HOW HE KILLED HER.

The Most Hideous and Heinous Crime Ever Committed in Utah.

SAYS ATTORNEY JOHN M. ZANE.

Of the Wife Murder by Enoch Davis, Who is Seeking Executive Clemency.

Editor Deseret News

Much has been said in the papers lately in regard to Enoch Davis, who is now under sentence of death for murdering his wife. He was tried before a jury, his witnesses were subpoenaed and paid for by the Territory, he was ably and ingeniously defended by three lawyers, all his witnesses were heard, and a jury of intelligent and right-minded men rendered, after a short deliberation, a verdict of murder in the first degree. His case was appealed to the Supreme Court of the Territory, and from to the Supreme Court of the United States, and in both courts affirmed. This regard to settle the correctness of the judgment. But two classes of people criticize, one composed of people who oppose capital punishment, the other of people who know little of the facts. As to those people who oppose capital punishment, it is sufficient to say that by the laws of this Territory, a man who is opposed to capital punishment is deemed unfit to try a man for murder. The laws also permit a jury in a capital case to recommend that the punishment be imprisonment for life. In Davis's case the jury declined to so recommend. The deliberate judgment of twelve unprejudiced men and the positive letter of the law ought to be of more worth than the loose surmises of misinformed persons or the desires of a weak and maudlin sentimentalism.

The crime for which Davis is to be punished was proven to be most atrocious. He had married his wife more than twenty years before he killed her. She had borne him nine children. Her people were respectable. She had been a hard-working woman; she had done far more to support their large family than he had. He had been addicted to drunkenness and had abused her. Two weeks before the killing he had threatened to take her life and had so frightened her that at two o'clock at night she had fled to Sheriff Pope for protection. A quarrel has taken place on the day of the killing. She was killed in the night time, while lying on the bed in their one-roomed house. The blood from her wounds had run upon the pillow, the sheet and down upon the floor. Two children, one a little girl of three, the other a baby, were sleeping in the bed with her. On the floor of the room in a corner, four boys, aged respectively seven, nine, eleven and fourteen years, were asleep. She was struck twice on the side of the head by a revolver; each blow crushed in the skull. Death was probably instantaneous, at any rate unconsciousness was. The gown she had on, the pillow, and the bed clothes showing the position in which she died were in court. The revolver with which she was killed was hanging the evening before the killing in its scabbard on the wall. A letter written the very day of the killing and not many hours before it came out in evidence. In it the wife, writing to her sister, spoke of her wretched life, her husband's conduct, said that she was in fear of her life, and that she was coming with her younger children to her sister, to see if she could work there and support them. It was the letter of a good woman. The killing took place that night in that room where six children were sleeping. Not one of them was awakened by it. In the morning the wife was missing. The husband told the children that she had gotten up mad in the night and gone off. That day he had the two older boys raking up the yard (an unheard of thing) and putting the dirt in an empty potato hole by the side of the house. He turned the water ditch into this hole during the day. That evening About supper time he told his second son, who with his older brother had slept at the corral, that he would tell him something that he must keep secret or it would hang him, and that was that his mother had taken poison during the night and was dead, that she had asked him to bury her three miles away in a field and he had done so, adding: (I quote the exact words) "She died like a lady and I buried her like a gentleman." The son soon after this got away from the house and went over into the town to see his older brother. He had told this brother and an officer. The father as soon as he heard of his son's going, mounted a horse and fled. He was discovered two days later on the reservation, thirty miles from home. In the meantime the boys and the neighbors searched, and at last found the woman's body in the potato hole; fresh dirt and the rakings of the yard were above the body. The night robe had been taken from it. It lay in a position as if thrown hurriedly in the hole. The night robe and the bed clothes were found hidden in a barrel. Davis on cross-examination admitted that he had killed his wife, had washed the blood stains from the floor, had thrown the body in the hole, had hidden the bloody clothes, had caused the yard to be raked and had told the contradictory stories. His defense was ingenious and the ground was well chosen. Court was two hundred miles from the place of the killing. Vernal, A. Dr. Butler, who had lived there had died a while after the killing. Some said his death was from natural. Others that it was suicide. Davis's defense was this: He had for some time been suspicious of Butler, and this evening was watching him. He saw Butler come to his house, saw a light flash, saw the light then go out. He rushed to the house, found the door locked, burst it in, grasped his revolver, saw a man, struck at him, the blow hit his wife, but the man escaped. He said there was much noise. Velocity was shown to be false by three tests. (1) The woman had been struck twice, as the two holes in her skull showed. (2) None of the children had heard a sound or were awakened. (3) The prosecution happened to be able to show and did show that Dr. Butler on this evening was not at Vernal, but had gone to Salt Lake City, and had left his practice in charge of another physician.

