SUNDAY SERVICES.

At the Tabernacle services yesterday, Sunday, October 1st, after the usual preliminary exercises, of the Council of the Twelve, first addressed the congregation. Speaking of the condition of the Latter-day Saints, he said he could not understand why those should not be happy who have the spirit of God influencing them. We have received the Gospel and cannot be otherwise than happy. Even under adverse circumstances, such as poverty, not the Saints, they felt to thank God for everything which were under the general comparative prosperity. We have the confidence that this people shall never look for bread, nor shall they be left without a man who shall have authority to say to them and to the world, "Thus saith the Lord," with reference to both temporal and spiritual matters.

ELDER HOSHIAH GROVER,

It is said there is distress among us; if so, this is because we have served ourselves instead of God. We must free ourselves from making wealth our aggregate present and make our life to God. Everywhere the people are in debt. This is not in accordance with the will of God. The earth has been allowed to go to waste. People have run into debt to obtain what we had within our own selves to pay them. This is against the counsel given from time to time.

The speaker would not be understood as wishing to make church and state, although he would say that the Kingdom of Jesus includes everything that pertains to men's happiness in this life and the life to come. If this is not so, who organized the earth and arranged everything for the benefit of the inhabitants thereof? God did, and we must. And our business is to use everything on earth with a view of securing all that is good and preparing ourselves for a higher state of existence hereafter. There is an infinitude of knowledge, and we should progress throughout all eternity. Nor is there any knowledge, except as it is revealed by God, in any field in which the human mind can be engaged. Happy those who are the Latter-day Saints, understanding the Gospel truly, will be the best farmers, laborers, doctors, lawyers, etc.

The reason why we have been gathered together is that the Lord shall find a prepared people when He comes. What do we learn then with regard to keeping the commandments of God? We desire of our children to be obedient and to progress in learning. But as a correlative we often are to blame. The speaker deplored that nominal members of the church sometimes were heard to use profane language, as well as using other liberties equally bad. He would only say that such persons would have to make reparation some time. Profanation is ruining the country and the curse will resume unless we be cautious. The Saints must rise up in their might and overcome the evil. If the people are united, the evil-minded adversaries will not be able to prevail in their nefarious plans and schemes. This is a day to pray and to watch. It is also a day of peace. Maintain it and keep the covenants you have made before God, angels and men.

ELDER JOHN HENRY SCOTT,

of the Council of Twelve, quoted the words of James, which awakened in the heart of Joseph Smith a desire to learn what course he pursue in regard to the salvation of men. Those words, he said, should be read and studied by all. They apply to us in all positions of life, whether in consecration of spiritual or temporal well being. We should live so that we can learn, and in sending we have to suffer more or less. As a people we have passed through a series of experiences. Lately we have been extensively engaged in acquiring wealth. Our places of ground suddenly became valuable, and we studied how to utilize the circumstance for our own benefit. Some have maintained their faith under all, while others have wandered away from the object that brought us here, as if life were only for the purpose of accumulating wealth. Pride took hold of our hearts. It looked as if the world were before us and the race successful, and we forgot the responsibilities resting upon us with regard to the human race. Our duty is to carry the Gospel to the world, and if we neglect that responsibility the blood of the world will rest upon us. In the excitement of the race for the accumulation of wealth some have become so enlarged that they can no longer leave their places of business and go to preach the Gospel. It seems that our Father has brought before our minds the facts in regard to our condition. It would be well if the feeling of security that now exists in temporal matters would give us a foretaste of what will come, when men shall feel their hearts within them to fail for fear of what shall come upon them. The speaker felt as impelled that the Lord has given us a faith so firm, so sure that it need not be shaken, no matter what may come. Let us reflect on the experience of the last few years. Have we sought earthly means in order to be able to help build up the kingdom of God, or for some other purpose? The Gospel came from God, and on us rests the responsibility of proclaiming it. If we do not, we will lose that which is of more value than all earthly possessions.

Axis Went Touch It.

FARMINGTON, Sept. 27, 1893.—I am in your weekly home of the 16th that many are losing their lives to early, as I have a simple, cheap and never-failing remedy with me, I freely enclose one dollar for the benefit of your many readers, if you consider it worth publishing. Any person that the sole letter, whether bloody, sickly, constipated, of bone pains, I have lost about forty pounds and therefore is with age and feel very decrepit.

Respectfully,

North Carolina Conference.

PITTSBORO, N. C., Sept. 28, 1893.—The North Carolina conference convened at Shady Grove, Pittsylvania county, Va., Sept. 21 and 24. There were present as the conference Elder J. H. Kimball, president of the Southern states mission; Elder Wm. C. Wilcox, president of the North Carolina conference, and traveling Elders Robert Barker, N. P. Lee, Rigby Hendricks, C. A. Griffin, Henry Foster, Willis Johnson, George M. Smith, Cornelius Gardner, James W. Wilson, Moses Miner, C. E. Layton, C. E. Jones and S. T. Leigh.

Under the able direction of Elder Kimball, system was established and subjects were assigned to the Elders, thus benefiting them and making conferences a success. The conference on Saturday's meeting was small on account of this being the farmers' busy season in their houses, but on Sunday we had a large attendance, and a general good feeling prevailed throughout. To add to our pleasure, the good things of the earth were generously provided by the people to refresh the inner man, and the Elders were well cared for during their stay. The Kimbalites and the people to Gardening our glorious work in writing of admiration, and we say, God bless and preserve our friends.

The instructions of President Kimball and Wilcox to the Elders were timely and wise, and their encouraging remarks gave visible satisfaction and comfort. On Monday we met in council and the Elders received their appointments as stated as follows:

Elders Wilcox and Foster to Rutherford county.

Elders Johnson and Layton to Stokes county.

Elders Stevens and Jones to Anson county.

Elders Barker and Winder to Pittsylvania county.

Elders Griffin and Smith to Catawba county.

Elders Gardner and Miner to Durham and Person counties.

Elders Lee and Leigh to Surry county.

The release of Elder Winder to soon return home is regretted by the Elders, who all love him. He never necessitated a new appointment which fell to the lot of Elder Barker, who is very worthy and will (as others have) receive the hearty support of all the Elders. The able management of Elder Winder and his predecessors has put the conference in a prosperous condition. The health of the Elders is excellent, generally, and their association is a measure of truth is equal to any emergency or calamity. They are enjoying their labors and feel encouraged with the future prospects of carrying the Gospel into new parts.

In the last six months there have been twenty baptisms of worthy persons, the coming in to the fearle of the Elders to see results of their labors, and may press on with a zeal.

Among the good things which cheer also against the time here some of Zion to the weekly arrival of the excellent paper of the Deseret.

N. P. LEE.

Given Up to Die

"I was troubled with lung complaint and was given up to die. My friends had made up their minds I was gone. I had tried all kinds of medicine without avail, and took to my bed, to leave it no more. I heard of Hood's Sarsaparilla and commenced using it. Today I am a well woman." Mrs. E. A. Hamilton, Dover, Delaware.
