AT THE EISTEDDFOD.

Interesting Observations by the Ever Versatile C. R. Savage.

THE GREAT FESTIVAL A SUCCESS

Though a Part of the Program Was Noticeable for the Great Metropolis of the Plains.

Special Correspondence of the News.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 3.—The great Eisteddfod has almost become a matter of history. While I am writing the last session is in progress. The public interest has increased each time since the opening assembly, and I am credibly informed that it is a financial success.

At the fourth session there were about 5,000 people present, which for an afternoon meeting in the busy city of Denver is, to my mind, an evidence that the people are taking more than the usual interest in a movement non-American in its origin. Denver boasts a population of 170,000 people and taxable property values at $170,000,000. Whether this is a real estate estimate, or the result of an actual census, I cannot say; but all of our people are enthusiastic and delighted with their city. The reception committee has worked hard to care for them; many of the citizens have personally conducted them in points of interest. Mrs. Ellen opened her splendid grounds to them for two hours today, and to private homes where members of the choir are located the hospitality is that they are the recipients of great courtesy.

As yet the masses do not take interest in Eisteddfods. The very name stings on the tongue—the way the prominent speakers worked to give it the right sound was the comical side of their addresses—and any one essential fact himself an accomplished linguist when he could give it the right sound. The program so published is a combination of school reviews, musical festivals and country fairs. Many of the exercises were just the thing for a small town, but for this metropolis of the plains not of place. Each visitor wants something ahead of the narrow circles in which they move. This the sessions have proved; most of it had to be cut out and executes of more general interest given instead. Messrs. Edwards and Ap-Madoc showed themselves masters of the situation, and that really will and reporters were not in the somewhat crabby echo for competition. I believe that when the echo mark was reached in coldness, the great Tabernacle choir always came to the rescue. One of the local papers said they sang as no other choir can sing, which is a credit of honor for them. Many of Professor Stephens's selections, had a strong Welsh flavor, but few if any of the grand sacred pieces have been given the acoustic properties of the huge hall do not favor the rendition of the glorious anthems that send a thrill to our hearts when rendered with the grand organ as an accompaniment. O My Father is a great favorite here as well as at home, and many requests have been made to hear it repeated.

As I intend to my first letter, the K. of P. band under Anton Pearson from our city carried off the $100 prize as well as the self medal which was placed on the prize leader's breast by a lovely lady on the great stage. The roar of applause given by the visitors from the dollar this showed how they appreciated the award. After this ceremony the band played two selections which aroused the greatest enthusiasm.

Another of our Salt Lakers, C. D. Schetzel, captured the award as the best guitar player, his competitors abandoned the field to him after hearing him play. The morning papers called him a master of the instrument.

The award for the ladies' chorus has not yet been announced, but after hearing them both my mind is made up. The chorus from Salt Lake was directed by Mr. Sweeum, the Denver chorus by a gentleman.

It will be a source of great satisfaction if the journey of the adjudicator should give another prize to the Salt Lake visitors and it will reflect much credit upon the musical development of Utah. The decisions of the judges, although as usual not entirely satisfactory, is final and is above all criticism; to every case the people generally manifested their approval of the awards.

I do not think the readers of the News desire all the particulars of the violin contests, of the baritone solos, and the many minor contests that are only interesting locally. To me the progress of our Utah representatives are the living issue, a degree of pride fills the heart when for sons and daughters lodge themselves to the front ranks with the many who are employed by their more wealthy competitors in other cities.

One of the ceremonies of the Eisteddfod was the seating of the successful poet in the Bardic chair. The chair was said to be the finest ever seen; it cost $200, was made of engraved oak with a carved eagle on the top. The great choir was formed and sang behind them. A half circle of men from different points were formed at the back and the representative of the land, led by the way is in New York, was escorted to the chair, and a Welsh song was rendered by Mrs. Woodard who by the way is a lovely singer, was part of the ceremony. The making of a public call as to whether there was peace in the land, with a drawn sword placed above the head was dispensed with, for it was generally conceded that gentle peace does fill our borders. The only fight now on is a financial one and the ballot box will settle that.

It is not generally known that the Grand prayer of the Welsh in ancient days was always offered by the assistants standing in a circle after which the sacred circle was broken. As expressed in English it was as follows:

Grant, O God, thy protection;
And to protection, strength;
And to strength, unless ending;
And to unlearning, knowledge;
And to knowledge, knowledge of the just;
And to knowledge of the just, the love of God;
And to that love, the love of all existence;
And to the love of all existence, the love of God;
God and all creatures.

The final session, which will take the form of a concert, will come off tomorrow night (Saturday). This will be the last of the choirs and musical conventions. It is in every way admirable, its aim is the cultivation of music and poetry, two of the purifying influences to keep manhood elevated in thought and action.

The verdict of the people is that the concert, the Salt Lake singers and musicians was the grand aim to whatever success may come out of the movement. If we could have had a set meeting next Sunday in the hall with the choir to sing and some good speakers, we could have left an impression that would never have been erased, and yet the people of the second Gospel see the understand it.

CHOIR COMING HOME.

Leave the Melody and Will Arrive in Salt Lake after Noon Tomorrow.

Special to the News.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 5.—The Tabernacle choir, Knights of Pythias band and entire Salt Lake party left here for home at 1:30 this morning on a special, all well. The party will arrive at Salt Lake Sunday morning.

WILL ARRIVE AFTER NOON.

Inquiry at the Rio Grande general passenger office today elicited the information from Mr. Wadleigh, that the choir had requested a stop of at least an hour or two at Glenwood Springs this evening where they will arrive about 8:30. The request, said Mr. Wadleigh had been granted and the length of the home run added to last but much. At the very best 12th tomorrow afternoon will be the earliest moment of arrival to this city and it may be as late as two o'clock. The prospects for the choir being in attendance at the Tabernacle services tomorrow are therefore very slight.

Latter-day Saints' College.

The eleventh academic year of this institution will open on Monday, Sept. 14; entrance examinations being held on Monday and Tuesday. The public opening exercises will be held at the Tabernacle on Tuesday at 1 p. m. All are cordially invited. The building last named has been secured by the College for the High School, College, and music departments in place of the Eighteenth Ward Seminary building which is announced in the catalogue. This change will be a great convenience from the fact that the two buildings occupied by the institution are within two minutes walk of each other, the commercial department being held as before attention is to the building 253 West First North street.

The college is fully equipped with all facilities necessary for the prosecution of its work along the lines named above. All students who intend entering the College should apply at the office of the president, in the Seventeenth ward school house, between Monday, September 14th, at 9 a. m., and Tuesday at 1 p. m., to present credentials or pass examinations. Circulars containing full information may be had on application to the undersigned.