This is the crime the evidence showed. It showed absolutely nothing against the wife's character. This is probably the most hideous and heinous crime ever committed in Utah Territory. Mr. Warner, his attorney, would testify, I feel sure, to recommend a commutation of Davis's sentence. If this man is pardoned or if his sentence is commuted, the public ought to know what sort of criminal it is, who has aroused the executive clemency and compassion, and that is the reason I write this letter, because I considered the trial and know the facts.

Very sincerely yours,

JOHN M. ZANE.

THE FIGURES GIVEN.

The Territorial Board of Equalization and the Totalled Assessments.

The Territorial Board of Equalization has finished its work for the present and late yesterday afternoon adjourned subject to call by Chairman Bowles. Garfield county has not yet sent in its returns. Because of this omission and the further fact that the assessment totals sent in by the county clerks of Summit, Weber and Sevier had to be returned for correction of slight errors, the board could not close up the business in hand. Within about a week, however, the board will reassemble to cover the corrected totals and strange to have them certified to the Territorial auditor by October 1st.

The total assessed valuation in the Territory for 1893 was $117,568,375.10, while for this year the total is $98,055,[illegible]$19,513.10, a net decrease of $17,952,861, or a little more than 15 per cent. All the counties show a decrease except Uintah, which makes a splendid showing on the right side of the ledger.

HOUSEBREAKERS HELD.

What They Found at Parson Brown's, Mr. Cutler's and in Court.

L. Cunningham and J. Ryan, the men who burglariously entered the residence of Parson Brown of the Congregational church and then made their way to the house of Mr. H. S. Cutler, in the south western part of the city, a few nights ago and added to their stock of spoils while there, are now behind the bars, awaiting the action of the grand jury for their misdeeds.

Both men were arrested at Ogden yesterday, where they were endeavoring to dispose of their plunder, and brought to this city last evening and turned over to the keeping of the Salt Lake police. Today they were taken before Justice Smith, where Cunningham pled guilty to robbing the Congregational parsonage. Ryan, who is by far the shrewder appearing character, pleaded not guilty, but he was seen walking up and down the sidewalk in front of the parsonage by Mr. Joseph Cutler a short time before the burglary and raising and dropping his arms and hat as though making signs to some one at a distance, and as there was other criminating evidence, he was held to await the action of the grand jury. Bonds in both cases were fixed at $750, bail being without either they were committed to the county jail. Both men pled not guilty to committing the Cutler robbery. The case will be investigated by the grand jury direct.

All of the property stolen from the Rev. Mr. Brown was recovered and today it was identified by that gentleman. It consisted of a suit of clothes, underwear, hosiery, jewelry, a deck of cards, a bowie knife and a miscellaneous lot of trifles.

Mr. Cutler is also lucky enough to get back the articles extracted from his house. They were made up of clothing, jewelry and various other things of value.

"PRISONER" THIS AFTERNOON.

Cunningham and Ryan, the couple held by Justice Smith this morning for housebreaking, were taken to the city police "snuggery" establishment this afternoon, as the police call it, by detective Rhodes and photographed. In a few days the likenesses of the prisoners will be added to the already big collection that is now kept in the "rogues' gallery at police headquarters.

NOW PAY YOUR TAXES.

Collector Leonard Ready to Issue Receipts On Settlement With Him.

County Collector Leonard announced this afternoon that he was now ready to receive cash and warrants for payment of taxes for the year 1894 and issue receipts therefor.

"There will be no rates," added Mr. Leonard, "as the Territorial board of equalization has passed upon the list as submitted to them."

"That means, does it not," said the NEWS man "that the levy has been in effect?"

"I presume so," was Mr. Leonard's reply. "I have received no official orders from the board to that effect, but I feel assured that is the status of the case."

Asked as to about what amount of taxes he expected to collect this year, Mr. Leonard stated that he hardly knew, but was of the opinion that it would be very close to that of 1893. A few property owners—a very few—have already made a settlement for 1894.

Thanks!

The committee having in charge the recent Pioneer Reunion at Saltair beach take this opportunity to express their appreciation of and gratitude for the aid given by very many kind friends in making the affair a success and in contributing to the pleasure of the veterans, their posterity and the visitors there assembled.

To Elders C. R. Savage and B. Morris Young thanks are especially due; the former acted efficiently as master of ceremonies in the program that was given; the latter was tasteful and most valuable in the collection and care of the relics and curios—like of early days—in exhibit which gave much great pleasure to the spectators. In the committee should also be mentioned the trustees of the Deseret Museum and the University of Utah, from which institutions were obtained various rare and novel mementos of Pioneer, Bellefire and even earlier days; also many thoughtful friends note in this city and from a distance who loaned articles and specimens of this character and contributed to the completeness of the exhibit.

