, Napoleon says:

"The enemies commenced; the enemy occupied the house he had abandoned to place his wood for thirty pieces of cannon. We, on our side, disposed some artillery. At 1 o'clock Prince Jerome became master of the whole wood, and the Belgians, being strongly intrenched behind a ridge, the Count d'Erlon then attacked the village of Mont Saint-Jean; he supported his attack with eighty pieces of cannon. He succeeded; there an overpowering cannonade, which must have greatly harassed the English army. The whole action took place on the plain. A strategic of Count d'Erlon's first division took possession of the village of Mont Saint Jean; a second brigade was charged by a regiment of English cavalry which inflicted upon it great loss. At the same moment a division of English cavalry charged Count d'Erlon's battery on its right and dismounted several guns; but General Mouhard's cuirassiers charged this division, of which three regiments were routed and fled."

In the afternoon, the Prussian Marshal Blucher had succeeded in bringing his troops engaged with Count Lobau's corps, and the whole strength of the reserve was held ready to assist Count Lobau and repel the Prussian corps when it should advance. He continues: "This done, the engagement intended to make an attack in the direction of the village of Mont Saint-Jean, which it was expected would prove a decisive blow; but, by a movement of impatience, so frequent in our military annals, and which has been so often disastrous to us, the cavalry in reserve, perceiving a triumphant movement of the English to place themselves in the direction of our batteries, from which they had already withdrawn so much, crowded the heights of Mont Saint-Jean and charged the infantry. This premature movement, at the right moment and backed by the reserves, ought to have decided the day; made separately, and before the reserves were ready, it was simply fatal. Having no means to counteract it, the enemy showing large masses of infantry and cavalry, we were obliged to make a retreat of Cuirassiers being engaged, the whole of our cavalry started at the same moment to support their comrades. There, we were obliged to form squares and charge, by which we gained the breaking of several squares and six flags of the British infantry—an advantage hardly commensurate with the losses sustained by our cavalry from grape-shot and musketry. It was impossible to use our reserves of infantry until the attack of the Prussian corps on our flank was repulsed. This attack still continued, and directly on our right flank. The Emperor, with the Guard, ordered the Duke of Dalmatia, Young Guard and several reserve batteries. The enemy was checked, we rallied, and retreated; he had retreated too fast, and there was nothing further to fear from him. This was the moment suitable for an attack on the center of the enemy. As the Cuirassiers were suffering from musketry fire, four battalions of the Young Guard were sent to support the Cuirassiers, to hold their position, and, if it was possible, to disengage and withdraw a part of our cavalry to the plain. Two other battalions were sent to hold the entrances on the extreme left of the division, and to keep back some of our flanks in order that there might be no cause for uneasiness in this direction; the rest were placed in reserve, on the part of the copy the remaining rest of Mont Saint-Jean, the other on the plain behind the field of battle, which formed our line of retreat.

"Under these circumstances the battle was gained; we occupied all the positions that were occupied by the enemy at the commencement of the action; our cavalry having been quick and badly employed, we could no longer hope for a decisive success. But Marshal Grouchy, having learned of the movement of the Prussian corps, marched in the rear of that corps, which secured us a splendid success for the next day. After eight hours of the most vigorous charges of infantry and of cavalry, the whole army saw with satisfaction the battle gained and the field of battle in our power. At 8:30 the first battalions of the Young Guard, which has been sent to the plain beyond Mont St. Jean to support the Cuirassiers, being inconvenienced by the enemy's grape-shot, I placed with bayonets fixed to sweep off its batteries. The day closed by a charge on their flank by several English squadrons of the Prince of Orange's guard, which was repulsed, and the fugitives repassed the ravine, the neighboring regiments who saw some troops belonging to the guard in disorder, thought it was the enemy, and gave way. The cry arose: 'All are lost! The guard is beaten back!' The soldiers even maintained that they saw the enemy grape-shot fall repeated cries 'Sauve-qui peut!' Be that as it may, terror and panic immediately spread over the whole battlefield; the fugitives reached Genappe and spread the fear of communication—soldiers, cannon, wagons hurried on. The old guard, which was in reserve, was pressed back and spread terror. It is to be doubted the army was only a confused mass—all the arms were intermingled, and it was impossible to rallies a corps. The enemy pursued the fugitives with confusion, and formed columns of cavalry; the disorder augmented; the movement of the night prevented the rallying of the troops and leaving them little time.

Hen—Did you know I was a liar?

Wife—Yes.

Hen—Then she wrote him he got rich!

Wife—Yes.

Hen—Then she has but one wish left, and that is for him to die.

Wife—Oh, no, she has another wish.

Hen—What is it?

Wife—She wants a husband.

"Do you visit Paris?"

"Yes, but we stopped only one day there. We went there to express ourselves in the French language and were awfully disappointed."

