SOME OF THE SACRED TOMBS OF MUKDEN.

THE vast city of Mukden, around which so much that interests the world is taking place, is a busy and thriving commercial place, and cannot be regarded in any way as a military position. The rise of the Manchu power, when once it started, was so rapid that almost before Mukden, which as a city only dates back some 250 years, was built they found themselves rivals of Pekin. Mukden was, however, regarded as the home of the dynasty, and was regularly visited by the emperors in person until about 130 years ago.

Within the palace are kept the sacred archives of the dynasty, all ornaments and clothes worn by emperors, past and present, and many valuable relics and a great quantity of precious and most ancient chinaware and bronzes, all of which were guarded by the Bannerman, sealed up, and, in due course handed back to the Manchu governor-general. The ancient books, in beautiful wooden caskets, in the great library, of many of which there are no duplicates in existence, have largely decreased in number, but many still remain. The stories of treasure being stored in Mukden are, in all probability, entirely mythical.

Seven miles due east of Mukden are about 4,000 or 5,000 acres of beautiful parklike forest, with steep cliffs to the south, under which winds the Hun river. Near the center of this forest is the second Mukden tomb, the Fu Ling (Tomb of the Blessed) also called Tung Ling (Eastern Tomb) with buildings and arrangements similar to those at the Pei Ling, but a somewhat larger grave mound, beneath which rest the sacred remains of Nu-er-cha, father of Tai Tsung.

All the spirits had frequent and social intercourse with each other and with the sacred spirits of the Dragon Pool on the Long White Mountain, they travel underground along the ever-throbbing pulses of the Great Dragon. Hence the agony of the Mandarins when it was proposed that the Russian railway should cross over the road between the two tombs of Tai Tsung and Nu-er-cha. The railway eventually found a convenient little valley.

Not only are there the imperial tombs above referred to, but a vast number of those belonging to kinsmen of the Imperial family, chamberlains, and high mandarins are to be seen along the Dragon Hills for many miles. The dragon is opposed to fire, thus he especially detests steam engines, war, and gunpowder.—London Times.

Cures Chills and Fever.

G. W. Wyrt, Nacogdoches, Texas, says: "His daughter had chills and fever for three years; he could not find anything that would help her till he used Herbine. His wife will not keep house without it, and cannot say too much for it." 50c. Sold by Z. C. M. I. Drug Dept.

THE MARKETING OF "KING COTTON."

COTTON WAGONS on the PUBLIC SQUARE at MONTGOMERY, ALA.

The above is an excellent reproduction of daily scenes in almost every town in the south. The small and large planters are now busily engaged in bringing their product to market. The fact that many one-horse wagons, with a single bale of cotton, are to be seen shows that there are many small cotton planters.

MOTHER'S MISTAKES AND SOME GOOD "DON'TS"

A LIST of "don'ts" was given to the home and philanthropy department of the Ravenswood Woman's club in a meeting Monday afternoon at Wilson and Ashland avenues by Mrs. John McLauchlan, who spoke on "Mothers' Mistakes." The warnings follow:

Don't tell the children what you do not mean.

Don't wait on the children; make them wait on you.

Don't break a promise to your children.

Don't talk about your neighbors.

Don't scold at the table.

Don't hurt their self-respect by censuring them before others.

Don't overdress little children.

Don't give them too many presents before they are 10 years old; they are liable to an attack of ennui before they are 20.

"Six children can upset all the theories one ever dared to obtain," said Mrs. McLauchlan. "Humility comes with years of motherhood. We have too narrow a conception of what motherhood means. It is what we came into the world for.

"There is much mothering for mothers to do, and we often neglect that by loafing at prayer meetings and clubs. If we do not always tell the truth to our children we cannot punish them for deceiving us."

"A Mother's Duty to Her Children" was discussed by Mrs. John McCauliff. "Drudgery is a qualified blessing," she said.

"It is a question today whether the most time must be devoted to housework or homework. The latter lasts to eternity. The mother should attempt to fit herself to be the intellectual companion of her older children. The clubwoman makes the best parent.

"The morals of our children are often neglected. We notice a change for the worse in our children in the period from the third grade to the age of 10 years. Who is responsible? Do we care enough about the school teacher who has them under her daily charge? Do we know how they spend that restless half hour in Sunday school? And do we not let their moral training end there? We are too selfish in our motherhood."

Mrs. William Gibson in an address on "A Mother's Duty to Herself" took occasion to emphasize the unimportance of the father in the home.

"If he gets the ducats and keeps the burglars away we need not worry about his duties," she said. She gave three rules of conduct:

Don't try to be on too good terms with yourself.

Possession works both ways.

Endeavor to strike the true average between home and outside duties.