The committee wishes further mention be made of its thanks to

Officer Geo. H. Raleigh, who remained steadfastly on duty all day as guard over the priceless collection referred to and his superior officer, Marshal Frail, for detailing him to that important service;

Mr. G. F. Culmer, for the loan of show cases in which to place the smaller articles;

H. Dinwoodey and the Fossil Furniture Co., who gratuitously furnished easy chairs for the comfort of the veterans;

The old-time musicians, who played familiar tunes, warmed the hearts and cheered the spirits of the assembled throng; these gentlemen responded readily to the request for their services, some even coming from a distance; and the committee is sure it voices the general sentiment when it expresses special appreciation of their endeavors.

To name all who deserve it would be too great a task. It will probably be sufficient to say that we feel the obligation, and hereby tender to each and every one who rendered assistance, either on the program or in any way, our sincerest thanks.

THE COMMITTEE.

Condra Fined $5.

Frank J. Condra went before Commissioner McNally this afternoon and withdrew his former plea of not guilty and pled guilty to a charge of disturbing the peace. The complainant in the case was Ed Butler, who at present runs the Metropolitan hotel restaurant. The parties were formerly partners in the European cafe, and there seems to exist some little ill-feeling between them over an old sore which broke out about the termination of the partnership. The allegation was that Condra met Butler, bestowed upon him a short string of objectionable names and thereby disturbed the peace.

The commissioner thought a fine of $5 and costs would fix the bill, and acted accordingly.

Back From Germany.

This morning Anthon C. Lund, son of Elder A. H. Lund, now presiding over the European mission, arrived from Germany, where he has been for over two years past. Brother Lund left here June 18, 1892, his purpose being to study the theory of composition in music at Leipzic. He was most successful in his studies. Elder Lund also did some missionary work as his circumstances permitted. He also visited Berlin, Hamburg, Stettin, and all the leading cities in that part of the country. He left Europe August 7, and stopped over in the East several days while en route home.

Concerning John Beck.

In the suit of J. F. Jonsson vs John Beck, wherein judgment was entered for the plaintiff by default for $1,131.19, motion has been filed to set aside the judgment and permit the defendant to answer. Judge Bartch has issued an order staying proceedings upon the judgment until August 28 and until the final hearing of the motion to set aside the judgment or until further order of the court.

In the case of T. A. Woolley vs John Beck, in which judgment for the plaintiff for $1,[illegible]79 was rendered, a similar motion was made and a similar order issued.

Land Office.

Michael Bede (by Marion Bede, widow), of Ogden, Weber county, final proof of desert entry of the West half of the northeast quarter of section 19, township 5 north, range 1 west.

Emma Farmer, application for mining claim in Fish Springs mining district, Juab county.

The Robinson Estate.

Only one matter has come up in the probate court today. It is that of the estate of Julia Robinson, deceased—hearing on petition for removal of the present administrator and appointment of a successor; also for family allowance. An order was made removing Margaret Vandenbeuker, and from that point the case is proceeding this afternoon.

Before Judge Bartch Today.

Thomas Phillips, a native of Wales, now residing in this city, was admitted to citizenship.

In the case of E. Griffith vs A. R. Gibson, the motion to dissolve writ of attachment was allowed.

Two Giant Crabs.

British Columbia is producing a curiosity. It is two crabs, giant members of the crab family, dark green in color, and measuring upward of four feet in diameter, the largest crab that ever crossed a forest land or climbed a cocoanut tree, and belonging to a variety of names, of which the "robber crab" is the most familiar, and "Lingue latro," the scientific. Strange to say neither of the specimens secured nor any of their kind have ever been known to enter the water. They belong to the purely land or tree-climbing family.

The crabs were brought to Victoria by the schooner Norma, coming laden from Fanning and Washington islands, which is now discharging her cargo. They were secured at Palmyra islands, in the South Pacific, and as yet have developed no dangerous propensities, though quite willing to give exhibitions of their strength, breaking broom handles and such toys as if they were pipestems. It would be the simplest thing in the world for them to crush a man's leg or arm in a similar way, but fortunately they are slow in anger or to action, and take it generally that any one can get out of harm's way in seeing danger ahead.

One occasion a day serves as a meal, the nut being cracked as if it were an egg, and the kernel slowly devoured. In appearance the crabs resembled nothing so much as overgrown and exaggerated spiders with amorphously developed bodies and a wonderful wealth of legs. Captain F. D. Walker and his sons are very proud of their captives, which, they assert, are as rare as birds of paradise.—Portland Telegram.