"How so?"

"Why, they don't speak the French there at all."

WHY DO MEN SUICIDE?

NEARLY ALL METHODS OF SELF MURDER HAVE BEEN TRIED.

Suicide Among the Greeks and Romans. The Negroes Have Ever Taken Their Own Lives.—Evidence of the Sun for Worshiping in Shrine of the Moon Too.

A prominent physician, who has made a study of suicide, says the other day:

Why should a man kill himself? The popular answer is, "Because he is crazy." Scientific men easily dispose that, for we still remember it was in defiance of reason, in the face of Marengo and Austerlitz, of the superior tactics of the first Bolo.

After describing the preparations for the battle, Napoleon says:

"The enemies commenced; the enemy occupied the house he had abandoned to place his wood for thirty pieces of cannon. We, on our side, disposed some artillery. At 1 o'clock Prince Jerome became master of the whole wood, and the Belgians, being strongly intrenched behind a ridge, the Count d'Erlon then attacked the village of Mont Saint-Jean; he supported his attack with eighty pieces of cannon. He succeeded; there an overpowering cannonade, which must have greatly harassed the English army. The whole action took place on the plain. A strategic of Count d'Erlon's first division took possession of the village of Mont Saint Jean; a second brigade was charged by a regiment of English cavalry which inflicted upon it great loss. At the same moment a division of English cavalry charged Count d'Erlon's battery on its right and dismounted several guns; but General Mouhard's cuirassiers charged this division, of which three regiments were routed and fled."

In the afternoon, the Prussian Marshal Blucher had succeeded in bringing his troops engaged with Count Lobau's corps, and the whole strength of the reserve was held ready to assist Count Lobau and repel the Prussian corps when it should advance. He continues: "This done, the engagement intended to make an attack in the direction of the village of Mont Saint-Jean, which it was expected would prove a decisive blow; but, by a movement of impatience, so frequent in our military annals, and which has been so often disastrous to us, the cavalry in reserve, perceiving a triumphant movement of the English to place themselves in the direction of our batteries, from which they had already withdrawn so much, crowded the heights of Mont Saint-Jean and charged the infantry. This premature movement, at the right moment and backed by the reserves, ought to have decided the day; made separately, and before the reserves were ready, it was simply fatal. Having no means to counteract it, the enemy showing large masses of infantry and cavalry, we were obliged to make a retreat of Cuirassiers being engaged, the whole of our cavalry started at the same moment to support their comrades. There, we were obliged to form squares and charge, by which we gained the breaking of several squares and six flags of the British infantry—an advantage hardly commensurate with the losses sustained by our cavalry from grape-shot and musketry. It was impossible to use our reserves of infantry until the attack of the Prussian corps on our flank was repulsed. This attack still continued, and directly on our right flank. The Emperor, with the Guard, ordered the Duke of Dalmatia, Young Guard and several reserve batteries. The enemy was checked, we rallied, and retreated; he had retreated too fast, and there was nothing further to fear from him. This was the moment suitable for an attack on the center of the enemy. As the Cuirassiers were suffering from musketry fire, four battalions of the Young Guard were sent to support the Cuirassiers, to hold their position, and, if it was possible, to disengage and withdraw a part of our cavalry to the plain. Two other battalions were sent to hold the entrances on the extreme left of the division, and to keep back some of our flanks in order that there might be no cause for uneasiness in this direction; the rest were placed in reserve, on the part of the copy the remaining rest of Mont Saint-Jean, the other on the plain behind the field of battle, which formed our line of retreat.

"Under these circumstances the battle was gained; we occupied all the positions that were occupied by the enemy at the commencement of the action; our cavalry having been quick and badly employed, we could no longer hope for a decisive success. But Marshal Grouchy, having learned of the movement of the Prussian corps, marched in the rear of that corps, which secured us a splendid success for the next day. After eight hours of the most vigorous charges of infantry and of cavalry, the whole army saw with satisfaction the battle gained and the field of battle in our power. At 8:30 the first battalions of the Young Guard, which has been sent to the plain beyond Mont St. Jean to support the Cuirassiers, being inconvenienced by the enemy's grape-shot, I placed with bayonets fixed to sweep off its batteries. The day closed by a charge on their flank by several English squadrons of the Prince of Orange's guard, which was repulsed, and the fugitives repassed the ravine, the neighboring regiments who saw some troops belonging to the guard in disorder, thought it was the enemy, and gave way. The cry arose: 'All are lost! The guard is beaten back!' The soldiers even maintained that they saw the enemy grape-shot fall repeated cries 'Sauve-qui peut!' Be that as it may, terror and panic immediately spread over the whole battlefield; the fugitives reached Genappe and spread the fear of communication—soldiers, cannon, wagons hurried on. The old guard, which was in reserve, was pressed back and spread terror. It is to be doubted the army was only a confused mass—all the arms were intermingled, and it was impossible to rallies a corps. The enemy pursued the fugitives with confusion, and formed columns of cavalry; the disorder augmented; the movement of the night prevented the rallying of the troops and leaving them little time.

