OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, - AUGUST 25, 1894.

Mrs. Giesy Pleads.

In the Fourth district court in the case of the U. S. vs Mrs. S. H. Giesy the defendant, by her attorneys, Evans & Rogers, appeared in court and, waiving the reading of the indictment, entered a plea of not guilty.

Child Poisoned.

Alta, the two-year-old daughter of Joseph McIntire, was poisoned yesterday and but for the presence of mind of her parents would have died. The parents had been using London purple in the garden, and a portion of it had been left in a basket. It had dried up and become solid and had been thrown out among some weeds. The children in playing around had found it and were using it for chalk, which fact attracted the attention of the mother, when she found that her child had eaten some of the poison. Home remedies which was in the house was administered with good effect. Dr. Joyce was telephoned for, and treated the child, who is now out of danger. The child had eaten a sufficient quantity to have killed it in half an hour if the poison had not been promptly removed from its stomach.

PARK CITY.

PARK CITY, UTAH, - AUG. 24, 1894.

IMPROVEMENT IN THE PARK.

Silver's Rise Was Joyful News—In Mine and Mill.

Much satisfaction is felt by the people of this camp at the way silver has been going up the past few days. The hope is that the price will continue to rise, and then have a fixed value, so that times will liven up all over the country. The mines here are now all prepared to take out a much greater amount of ore than formerly, and an increase in the price of silver would be a big thing for all concerned.

Work on the Silver King's new shaft is progressing rapidly, and the increase of wages promised the men if they would keep up their rapid work is being a stimulant to them to move rapidly. All the improvements under way at the King are showing up fine, and when all is finished that mine will be one of the best equipped ones in the Territory.

Some activity was shown around the new building of the Ontario leaching plant during the week and reports are circulated that work in the leacher will probably be started up before long.

Notes.

More pipe for the new waterworks has arrived during the week, and teams have been busy distributing the same along the streets. Active work in laying the pipe will commence September 1st, and the work finished up before cold weather sets in. The new system of pipes will cover a greater amount of territory than the old system, and the water pressure will be much greater.

The city at present is free from idle men, and the streets have taken on a much livelier appearance, which indicates that business is picking up.

Fruit peddlers from the valley are all doing a thriving trade, but the prices which they demand for some classes of goods is far beyond reason, and they have commenced to realize that the people will not be imposed upon.

The usual amount of bullion has left the camp during the week, but the ore shipments have not been quite so large as usual.

A greater amount of rain has fallen here during the past week, than at any time during the year, and the weather consequently has been much cooler and more pleasant, although at no time this year has it been very hot here at the Park.

Wednesday night the Republicans held an overflowing meeting at the Opera House, presided over by J. J. Daly of Salt Lake, and the principal addresses were delivered by Ex-Governor Thomas and Mr. Bagley, of Ogden. During the evening the "Don Cameron" club of Park City Republicans was organized with an enrollment of over 300 members.

Faith in the future of Salt Lake, as a good place to make investments, was shown by two of our citizens, Messrs. Keith and Ivers, during the week who purchased the property on Main street known as the McKimmins stables. It is considered a good buy, and it is the intention of the owners to improve it in the near future by a substantial business block, second to none in Salt Lake.

About 400 people from Park City were in attendance at Garfield Beach during the week, and the management of the resort says that more money was left there by the Park people than at any other one day during the season.

Amongst our visitors during the week were Ex-Governor A. L. Thomas, S. J. Lynn, J. J. Daly and wife, and Ike Wolf.

The Utah Central railroad passenger business has been heavy during the week, and many people from the city have been up to visit the mines, Wednesday is the regular visiting day at the mines, and everybody is made welcome.

A large amount of timber is being brought into town from Kamas and delivered to the mines. The amount used is large and the many saw mills in the surrounding canyons are kept busy the greater part of the year.

The Park City baseball club returned today from their outing in Salt Lake and other places with victory perched upon their banner, having won four games out of five on their trip. The football boys are now awaiting challenges from other teams to meet them at any time.

Registration for the coming election is progressing rapidly and to the entire satisfaction of everybody.

IN WASHINGTON COUNTY.

"Traveler" Has Reached Dixie and Has Good Things to Say About It.

ST. GEORGE, Aug. 19, 1894.—Dixie presents a prosperous appearance at this season of the year. Her orchards are full of fruit, her vines well laden, while the sorghum crop promises a fatter yield than common. Still the cry of hard times is heard and all claim there is no money and a poor market for the products of the country. We have sampled some as fine fruit as could be produced in any clime, the flavor of which was beyond comparison; and there is lots of it in Washington county. In every town one sees great platforms filled with fruit that is drying, but as far all the fruit is sun-dried in this region, and as a rule it is well cured; yet it is time that more method was adopted in its care and preparation for market. Evaporated or kiln dried fruit is demanded in the trade. The people should suitably take up this labor and thus put on the market not only better dried fruit, but in the most approved form, so that it would catch the consumer's attention. In the past the good, bad and indifferent have all [illegible] the consumer's [illegible] without being classified or assorted, and all together suffered the bad name. Today it is necessary to meet competition, and the fruit of this country to be accepted on the market must be gathered and packed with more care so it will have a more presentable appearance. Then it will make a market and hold it and customers will seek Dixie fruit instead of it having to be hawked and peddled and then go for a song, the fruit raiser singing the song. Peaches and grapes are very plentiful and much fruit is spoiling for want of attention, as the prospective price for dried fruit is not the most encouraging, yet more thrift than in years past is observable and greater attention is being paid to the cultivation of the soil.

