Place to Keep Honey.

When honey is removed from the hive, never place it down cellar. That is the worst thing you could do, because there is always moisture too moisture in a cellar. At first thought one might be inclined to think this a useless statement, as it has been repeated so frequently it forms a great many times, but it is far from useless. In fact, writes a correspondent of The American Bee Journal, it is very important. The truth of the matter is that there are a great many who have not learned that it is just as important to take proper care of the honey and put it on the market in first class condition as it is to use the best and most economical means of extracting it. One of the essentials of proper care is keeping the honey in a very dry and warm place. Especially is this true of comb honey or extracted honey in open cans. Honey takes very easily.

Use Stock Points.

When you buy a new harness, take your horse or mule to the harness shop and have him fitted just as you would have yourself fitted with a pair of shoes. Ill fitting harness is the cause of many a sore and galll.

The Oregon horse abattoir is still in full operation, slaughtering available animals and converting them into beef and fertilizing material. The factory is situated at Linton on the Columbia river.

The substance known as gluten meal is the refuse of corn after the starch has been taken out. It varies greatly in value. Professor Henry says the lighter, chaffy grades are of little value, while the heavier grades contain the germ of the corn grain and are rich in protein. These grades are worth more as feed than wheat bran is. Above prices to be paid for gluten meal Professor Henry writes in The Breeder's Gazette that the chaffy light grade is worth less than bran and should be sold for a lower price, while the heavier grades may be bought with profit at a somewhat higher price than bran or wheat bran. Bran should be mixed with the heavy kind of gluten meal to keep it from being too concentrated a food.

In the bone abattoir in Oregon every portion in the horse's body is utilized. The bones are crushed into bonemeal, the refuse is converted into fertilizer, the hides are made into leather, the meat is packed and sold for food.

NOT IN THE WORLD.

THE RISING SUN STOVE POLISH is a liquid, ready for use, and in a tin with a sponge attached, and has proved the best and most economical polish ever invented.

THE SUN PASTE POLISH is a paste, in a box, and has proved equally good and economical.