Hen—Did you know I was a liar?

Wife—Yes.

Hen—Then she wrote him he got rich!

Wife—Yes.

Hen—Then she has but one wish left, and that is for him to die.

Wife—Oh, no, she has another wish.

Hen—What is it?

Wife—She wants a husband.

"Do you visit Paris?"

"Yes, but we stopped only one day there. We went there to express ourselves in the French language and were awfully disappointed."

"How so?"

"Why, they don't speak the French there at all.

"IT NEVER LIES!"

Truth is Mighty and will Prevail.

Farmers should read Utah Experiment Station

BULLETIN No. 7

On Government Trial, in which

Wood was Victorious!

Read what the "Logan Journal" says in its issue of July 22nd, 1891.

It is much more exhaustive than the trials at the World's Fair, Philadelphia, in 1876, according to Mr. Scott, which were concluded in one day, while in present Experiment three days were occupied. The grass and feed were intended to be even and of the best for fair trials.

Professor Sanborn kept the matter in his own hands, and all the parties active in the contest—active in handling the machines, they represented on the ground—agreed that the trial had been fair and impartial, and signed an affidavit to that effect.

The test is of the utmost importance, as it has taken place under government direction, and will be noted all over this country and elsewhere, and will be taken as authoritative.

WILL IT ELEVATE?

YES. Malicious Competition equally as well as all crops.

Lehi, Utah, July 31st, 1891.

Messrs. Co-operative Wagon & Machine Co.,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Care of People's Co-operative Institution, Agents, Lehi, Utah.

Gentlemen:—When a pair of horses weighing about 800 pounds each, I reap cut, elevated, bound and delivered successfully with a Walter A. Wood Binder, owned by Lawrence Hill, ordinary crops of grain on ground where the main drive wheel would cut into the sandy soil from three to six inches.

(Signed) W. J. HOME.

I certify to the above work, having seen the machine in operation.

J. L. CARTER.

Pleasant Grove, July 31st, 1891.

Messrs. Bullock & Walley,
Pleasant Grove, Utah.

Gentlemen:—The Walter A. Wood Single Apron Harvester and Binder we bought of you, and for which we gave our order in Salt Lake City, has been in operation now for several days. We have cut, bound, elevated and delivered all kinds of grain, heavy, light and tangled, to our satisfaction and better than any other machine we have ever seen at the same work. We consider the Single Apron Open End Machine far superior to any three or four cut-two machines, both in point of workmanship and economy. We have put finished cutting five and a half acres and have not missed tying one bundle.

(Signed) ISAAC CARLSON.
J. J. CARLSON.

Pleasant Grove, July 30th, 1891.

Messrs. Bullock & Walley,
Pleasant Grove, Utah.

Gentlemen:—We have had one of your Walter A. Wood Binders since 1890. Have cut at least 1000 acres of grain successfully for ourselves and customers. The machine is good for further service with a few slight repairs. This same machine was in contest with McCormick Binder in 1890, and was the bands in James Bullinger's field, Pleasant Grove. The Single Apron Harvester and Binder bought of you in 1891, in our opinion, does equally as good work and in many respects better than any other machine, and up to date has cut, bound, elevated, and delivered to our entire satisfaction.

We consider the Single Apron Open End Machine far preferable to three cut-two machines.

A. HOLMAN.
J. HOLMAN.

Pleasant Grove, Utah, July 30th, 1891.

Messrs. Bullock & Walley,
Pleasant Grove, Utah.

Gentlemen:—The wood platform W. A. Wood Single Apron Harvester and Binder, you sold us in 1890, has cut 250 acres of all kinds of grain, shattered, lodged and thickset. We can cut, elevate, bind and deliver equal to work done with any binder known to us. Have given entire satisfaction to our customers, and can get more work than we have time to accomplish. We never pull out of a field until the grain is all cut and satisfaction given. In 30 hours with two teams and three men we cut 30 acres. The Open End Single Apron Machine is a world beater.

BERNEL WRIGHT & HOOKER.
J. O. WRIGHT.

Pleasant Grove, Utah, July 30th, 1891.

Messrs. Bullock & Walley,
Pleasant Grove, Utah.

Gentlemen:—The Wood Binder I bought of J. O. Bullock, in 1887, has cut about 500 acres. It has cost me less than $100 for repairs. I cut, bind, and elevate one acre of grain every hour I am in the field. The first time it was operated I cut five acres and missed but one bundle on account of poor twine. I do not know of any binder equal to the Walter A. Wood.

JEPTA NIELSON.