The future of Southern Utah is bright, for people are getting to appreciate her advantages and to understand her climate and soil, while the water question is being solved by practical methods that give assurance to the agriculturist and orchardist. For the past two weeks frequent showers have retarded fruit drying and hay making. Some of the showers have been accompanied with extremely heavy thunder. These showers have modified the heat so that this is one of the most pleasant summers known to this region.

The factory at Washington is at present standing idle, but it is expected to start again soon.

Everywhere in the country people were busy gathering their harvest. Tempting ripe peaches hang over the fences, while vineyards full of ripe, luscious grapes were to be seen on all sides. These contradict the cry of hard times, for the land seemed full of luxuries, while the people were able to sit under their vine and fig tree and enjoy life, while the outside world are struggling to settle the vexed questions of the day. The farmers of this region raise two crops each season on the same ground. Their wheat is planted in the winter, and after it is harvested they raise a crop of corn or lucern. All the farms are small, and a man with a fifteen-acre farm here gets along as well as his northern neighbor with a hundred acres. The verdict here is that this once despised portion of the Territory will yet be the most desirable.

FEEDING YOUNG COLTS.

How Danger of Feeding Them Too Little Than Too Much.

A bit of conversation that occurred at one of our state agricultural fairs and was reported in a local paper seems to illustrate a very common feeling in regard to the feed for young colts. An old farmer approached a leading horseman, and after explaining the age and other points connected with his colt at home in all seriousness asked the horseman if he supposed a quart of oats a day would be such high feed as to injure the colt. "A quart of oats!" snorted the one questioned. "Why, man alive, that's about what the owner gives his Plymouth Rock rooster in that pen over there every day!" The old man's ideas were only a little more ridiculous than those of many others. There seems to be a great fear on the part of some farmers that they may feed their growing colts too much, and so these animals take five or six years in coming to an ill developed maturity on rough fodder, with little or no grain. No animal upon the farm stands more in need of growth producing foods to make its existence profitable to his owner than a colt, and the amount that it can profitably consume is by no means small.

Think of the feed that the great trotting horse Axtell consumed when but a 2-year-old, as reported by his former owner, Mr. C. W. Williams. Five quarts of oats, two quarts of bran, two quarts of carrots and three or four ears of corn three times a day! And the speed that he developed under such a course of feeding showed that he made good use of it. It is not necessary that all should feed so heavily of grain, but enough should be given to keep up a thrifty growth, and an all round development both summer and winter. The profit would be in this, that a much better horse would be produced, and one that would be ready for the harness or sale very much earlier in life than its poorly fed neighbor. There would be no more danger in feeding a large amount of corn to a growing colt, as there would be any kind of growing stock, and a filly should have still less. But when oats, bran and such foods as carrots are given the ordinary feeder will not be likely to give too much.

A good many will say that their colts will not sell for enough at maturity to admit of raising them on expensive foods. But no one should raise that class of animals. It is folly to keep any kind of stock that will not repay the cost of keeping in thrifty growth. An inferior animal will hardly pay for the inferior food it is kept upon, much less return any compensation for the work that has been expended in caring for it. Raise the kind of stock for which there is a demand at good prices in the market, and then feed the best growth producing foods. If this does not pay, do not raise stock.—D. Wooster in American Agriculturist.

READ THE EXPERIENCE

Of Mrs. Mary A. Newson, Wife of Robert Newson.

Who Has Been Connected with the Z. C. M. I., as a trusted Employe For the Past Twenty-[illegible] Years.

In making her statement for publication she states as follows:

MRS. MARY A. NEWSON, [illegible], SALT LAKE.

I was seriously ill for about one and one-half years before commencing treatment with the [illegible] of the Copeland Medical Institute. I was confined to my bed all last winter. I consulted many doctors, but all to no purpose, and was finally persuaded to try the Institute as a last resort, with results most gratifying indeed, as now I am a well woman.

My heart seemed to cause me the most alarm, as I suffered very much from irregularity of its action. My nervous system was completely shattered, as soon as the doctors said, I was a victim of nervous prostration.

My head ached terribly all the time; [illegible] constantly all over me at times [illegible] [illegible] was unable to sleep, my appetite [illegible] and felt [illegible] would cause my heart to palpitate [illegible] and then cease to beat [illegible] for what seemed to me an age but really but a very short period.

"Memory very bad, eyes weak and watery and specks before them constantly. [illegible] was sometimes general and they felt hot and burnt. Breath was as dry and parched as a piece of [illegible].

"Pains in joints and all limbs was very severe, was unable to cut my own food. Hands were stiff and could not use them. My left foot was swollen all the time, more or less, and the sense of feeling much impaired. [illegible] myself and friends much anxiety, as we were afraid of paralysis.

"I feel as well now I have forgotten my symptoms, but will be pleased to see and talk with all who may be interested for themselves or friends. Would state that the Institute's diagnosis was 'all wrong with the circulation' and he was right and very good. The wrong, as I am now a well woman. Myself and family cannot say too much in praise of the skill as a physician. Let those who wish, call and see me. In conclusion will say I am fifty-nine years of age, which makes my case the more favorable in my estimation."
