The proposition of an intercollegiate literary contest is now being considered by the members of the Delta Phi fraternity. An unofficial letter from a student of the B. Y. Academy at Provo, suggested the matter to a University student, and as a result the Delta Phi appointed a committee at its last meeting to consider the question and make a report at the meeting next week. It consists of Elmer Beaverett, H. Claude Lewis, Joseph J. Cannon, George Q. Morris, and E. A. Taylor. There has never been a literary contest between the University and any of the other colleges, though one or two attempts have been made in past years to get one up. Now, however, judging from the enthusiasm of the committee appointed, it is probable that the proposed contest will be successful.

University students were pleased to learn that after the arrival of Prof. Mathews at Pasadena, California, he began immediately to recover his lost health. All who knew him look hopefully forward to his complete recovery and his return to the University next September.

The members of the class in political economy under Prof. Corey are doing outside readings on the question of the single tax, on which they will soon have a formal discussion. This makes the fourth question the class has studied for formal discussion this year.

Mr. Frank Kimball of the Church of Christ Scientists conducted chapel exercises during the past week. On Monday Mrs. Kimball spoke on prayer, taking the Lord's Prayer as a model, on Tuesday she spoke in general of character-building, of increasing the happiness of others, and the solidity of the vocation, teaching.

The athletic association is showing renewed vigor. Hereafter the executive committee will meet regularly every Monday.

The baseball boys have been provided with ball, glove and bat, and the students are looking with interest to see how strong the baseball spirit will be this year.

There is an interesting condition of affairs in one of the classes at the University. There is to be an election of officers soon and it is said that nearly all the girls favor a certain boy for president, while nearly all the boys are inclined to favor someone else.

"The Moon" is the subject of the regular University lecture for next Monday evening, to be given by Joseph K. Toronto, professor of mathematics. The lecture will be fully illustrated by stereopticon views and will give many interesting facts.

The fourth year normal class will give a public social next Friday evening in room 3 of the University. There will be dancing and refreshments.

The Zeta Gamma society will give a public meeting in the near future. Some public man will be asked to give an address which will be the main part of the program.

Prof. Marshall will repeat his lecture on Westminster Abbey under the auspices of the students' lecture course. This will give an opportunity for hearing the lecture to those unable to get into the hall last time. It will be given as soon as several more new stereopticon views come from the East.

L. D. S. SALT LAKE CITY BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Apostle Matthias F. Cowley visited the Book of Mormon class on Monday morning.

Professors Stife and Miller are both suffering from severe colds.

Mr. Elon J. Robinson, who has been a student at the college this year, left last night for a mission to the southwestern states.

The commercial law class, which is under the direction of Justice Stewart, sometimes another trial for the near future, continues having been filled with Justice Bachman this week. This time it is a breach of promise case. Much interest is being aroused in the trial, because of the prominence of the parties.

"What a lovely time we had at the college party!" and "What a charming success!" (this from the committee) are among the exclamations heard in the college halls this week.

Some new furniture has been added to that already in use in Principal Nelson's office—a chair and roller-top desk, with a chair to match.

The base ball team is now organized with Albert Margetts as captain and L. P. Midgley as business manager. The team will be ready soon to receive challenges from others in the city and State—no one excepted. The team consists of the following members:

Last week a number of conducive philosophs got together and organized a club, the purpose of which is to discuss topics of present local and general interest, and to inquire into the rules and principles of evidence. Judging from the character and ability of those who have already become members, some lively and interesting meetings may occur. On Monday next the first regular meeting will be held, at which the question of vaccination will be discussed.

Teacher—Mr. F—, please read your sentence illustrating the comma rule, "Words in pairs."

LATTER-DAY SAINTS' COLLEGE NOTES.

One of the saddest events of the current year was the death of one of the students, Miss Mame Chamberlin, which occurred last Saturday. During her college attendance, which has been seriously interrupted by illness, she endeared herself to teachers and students, by her sunny disposition and studious habits. Resolutions of sympathy were passed by teachers and students, and nearly all of them attended the funeral in a body. The young lady was a sister of Prof. Ralph V. Chamberlin, of the College faculty.

The resolution passed in the Salt Lake Stake conference last Monday, to the effect that the College would be maintained on a better basis than hitherto, is regarded as a good omen for the future of the institution. Already enthusiastic predictions are being made by students, as to the wide and useful field the school is destined to occupy. May the zeal of the people of the Stake be amply rewarded.

The last working session of the missionary class will be held next Monday afternoon, at 2:15 on Wednesday at the same hour, President Joseph F. Smith will speak to the class, giving general instruction on the duties of missionaries. An interesting hour is anticipated, and visitors are invited.

The College gratefully acknowledges the receipt of several copies of the proceedings of the first Sunday school convention, a gift from the Sunday School Union Board. The compilet will be studied with great interest.

The regular lecture of the Church history course was postponed last evening in the interest of the funeral of Apostle John Henry Smith.

GENERAL NOTES.

Considerable fear has arisen among some of the fairies in the city schools of the smallpox that has broken out at Fort Douglas. In order that the fairies might not mingle the city school authorities have prohibited all the children living at the fort from attending any of the public schools, and they will be strictly carried out. Most of the school children from the fort were attending the Wasatch school on south Fourth Temple street, but all have discontinued now.

Already since the adjournment of the Legislature, the anti-polygamy party has had more trouble because of the indebtedness of the present school law which the Legislature did not change.

BRIGHAM YOUNG (LOGAN) COLLEGE.

During the week chapel exercises were conducted by Prof. Linford, the discussion of the creeds of leading churches proved most instructive and interesting.

In the 3rd Pole society the other evening court was held in true legal style. One of the members was found guilty of illegal votes. The sentence was imposed and executed—the society enjoyed the pen-nute.

A number of the students have been called on missions recently.

The athletic association has placed an order for field goods.

Interest in the work of the gymnasium continues.

Secretary Dalton has put off his winter apparel and sported a lock of green—he shaved recently.

CAME BACK TO HIS JOB.

"Speaking of snow-slides in the mountains," said the colonel as he roused up to the occasion, "I never saw but one, and I had a close shave from that. I was boss of a pack train taking out silver ore and bringing back provisions, and on our return trips we had twenty-nine mules and four men. I was riding at the head of the procession and an old fellow named Andrews brought up the rear. At midday of a winter's day, as we plodded along the trail, I heard a crash and a rush and drew the mountain side came thousands of tons of snow. The slide cut off seven of the rear mules and old Andrews and I am sure they were carried a full mile down into the valley and buried fifteen feet deep. No one ever looked for poor carried away by a snow-slide. It was considered time wasted. I reported the loss of the mine and little or nothing was said about it. This was in January. About the last of May, as I was making a trip out, I suddenly came upon Andrews seated on a stone beside the trail. The sight of him took me by surprise, as you may guess, but I had scarcely come to a halt when he carelessly inquired:

"'Any chance to get into the pack-train, Jim?'

"'You—you are dead Andrews!' I said, as I stared at him.

"'Of course.'

"'And you were swept away by a slide at the head four months ago?'

"'Yes.'

"'But how is it you are alive?'

"'Why, it happened that way, I guess,' he replied as he rose up, 'and I'm ready to go to work again.'

"I tried on several occasions to draw him out," said the colonel, "but he didn't seem to think his adventure worth mining about. The last time referred to it I pressed him pretty hard, and, after uttering a great contempt at my curiosity, he replied:

"'I was buried under the snow, a course, and I had to wait for the snow to melt and free my mule most 'fit. I never want to taste it again, but what's the use,' Jim—hate the use of talkin' snow-slides in summer?'