Spanish Fork, Utah, July 28th

Co-operative Wagon and Machine Co.,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Gentlemen:—The Walter A. Wood Single Apron Harvester and Binder, 5 feet 6 in. cut, bought from your representative, J. M. Creer, this month, cuts, binds, and elevates to our entire satisfaction.

(Signed) ISAAC HANSEN, NEPHI HANSEN,
JOHN HANSEN, EPHRAIM HANSEN.

Spanish Fork, July 28th, 1891.

Co-operative Wagon and Machine Co.,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Gentlemen:—The 5 feet 6 in. Single Apron W. A. Wood Harvester and Binder operating on our farms and for custom work cuts, elevates, and binds equal to any other binder we ever saw, and in some respects much better. It will work evenly with all kinds of twine. We have cut and bound four and a half acres in one place at one time without missing a bundle.

(Signed) JOHN BIRD. THOMAS B. JONES.

Spanish Fork, Utah, July 28th, 1891.

Co-operative Wagon and Machine Co.,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Gentlemen:—I have used my Walter A. Wood Harvester and Binder four years; it has cut, bound, and elevated some of the heaviest crops in Spanish Fork, and has given equal satisfaction to myself and customers, and is now in good running order after having cut 700 acres. The entire expense for repairs during the four years has not amounted to $5.00.

(Signed) DAVID WILLIAMS.

Buy WOOD'S MACHINES from our Agents:

PEOPLE'S CO-OP., Lehi.
AMERICAN FORK CO-OP., American Fork.
BULLOCK & WALLEY, Pleasant Grove.
PROVO EAST CO-OP., Provo.
BEVER & BRINGHURST, Springville.
C. W. & M. CO., J. M. CREER, Agt., Spanish Fork.
J. S. PAGE & SON, Payson.
LEE GERSHAM, Santaquin.
J. C. OSTLER & SONS, Nephi.
O. F. CARLSON, Manti.
SIDNEY COOP., Manti.
C. W. & M. CO., Fairview.

LEADING IMPLEMENT DEALERS,

Co-op. Wagon & Machine Co.

GEO. T. ODELL, General Manager.

Purchase Wood's Single Apron Binder and Pure Sisal Twine.

Monthly Meteorological Summary

Station—SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.
State of Utah, for July, 1891.

SUMMARY.

Mean temperature, 76.05. Highest temperature, 95. Lowest temperature, 55. Greatest daily range, 30. Least daily range, 12. Mean daily range, 20.

Mean temperature for the corresponding month last year, 70.

Mean temperature for the corresponding month for the past 20 years, 69.

Total precipitation for the month, 0.00 inches.

Total precipitation to date, 0.00 inches.

Prevailing direction of wind, S.

Total movement of wind, 5,184 miles.

Highest velocity of wind, 40 miles per hour, from the S.

Number of days with clear sky, 18.

Number of days with partly cloudy sky, 13.

Number of days with cloudy sky, 0.

Number of days with fog, 0.

Number of days with hail, 0.

Number of days with thunder, 0.

Number of days with frost, 0.

Prepared by H. B. Stevens,
Observer, U. S. Weather Bureau.

"JOSEPH SMITH AS A PROPHET"

A very interesting and instructive lecture by Elder Andrew Jenson, in pamphlet form, just the thing to send abroad to friends or for missionary use. Only 5 cents per copy. At DESERET NEWS office.

Consumption Cured!

FOR 25 YEARS DR. WM.

HALL'S BALSAM

FOR THE LUNGS,

has been a never-failing family remedy for COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, "A SCRAPPER," SORE THROAT, HOARSENESS, PERTUSSIS, CROUP, FARCIAN, INFLUENZA, ASTHMA AND CHRONIC BRONCHITIS. ASTHMA, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, PLEURISY, PAIN IN THE SIDE AND BREAST, SPITTING OF BLOOD, and all diseases of the

Throat, Chest and Lungs
Leading to CONSUMPTION

Dr. WM. HALL'S BALSAM combines the best properties of the most valuable medicines and holds the Sanctuary of the Throat and Lungs with a healing balm. Its soothing effects relieve and quickly cures and quickly cures every case. Sold by all druggists at 25 cts. and $1 per bottle. Large size the best. Be sure to get the DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM, and take no other.

For Sale by all Druggists.
PRICE 25c., 50c., $1.00.
DR. WM. HALL CO., NEW YORK.

AMERICA

Has been great Cures—Hymen, Longfellow and Poe have more good Residences—Fremont, Bonine and Bennett, and Cox and Sweet, Express—Dong, Emerson and Holmes, and store over Pacificus—Hawthorne, Lincoln and Greeley, and over great Lakes—Bancroft and Longfellow, and over great Lakes—Bancroft and Longfellow, and over great Lakes—Bancroft and Longfellow