Yesterday about thirty Chinamen passed through Ogden in bond going east to the island of Cuba.

Licensed to marry—Jacob Greenwald and Miss Esther Wright, both of West Weber.

Three divorce suits were filed in the Fourth district court: John Welch vs. Emma Welch on the ground of desertion; Jens P. Christensen vs. Marjorie Christensen, cruelty and intoxicating; William Jacob vs. Annie Jacob, also cruelty, all residents of Cache county.

PROVO.

Provo, Utah, Feb. 6, 1895.

First District Court.

The following business was transacted in Judge King's court yesterday afternoon:

Heinrick Jorgensen, of Mount Pleasant was granted a divorce from Annie M. Jorgensen on the ground of cruelty. Plaintiff was awarded the custody of two elder children and the younger children were given to the wife.

The case of the People vs. John M. Odell et al was upon motion of Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Thurman, stricken from the present setting of cases.

A. E. Veatch, a young Provo attorney, has notified Judge Lee before the court to show cause why he should not be compelled to pay to J. W. Pike, court stenographer, certain fees claimed by Mr. Pike to be due him for J. Williams vs. A. F. Whipple. Mr. Veatch was attorney for Williams and after having collected the judgment refused to pay Mr. Pike, hence the cause. Mr. Veatch is to be brought before the court. Mr. Veatch claims that he asked the clerk for all the costs in the case, and he has failed to tender Mr. Pike his fees. Mr. Veatch does not think he is in fault.

Ralph Oakley, the Springville boy who tried to poison a number of people in Springville a few days ago, was brought before the court as an order to have him sentenced to the Reform school. As the complaint upon which he had been brought before Justice Boyer charged a felony (attempt poisoning), Judge King informed County Prosecuting Attorney Booth that he could not commit the boy until after trial and conviction. It was decided on account of the boy's youth to change the complaint to (assault) a misdemeanor, in which case he can be committed without trial. His case will be called up again in a few days.

In the case of Jonathan Buckley vs. Provo City, argued and submitted yesterday, Judge King rendered his decision, overruling plaintiff's demurrer, to which plaintiff excepted.

The case of Salt Lake City et al vs. Jos. H. Coolidge et al next came up. J. G. Sutherland and F. S. Richards and S. D. Hogg represented plaintiffs, and David Evans, R. C. Edwards, A. Bassy and a number of other attorneys represented the defendants. The suit is the outcome of a number of suits brought by Utah county parties owning lands on the east shore of Utah Lake for large sums of damages claimed to accrue to the overflow from Utah Lake which had damaged the land on the bottom of the lake, alleged to be caused by canal dams. Salt Lake City has brought this suit in order to obtain a decision as to what is "high water mark," above which, under the contract existing between the canal companies and the land owners, plaintiffs are entitled to raise the water 20 inches.

The Astoria Distilling Co., of Kentucky, have commenced a suit against A. H. Ezell, of Goshen, to collect $225 to alleged to be due for liquor.

Notes and Personals.

Newton Crandall, aged 22 of Springville, and Agnes Jones, aged 21 of Spanish Fork, have received a license to wed.

H. T. Pettingill, manager of the Zigfriede Line Insurance Co., came down from Salt Lake on this morning.

Will McAllister, of Salt Lake City, is visiting Provo customers and dingies. Mr. McAllister is representing several eastern firms, dealers in stoves and sporting goods, and a night was seen.

There was a number of Salt Lake attorneys and witnesses from various parts of Salt Lake and Utah counties present in the First district court this morning, interested in the case of Salt Lake City et al vs. Joseph H. Coolidge et al.

Some of the butchers and grocery men are complaining because no pay has been collected from the Provo Woolen Mills company at dealer in groceries and meats. This morning, alone it appears paying cash to the employes month ago, has paid them groceries, meat and other provisions taken in exchange for the mill product, and consequently have done quite a business. The merchants cannot dare not consider the company close for a license, for the reason that the operatives are paid to the operatives in exchange for merchandise, the contention claim that not only the operatives but other citizens (by obtaining scrip from the hands) buy groceries and meat from the woolen mills. A complaint before the justice, for doing business without a license, is threatened to be lodged against the company.

Robbie in America.

He very visit to America was in 1872, and he was then rather far found himself for a time entirely under the control of his manager. This gained his erstwhile soul to the extent, that he threatened to quit part of without some sounding business.

After one of Rosecrantz, on America "working as if all America was to stop," paired him up the smaller pottemongy.

"Well, you are played well, Mr. Rabbinski, but why can't you play something for the world?"

"For the world" replied Rabbinski, "and I have played it, the world—for my soul, not for pour."

One thing he resented strongly. The people would persist in calling his cheers "cawes," as if his cawcus were swaggerin'!

Nevertheless, he found the Americans "a charming people, big-hearted, fat, and full of energy." Repeated efforts have been made to induce him to return, the last offer being the sum of $10,000 and all traveling expenses for Mrs. Robbie and himself for three months. But he feared his ocean voyage. "To look on the sea, that is delighting but to be on it, terrible! Even coming to England this time he found many cars, and I really cannot face the longer passage." But there were other causes. His country was no longer what it was, and he had already retired to "quiet meadows," as he put it. When Mr. Vert (Rose Hill Bright) first visited him, he was very anxious to know if Rosecrantz was coming to America. "I do not pay to pay more, and for my turn of money."—February issue of Strand.
