PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, NOV. 27, 1895.

First District Court.

Judge King presided in the First district court yesterday.

Fred R. Smith, formerly editor of the Spanish Fork Herald, now at Chicago, was arraigned on a charge of libel, consisting of publishing an article reflecting on the character of R. J. Stewart in the Herald last April. He pleaded not guilty.

Eli Booth, the young Salem man indicted for rape committed at Payson about a week ago, entered a plea of not guilty. His bail, fixed at $1,000, by Judge Merrill was raised to $1,500.

Julian Jenkings was arraigned on a charge of unlawfully trucking into the Legrand, Silver county, pistol-flint on the 22d of September last. He pleaded not guilty.

New Cases Filed.

Peter Winward was convicted in Justice Wilson's court at Payson, of abusing James Reese by using threatening, insulting, slanderous and profane language. He was fined $1 and costs, total $5, and has taken an appeal to the First district court.

Simon Huber has commenced suit against the receivers of the Union Pacific and Utah Northern and Oregon Short Line railways to collect $50. On the 28th of October, while he was crossing the track west of this city, a freight train came along and a collision resulted in the killing of the team and the demolishing of the wagon, for which together with personal injuries the above mentioned amount is asked. Plaintiff alleges negligence on the part of the railroad company in that they allowed weeds and willows to grow along the track on the street where plaintiff attempted to cross, which obscured his view, and also that they failed to ring a bell or blow a whistle.

EXHIBITORS AT FAIRS.

Points That It Is to Their Advantage to Remember.

They should study very carefully the rules and regulations of the society and follow them to the letter.

They should decide early to exhibit and prepare their cattle accordingly. It is no excuse for a breeder to say that his cattle are nothing but skin and bones because it has been a dry season.

It is a mistaken idea that many have that they can influence the decision of the judge by talking to him of their past exploits and number of prizes they have taken. If a judge is an expert, he can readily see this and is naturally suspicious of one who talks too much in the show ring.

All exhibitors should remember that there is only one prize, and if they are not successful take their defeat gracefully and like men and not find fault with the judges, management and all the other exhibitors. I have seen men completely lose their heads and make statements that if they could hear in their calmer moments they would see how absurd they were.

The judge, if he is an expert, knows no one and gives the prize to the best animals, and if one man has the best individuals in about all the classes he should get the ribbons. Many exhibitors cannot understand this and think that the spoils should be more evenly divided. This is a common idea among a large class of small exhibitors which you will find at almost every state and county fair.

While on the subject of fairs I would like to call your attention to the prize for bulls. I think it is of very little value unless all aged bulls are judged with their progeny, and as good grades are much more profitable to the cattle raiser than pure pure breds I would like to see grades now in the progeny. This is an old story with me, and one I have advocated for many years, and I think all men who are interested and have followed the bull prizes given at many of our large fairs will agree with me in this subject.—E. Burnett in Breeder's Gazette.

correspondent of American Cultivator, who likes simple tools best, describes the device here illustrated.

It consists of a piece of hoop from an old kerosene barrel, about 6 or 8 inches long and one inch wide as shown in picture. Then bend it in the shape of the dotted lines, Fig. 1, and use it as shown in Fig. 2.
